"They replied, 'We did overcome those we fought, Messenger of God, by uniting and not splitting up, and by never initiating any injustice with anyone.' 'You speak the truth,' he said and then appointed Qays b. al-Ḥusayn as their commander."

Ibn Ishāq went on, "They then returned to their people for the latter part of Shawwal or the early part of Dhu al-Qa'da. After their delegation had left, the Messenger of God (SAAS) dispatched 'Amr b. Ḥazm to give them instruction in the faith, to teach them the orthodox practice and the essential features of Islam, and to take from them their charitable donations. He wrote him a document specifying his charge and his orders to him."

Ibn Ishāq went on to quote this document. We gave it above in matters relating to the delegation of the kings of Ḥimyar, quoting from al-Bayhaqi. Al-Nasā'ī related this in a text similar to that of Muḥammad b. Ishāq, but without a chain of authorities.

THE DISPATCH BY THE MESSENGER OF GOD (SAAS) OF THE COMMANDERS TO THE PEOPLE OF YEMEN, INVITING THEM TO GOD, ALMIGHTY AND GLORIOUS IS HE, CAME PRIOR TO THE HIJJAT AL-WADA'.

Al-Bukhārī entitles a section "Chapter on the dispatch of Abū Mūsā and Mu'ādh to Yemen prior to the hijjat al-wadā."

He went on to state, "Mūsā related to us, quoting Abū 'Awāna, quoting 'Abd al-Malik, from Abū Burda, who said, 'The Prophet (SAAS) sent Abū Mūsā and Mu'ādh b. Jabal to Yemen. He dispatched each one of them to rule a province; Yemen has two provinces."
“He told them, “Be lenient, not harsh; encourage, rather than repress.” In one account the words he used were, “Co-operate with one another; do not conflict.”

“Each went off to do his work. They promised to visit and greet one another in their own territory and when close to that of the other. Mu‘adh was once travelling on his land near that of his colleague Abū Mūsā and rode further on his mule to meet the latter. He found Abū Mūsā seated, with his people all around him. There was a man there with him whose hands had been tied up to his neck. Mu‘adh asked Abū Mūsā, “Abd Allāh b. Qays, what’s this about?” He replied, “This is a man who apostatized after accepting Islam.” Mu‘adh told him, “Well, I’ll not dismount until he is killed!” Abū Mūsā assured him, “But that’s exactly why he was brought here. Do dismount.” Mu‘adh insisted, “I’ll not dismount until he is killed.” The order was given, and he was killed.

“Mu‘adh dismounted and asked, “Abd Allāh, how do you recite the Qurān?” He replied, “I do so at regular intervals and piece-by-piece. How do you, Mu‘adh?” Mu‘adh replied, “I sleep for the first part of the night, then get up, having slept for that portion I determined. Then I recite what God wrote for me I should. Thus I seek God’s reward for both my sleeping and my being up praying.”"

Al-Bukhārī is alone in giving this from this line; Muslim does not.

Al-Bukhārī went on to state that Iṣḥāq related to him, quoting Khalīd, from al-Shaybānī, from Sa‘d b. Abū Burdā, from his father, from Abū Mūsā al-‘Aṣhārī, who said that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) dispatched him to Yemen and asked him about the drinks made there. Abū Mūsā told him, “They make al-bītī and al-mīzr.”

The narrator then asked Abū Burdā, “What is al-bītī?” “It’s an alcoholic drink made from honey. And al-mīzr is an alcoholic drink made from barley,” he replied.

The Prophet (ṢAAS) said, “All intoxicants are prohibited.”

Jarrīr and ʿAbd al-Walīd related it, from al-Shaybānī, from Abū Burdā. Muslim related it from a ḥadīth of Sa‘d b. Abū Burdā.

Al-Bukhārī also stated that Ḥibbān related to him, quoting ʿAbd Allāh, from Zakariyyāb. Abū Iṣhāq, from Yahyā b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Ṣayfī, from Abū Ma‘bad, the freed-man of Ibn ʿAbbās, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said to Mu‘adh b. Jabal, when he dispatched him to Yemen, ‘You are going to people who have a scripture. When you reach them, invite them to testify that there is no god but God and that Muḥammad is the Messenger of God. If they obey you in that, then tell them that God has enjoined upon them five prayers each day and night. If they obey you in that, then tell them that God obligates them to make a charitable contribution that will be taken from their rich and be returned to their poor. If they obey you in that, then refrain from (taking as tax payment) their best properties; be fearful of the curse of the oppressed, for there is no barrier between them and God.’”

The rest of the community of scholars promulgated this from various lines of transmission.
Imām ʿAḥmad stated, “Abū al-Mughitr related to us, quoting Ṣafwān, quoting Rāshid b. Saʿd, from ʿAṣīm b. Ḥamīd al-Sakūnī, from Muʿādh b. Jabal, who said that when the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) dispatched him to Yemen, the latter went out to give him instructions, walking beside his mount as he rode. When he had finished, he said, ‘Muʿādh, you may well not meet me again, after this year; but perhaps you will pass by this mosque of mine, and my grave.’

“Muʿādh wept in humility at leaving the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).

“The Prophet (ṢAAS) then turned towards Medina and said, ‘Those persons who are foremost with me are the pious; whoever and wherever they may be.’”

Imām ʿAḥmad then related this from Abū al-Yamān, from Ṣafwān b. ʿAmr, from Rāshid b. Saʿd, from ʿAṣīm b. Ḥamīd al-Sakūnī. That account states that when Muʿādh was dispatched by the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) to Yemen, the latter went out to give him instructions, walking beside Muʿādh’s mount as he rode. When he had finished, he said, “Muʿādh, you may well not meet me again, after this year; but perhaps you will pass by this mosque of mine and my grave.”

Muʿādh wept in humility at leaving the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). The latter then said, “Muʿādh, don’t weep. There are occasions for weeping; weeping comes from Satan.”

Imām ʿAḥmad stated, “Abū al-Mughitr related to us, quoting Ṣafwān, quoting Abū Ziyād b. ʿUbayd Yalīya al-Ghassānī, from Yazīd b. Quṭayb, who said that Muʿādh used to say, ‘The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) sent me to Yemen and said, “You may well pass by my grave and my mosque. I have sent you to a people whose hearts are delicate; they will fight twice for the truth. You must fight along with those who obey you against those of them who disobey you. To the extent that wives will challenge their husbands, sons their fathers and brothers one another, they will be faithful to Islam. And so between the two sides you will create tranquillity and acquiescence.”’”

In this ḥadīth there is evidence and indication that Muʿādh, may God be pleased with him, would not thereafter meet with the Prophet (ṢAAS). That is indeed how it came out; Muʿādh remained in Yemen until the ḥijjat al-wadāʾ. And then, 81 days following the day of the major pilgrimage, came the death of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).

Then there is the ḥadīth given by Imām ʿAḥmad in which he stated, “Wakī related to us, from al-ʿAḥmash, from Abū ʿAzīz b. Ṭabīn, from Muʿādh, that when the latter returned from Yemen, he said, “Messenger of God, I have seen men in Yemen who bow down to one another. Should we not bow down to you?” He replied, “If I were to order any human being to bow down to any other, I would order women to do so to their husbands.”

ʿAḥmad related it from Ibn Numayr, from al-ʿAḥmash (who said), “I heard Abū ʿAzīz b. Ṭabīn relate from one of the ansār, from Muʿādh b. Jabal, who said, ‘Muʿādh arrived from Yemen and said, ‘Messenger of God, I have seen men . . . ’”” and he continued as above.
This hadith revolves around a man who is obscure; reference to such a person could not be used as evidence, especially as other reliable authorities contradict him, by saying, “When Mu‘adh arrived from Syria . . .”. Āḥmad related this.

Āḥmad stated that Ibrāhīm b. Mahdī related to him, quoting Iṣmā‘īl b. ʿAyāyah, from ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Abū Ḥusayn, from Shahr b. Ḥawshab, from Mu‘adh b. Jabal, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, ‘The keys to paradise are in bearing witness that there is no god but God.’”

Āḥmad stated, “Wāqī‘ related to us, quoting Sufyān, from Ḥabīb b. Abū Thābit, from Maymūn b. Abū Shabbīb, from Mu‘adh, (who said that) the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) told him, ‘Mu‘adh, respond to something bad by something good; that will erase it. Treat people with honourable conduct.’”

Waqī‘ stated, “I found it in my book from Abū Dharr, he being the first auditor. Sufyān on one occasion quoted this tradition from Mu‘adh.”

Imām Āḥmad then stated that Iṣmā‘īl related to him, from Layth, from Ḥabīb b. Abū Thābit, from Maymūn b. Abū Shabbīb, from Mu‘adh, who said, “Messenger of God, give me instructions.” He replied, “Fear God, wherever you may be.” “Tell me more,” he asked. He replied, “Respond to something bad by something good that will erase it.” “Tell me more,” he asked. “Treat people with honourable conduct,” he replied.

Al-Tirmidhī related it in his collection from Maḥmūd b. Ghaylān, from Wāqī‘, from Sufyān al-Thawrī and stated that it was ḥasan, “good”.

Āḥmad stated that Abū al-Yaman related to him, quoting Iṣmā‘īl b. ʿAyāyah, from Ṣafwān b. ʿAmr, from ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Jubayr b. Nufayr al-Ḥadrānī, from Mu‘adh b. Jabal, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) instructed me using ten phrases. He said, ‘Do not associate anything with God, even though you might be killed or burned. Do not disobey your parents, even though they tell you to give up your property or your family. Do not deliberately forego any prescribed prayer. Whoever deliberately forgoes a prescribed prayer loses God’s protection. Do not drink wine, for it is the cause of every vile deed. Beware of insubordination, for it incurs the wrath of God. Beware of flight from an advancing enemy, even if people are being destroyed. If death afflicts (your) people, you are of them, so stay firm. Expend upon your children from your assets and do not raise from them your staff in their upbringing. And inspire in them love of God, the Almighty and Glorious.’”

Imām Āḥmad stated, “Yūnūs related to us, quoting Baqīyya, from al-Sarrī b. Yanām, from Shurayḥ, from Maṣrūq, from Mu‘adh b. Jabal, (who said) that when the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) dispatched him to Yemen, he told him, ‘Beware of luxury; God’s servants do not seek after luxury.’”

Āḥmad stated that Sulaymān b. Dā‘ūd al-Ḥashimī related to him, quoting Abū Bakr – meaning Ibn ʿAyāyah – quoting ʿĀṣim, from Abū Wāṭil, from Mu‘adh, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) dispatched me to Yemen and ordered me to take one dinár or its equivalent in maṣāfir, ‘provisions’, from each adult; he told me to take one mature cow for each forty cattle and one camel for each thirty cattle per annum. He ordered me to take one-tenth of the produce of land watered by rain and one-twentieth of the produce of land watered by buckets.”

Abū Dā’ūd related this from a ḥadīth of Abū Mu‘āwiyah, and al-Nasā‘ī gave it from a ḥadīth of Muḥammad b. Ishāq from al-‘Awmash in similar form.

The ahl al-sunan related it from various lines of transmission, from al-‘Awmash, from Abū Wa‘il, from Masrūq, from Mu‘ādh.

Aḥmad stated, “Mu‘āwiyah related to me, from ‘Amr and from Hàrūn b. Ma‘rūf, both of whom stated, ‘Abd Allāh b. Wāb relates to us, from Ḥaywa, from Yazīd b. Abū Ḥabīb, from Sālama b. Usāma, from Ṭḥayyā b. al-Ḥakam (who said) that Mu‘ādh stated, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) dispatched me to receive charitable payments from the people of Yemen. He told me to take a tabī‘, ‘one camel’, for every thirty head of cattle.””” Hārūn explained, “The word tabī‘ means a young, mature camel, either male or female.” ““And for each forty head of cattle one musinna, ‘a mature cow’.”

“They proposed to me that I should take extra payment for between forty and fifty, between sixty and seventy, and between eighty and ninety. But I declined this, telling them, ‘I will ask the Messenger of God (SAAS) about that.’

“When I returned, I told the Prophet (SAAS) about this and he told me to take one camel for thirty cattle and for every forty head I should take one mature cow. For sixty I should take two camels. For seventy, one mature cow and one camel. For eighty, two mature cows. For ninety, I should take three camels. For one hundred, one mature cow and two camels. For one hundred and ten, two mature cows and one camel. For one hundred and twenty, I should take three mature cows and four camels.

“The Messenger of God (SAAS) ordered me not to take anything for intermediate figures; only if it amounted to a mature cow or a camel. He claimed that there was no tax on intermediate numbers.””

This is a ḥadīth that is unique to Aḥmad. This suggests that he came back after his trip to Yemen to the Messenger of God (SAAS). However, the fact is that he did not see the latter after that, as is stated earlier in a ḥadīth.

‘Abd al-Razzāq stated that Ma‘mar informed him, from al-Zuhri, from Ubayy b. Ka‘b b. Mālik, who said, “Mu‘ādh b. Jabal was a handsome and generous young man, one of the finest of his people. Anything ever asked of him he would give, so that eventually he had a debt that foreclosed all his money. He told this to the Messenger of God (SAAS), and asked him to speak to his creditors, and this he did. But they would not reduce his debt at all; and if anyone should ever have had a debt excused because of the plea of another, it should have been Mu‘ādh after the appeal made by the Messenger of God (SAAS).
“The Messenger of God (SAAS) summoned him and immediately Mu‘adh sold all his possessions and divided the proceeds between his creditors. Mu‘adh had nothing left.

“When the Messenger of God (SAAS) was going on the pilgrimage, he sent Mu‘adh to Yemen. And so Mu‘adh was the first to do business with that money.

“When he returned from Yemen to Abū Bakr, ‘the trusting’, the Messenger of God (SAAS) had died. ‘Umar came to him and said, ‘Will you obey me and pay this money over to Abū Bakr? If he gives it to you, you can then accept it.’

“Mu‘adh replied, ‘I’ll not give it to him! The Messenger of God (SAAS) sent me to Yemen to restore my fortune.’

“When Mu‘adh refused, ‘Umar went to Abū Bakr and said, ‘Send a message to this man and take it, then pay him.’

“Abū Bakr replied, ‘I’ll not do that; the Messenger of God (SAAS) only dispatched him to restore his fortune. I’ll not take anything from him.’

“Next morning, Mu‘adh went to ‘Umar and said, ‘I see no alternative to doing what you said. I saw myself yesterday in a dream’ — ‘Abd al-Razzāq thinks he said this — ‘being dragged to hell-fire; and you had hold of my waistband’!

“He then hurried off to Abū Bakr with everything he had brought; he even took him his whip and he swore he had kept nothing hidden from him. Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him, said, ‘It is yours; I will take none of it.’”

Abū Thawr related this, from Ma‘mar, from al-Zuhri, from ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. Khāb b. Malik. He related it as above, except for the words, “and in the year of the conquest of Mecca, the Messenger of God (SAAS) dispatched him as governor of a part of Yemen. Mu‘adh remained there until the death of the Messenger of God (SAAS). Then, in the caliphate of Abū Bakr, he returned and left again for Syria.”

Al-Bayhaqi stated, “We have affirmed earlier that the Messenger of God (SAAS) placed him in command of Mecca with ‘Attab b. Usayd to give its people instruction, and also that he was present on the expedition to Tabūk; it is most likely that the Messenger of God (SAAS) dispatched him to Yemen after that. But God knows best.”

Al-Bayhaqi then related the story of Mu‘adh’s dream, giving a line of transmission through al-A‘mash, from Abū Wā’il, from ‘Abd Allāh. In that account it is said that what Mu‘adh brought (from Yemen) included slaves, and that he took them to Abū Bakr. When the latter gave everything back to him, Mu‘adh took them back too. He then performed the prayer, and all the slaves prayed with him. When he was done, he asked them, “To whom did you pray?” “To God,” they replied. “Then you are all manumitted to Him.” And he did free them.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Muḥammad b. Ja‘far related to him, quoting Shu‘ba, from Abū ‘Awn, from al-Hārith b. ‘Amr b. Akhū al-Mughira b. Shu‘ba, from associates of Mu‘adh from the people of Ḥims, from Mu‘adh, who said that when the Messenger of God (SAAS) dispatched him to Yemen, he asked, “How will you act if a case is brought to you for judgement?” He replied, “I will make a judgement according to what is in God’s Book.”

“And what if the case is not in God’s Book?”

“Then in accord with the practice of the Messenger of God (SAAS),” he replied.

“And what if it is not covered in the practice of the Messenger of God (SAAS)?”

“I will ajtahidu, ‘strive hard’, and spare no effort.”

“The Messenger of God (SAAS) then struck me in the chest and said, ‘Praise be to God, who made fit for the envoy of the Messenger of God that which pleases the Messenger of God!’”

Ahmad related this from Waki’, from ‘Affan, from Shu‘ba, with his line of transmission and his phraseology.

Abū Da‘ūd and al-Tirmidhi gave it from a hadith of Shu‘ba. Al-Tirmidhi stated, “We know it only from this line of transmission and in my opinion his chain of authorities is not continuous.”

Ibn Maja related it from him by a different line, namely through Muḥammad b. Sa‘d b. Ḥassan – he having been crucified, as one of the liars – from ‘Ubāda b. Nust,66 from ‘Abd al-Raḥmān b. Ghanam, from Mu‘ādh, in similar words.

Imām Al-Ḥasan narrated from Muḥammad b. Ṣafār, and Yahyā b. Sa‘d, from Shu‘ba, from ‘Amr b. Abū Ḥakīm, from ‘Abd Allāh b. Burayda, from Yahyā b. Ma‘mar, from Abū al-Aswad al-Dīlī, who said, “While Mu‘ādh was in Yemen, the case was brought before him of a Jew who had died and left a brother who was a Muslim.

“Mu‘ādh stated, ‘I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say, ‘Islam brings increase, not loss.’ And he allowed him to inherit.’”

Abū Da‘ūd related it from a hadith of Ibn Burayda.

This ruling is narrated from Mu‘āwiyah b. Abū Sufyān, its narrator being Yahyā b. Mu‘āmmar al-Qadī and a group of early authorities. Ishāq b. Rāhawayh preferred that version.

The majority of scholars, however, including the four Imāms and their followers, oppose this group. They raise objections because of what is firmly established in the two sahih collections from Usāma b. Zayd, who stated, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) said, ‘An unbeliever may not inherit from a Muslim, nor a Muslim from an unbeliever.’”

What is shown here is that Mu‘ādh, may God be pleased with him, was a qādi, “a judge”, in Yemen acting on behalf of the Prophet (SAAS). He was a commander in the wars and one who distributed and received the charitable contributions, as the hadith of Ibn Ābās given above shows.

65. Use of ijtihad has, of course, been considered an essential function of jurists since the early days of Islam.

He would stand out in front of the people and perform the five prayers with them. As al-Bukhārī stated, “Sulayman b. Ḥarb related to us, quoting Shur‘a, from Ḥabīb b. Abū Thābit, from Sa‘īd b. Jubayr, from Āmr b. Maymūn, (who said) that when Mu‘ādh went to Yemen, he performed the al–ṣuhūr prayer with them and recited, “And God took Abraham as a companion . . .” (ṣūrat al-Nisā‘; IV, v.125). At that, one of the congregation said, “Abraham’s mother was really pleased!”

Al-Bukhārī was alone in giving this.

Chapter on the dispatch by the Messenger of God (SAAS) of Ālī b. Abū Ṭalīb and Khālid b. al-Walīd to Yemen, before ḥijjat al-wadā‘, ‘The Farewell Pilgrimage’.

Aḥmad b. Uthmān related to us, quoting Shurayh b. Maslama, quoting ʿIbrāhīm b. Yūsuf b. Abū Isḥāq, quoting his father, from Abū Isḥāq (who said), “I heard al-Bara‘ b. ʿAzīz say, ‘The Messenger of God (SAAS) sent us with Khalīd b. al-Walīd to Yemen. He later dispatched ʿĀlī to take his place. He told him, ‘Tell those of Khalīd’s men who wish to remain with you that they may; those who wish should return.’ I was among those who stayed with him. And I received a considerable number of awqīyya as booty.’”

Al-Bukhārī alone gives this with this line of transmission.

Al-Bukhārī went on to state that it was related to him by Muḥammad b. Bashshār, quoting Rawḥ b. ʿUbayd, quoting ʿĀlī b. Suwayd b. Manjūf, from ʿAbd Allāh b. Buraydā, from his father, who said, “The Prophet (SAAS) sent ʿĀlī to Khalīd b. al-Walīd to collect the khums, ‘the one-fifth booty payment’. I hated ʿĀlī. Next morning ʿĀlī took a bath. I asked Khalīd, ‘Won’t you just look at this!’”

“When we returned to the Prophet (SAAS), I related that situation to him, and he asked, ‘Buraydā, you really hate ʿAlī?’ ‘Yes, I do,’ I replied. He commented, ‘Well don’t hate him; he deserves more than that from the khums.’”

Al-Bukhārī alone gives this with this line; Muslim does not.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Yahyā b. Saʿīd related to him, quoting ʿAbd al-Jalīl, who said, “I was in a circle of people that included Abū Mīlaz and Buraydā’s two sons. ʿAbd Allāh b. Buraydā said, ‘My father Buraydā related to me as follows, ‘I used to hate ʿAlī more strongly than I had ever hated anyone. And there was one man of Quraysh whom I liked only because of his hatred for ʿAlī. “That man was sent out with the cavalry and I went with him, solely because of his hatred for ʿAlī. We took some prisoners. He then wrote to the Messenger of God (SAAS), saying, ‘Send someone to us who will divide the booty.’ He dispatched ‘Ali to us. Among the best of the captives was a black slave-girl.

‘“Ali took the booty, divided it up and came out. When he did so, his head was wet. I asked, ‘Abū al-Ḥasan, what’s this?’ He replied, ‘Didn’t you see that black slave-girl included with the captives? I made the division and she became part of the khums. Then she became part of the household of the Prophet (SAAS), and so one of ‘Ali’s family. And I had sex with her.’

‘“The man had a message to send to the Messenger of God (SAAS). So I said, ‘Dispatch me.’ And he did so, expressing his trust. (When in the presence of the Prophet (SAAS)), I began reading out the message, saying it was true. He (the Prophet) then took hold of my hand and the message and asked, ‘Do you hate ‘Ali?’ ‘Yes,’ I replied. ‘Don’t hate him,’ he asked. ‘Whatever love you have for him, make it stronger. I swear by Him Who holds the soul of Muḥammad in His hand, the share of the khums due the family of ‘Ali is better than one black slave-girl.’

‘“And following what the Messenger of God (SAAS) had said to me, there was no one I loved more than I did ‘Ali.”

‘‘Abd Allāh b. Burayda went on, “And I swear by the One and Only God, that the only narrator between myself and the Messenger of God (SAAS) was my father Burayda.’”

‘Abd al-Jalīl b. ‘Atiyya al-Faqīh Abī Saliḥ is alone in giving this. Ibn Ma‘īn and Ibn Ḥibbān both consider him reliable. However, al-Bukhārī stated, “Various charges, are, however, made against him.”

Muḥammad b. Isḥāq stated, “Abān b. Ṣāliḥ related to us, from ‘Abd Allāh b. Niyār al-Aslami, from his uncle ‘Amr b. Sha‘s al-Aslami, who had been present at al-Ḥudaybiyya, who said, ‘I was with ‘Ali b. Abū Ṭalib in the cavalry party the Messenger of God (SAAS) sent out to Yemen. ‘Ali was somewhat rude to me, and I resented his behaviour.

‘When I returned to Medina, I complained about him in various meetings and to people I met. One day when I went to the mosque, I found the Messenger of God (SAAS) sitting there. When he saw me look into his eyes, he stared straight back at me until I sat down near him. He then said, “I swear, ‘Amr b. Sha‘s, you have done me harm!”

‘“But we all belong to God and to Him do we return!” I exclaimed. “I take refuge in God and in Islam against ever harming the Messenger of God (SAAS)” He commented, “Whoever harms ‘Ali harms me!”’”

Al-Bayhaqī related this from a different line, from Ibn Isḥāq, from Abān b. al- Faḍl b. Ma‘qīl b. Sinān, from ‘Abd Allāh b. Niyār, from his uncle ‘Amr b. Sha‘s. That account is similar.

The ḥāfiz al-Bayhaqī stated that Muḥammad b. ‘Abd Allāh al-Ḥāfiz informed him, quoting Abū Isḥāq al-Muzakki, relating from ‘Ubayda b. Abū al-Safr who 68. That is, the unnamed leader of Burayda’s party.

said, "I heard Ibrāhīm b. Yūsuf b. Abū Ishāq state, from his father, from Abū Ishāq, from al-Barā' (who said) that, 'The Messenger of God (SAAS) dispatched Khālid b. al-Walid to invite the people of Yemen into Islam.'"

Al-Barā' went on, "I was among those who accompanied Khālid b. al-Walid. We stayed there six months inviting them into Islam, but they did not respond well to him. The Messenger of God (SAAS) then sent ʿAlī b. Abū Ṭālib with orders to replace Khālid; those with Khālid who wanted to stay there with ʿAlī could do so.

"I was one of those who stayed with ʿAlī. When we approached the people there, they came out to us. We advanced and ʿAlī led us in prayer. He later positioned us in one line and went out ahead of us and read to them the message from the Messenger of God (SAAS). At that all (Bānī) Hamdān accepted Islam.

ʿAlī then wrote a message to the Messenger of God (SAAS), telling of their acceptance of Islam. When he read the message, he prostrated in prayer, then raised his head and said, 'Peace be upon (Bānī) Hamdān! Peace be upon Hamdān!'"

Al-Bayhaqī stated, "Al-Bukhārī related this in an abbreviated form, from a different line, from Ibrāhīm b. Yūsuf."

"I was one of those who accompanied him. When he had taken some camels as ṣadqa, 'charitable payments', we asked him if we could ride them and rest our own, which we could see were tiring. He refused us, saying, 'You have only a share in them, just like all Muslims.'

"When ʿAlī had finished his mission and left Yemen to return home, he appointed a certain person in command of us. He himself then hurried off and joined in the pilgrimage. When he had completed his pilgrimage, the Prophet (SAAS) told him, 'Go back and rejoin your men.'

"In the meantime we had made to the commander ʿAlī had appointed over us the same request he had denied, and this man had agreed. When ʿAlī learned that the camels taken as ṣadqa payment had been ridden, and saw how this had tired them, he summoned his deputy and berated him.

"(I told myself) 'I swear by God, when I reach Medina, I'll certainly make a report to him (the Prophet (SAAS)), and tell him how rudely and harshly we have been treated! After our arrival in Medina, I went to him early one morning intending to fulfil my oath. I met Abū Bakr coming out from having been with the Messenger of God (SAAS), and when he saw me he stopped and welcomed me, asking me various questions, as I did him. He asked, 'When did you arrive?'"
'I got here yesterday,' I replied. He then went back with me to the Messenger of God (SAAS). He went inside and said, ‘Sa‘d b. Malik b. al-Shahid is here.’ ‘Invite him in,’ he told him.

“So I entered and greeted the Messenger of God (SAAS), as he did me. He came over to me and asked me various questions about myself and my family, and did so very kindly. I told him, ‘Messenger of God, we suffered greatly from the ill-conduct and harsh treatment of ‘Ali.’

“He hesitated and I began enumerating the problems we had had with him and right in the middle of my comments he slapped me on the thigh; I was right next to him. He said, ‘Sa‘d b. Malik b. al-Shahid, tone down what you are saying about your brother ‘Ali! I swear by God, I well know how tough he is in God’s cause!’ I told myself, ‘Sa‘d b. Malik, your mother is as good as bereaved of you! I’m sure to be in his bad books, no matter what! And I’ll surely never make a negative reference to him again, confidentially or openly!’”

The chain of transmission for this is good and accords with the criteria of al-Nasa’i; but none of the authors of the six major collections (of traditions) relate it.

Yunus quoted from Muhammad b. Ishq as follows, “Ya’ya b. ‘Abd Allah b. Abū Umar related to me, from Yazid b. Ṭalha b. Yazid b. Rukana, who said, ‘The army who were with ‘Ali in Yemen became upset that, having made their advance, he then put a deputy in command of them and hurried away to join the Messenger of God (SAAS).

“This deputy went ahead and dressed every man in a ceremonial robe. When they were on their way to him, ‘Ali came out to receive them and found them wearing their robes. He asked, ‘What’s all this then?’ They replied, ‘So-and-so dressed us in them.’ He asked, ‘What made you do this before coming to the Messenger of God (SAAS), instead of letting him do as he wished?’ And he took away their robes.

“When they reached the Messenger of God (SAAS), they complained to him about that. These men had previously made a pact of peace with the Messenger of God (SAAS), and he had only sent ‘Ali to collect the jizya, ‘poll-tax’, imposed upon them.”

I note that this text is close to that of al-Bayhaqi. Namely, that ‘Ali went on ahead of them because of the pilgrimage, taking a hadi, with him and having assumed the state of ihram for the pilgrimage, with the same intention as the Prophet (SAAS). The latter ordered ‘Ali to maintain the state of ihram. In an account of al-Bara’ b. ‘AZib, he (‘Ali?) told him, ‘I brought a hadi and assumed the girān state for the ḥajj.’

69. An animal — a goat, sheep or, more usually, a camel — brought on the pilgrimage for sacrifice.
70. The Muslim pilgrim is at liberty to assume a variety of states for the ḥajj, one of which is al-girān. For further information see the Glossary and the Encyclopedia of Islam.
What is implied here is that when there arose the controversy about that army, due to 'Ali's having prevented them putting the sadāqa camels to work and then his having withdrawn from them the permission granted by his deputy. Even though 'Ali could be excused for his actions, talk arose among the pilgrims about him. Therefore, though God knows best, the Messenger of God (SAAS), having completed the pilgrimage and its associated ceremonials, returned to Medina. Passing the stream at Khumm, he arose among the people and made an address. He acquitted 'Ali of wrongdoing, emphasized his importance and his virtues to remove the negative impression of him held by many. A detailed account of this will follow, in its appropriate place, if God so wills it. And in Him is all trust.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Qutayba related to him, quoting 'Abd al-Wahid, from 'Umāra b. al-Qa'qa' b. Shabrama, who quoted 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Abū Nu'm as having said that he heard Abū Sa'īd al-Khudrī say, "'Ali b. Abū Talib sent from Yemen to the Prophet (SAAS), in a leather bag a chunk of gold not yet refined from its ore."

"He (the Prophet (SAAS)), divided it up between four persons: 'Uyayna b. Badr, al-Aqra' b. Ḥabīs and Zayd al-Khayl. The fourth was either 'Alqama b. Ulatha or 'Amir b. al-Tufayl."

"One of his men said, 'But we had more right to it than they!' That remark reached the Prophet (SAAS), and he said, 'Don't you trust me! Even though I am the one trusted by the One in heaven, who delivers me news of heaven, morning and evening?'"

"Thereupon a man arose who had sunken eyes, prominent cheekbones, a high forehead, thick beard, shaved head and who was wearing his waist-wraper tucked up. He said, 'Messenger of God, fear God!' He responded, 'Confound you, am I not the most God-fearing man of all?' The man then walked away.

"Khalid b. al-Walid then asked, 'Messenger of God, should I not behead him?' 'No,' he replied, 'he may well be one who prays.'" 'Ali commented, 'But there are many who pray, yet speak with their tongues what is not in their hearts.' The Messenger of God (SAAS) responded, 'I have not been commanded to search the hearts of people, nor to cut open their stomachs.'

"He stared after the man as he walked away, and said, 'From the progeny of this man there will go out people who will recite the Book of God eloquently, but it will not pass beyond their throats. They will exit the faith like an arrow exiting from its target.' I think he also said, 'If I were alive at their time, I would execute them just as Thamūd were killed.'"

Al-Bukhārī related this in various other places of his work. Muslim relates it in the section on zakāt, "charitable payments", of his sahih collection, along several lines of transmission from 'Umāra b. al-Qa'qa'.

71. The comment implies that he is, outwardly at least, a Muslim.
Imam Ahmad stated that Yahyā related to him, from al-A’mash, from ‘Amr b. Murra, from Abū al-Bakhtari, from ‘Ali, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS), dispatched me to Yemen while I was still young.

“I said, ‘You are dispatching me to a people among whom there will be cases (to decide), but I have no knowledge of making judgement.’ He replied, ‘God will guide your tongue and make your heart firm.’

“And I never had any doubts about judging between any two.”

Ibn Māja related it from a hadith of al-A’mash.

Imam Ahmad stated that Aswad b. ‘Amir related to him, quoting Sharīk, from Simāk, from Ḥanash, from ‘Ali, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) dispatched me to Yemen. I asked, ‘Messenger of God, are you sending me out to people older than myself; I’m still young, and I have no knowledge of reaching judgement.’

“He then placed his hand on my chest and said, ‘0 God, make his tongue firm and guide his heart. ‘Ali, if you should have two rivals sit down with you, do not judge between them until you hear from the other what you heard from the first; if you act this way, it will be clear to you.’

“And since then I never had doubts about any case.” Or the words used were, “And since then I never found any case difficult.”

Al-Tirmidhī gave it from a hadith of Za’ida. Both quoted from Simāk b. Ḥarb, from Ḥanash b. al-Mu’tamir, said to be the son of Rabī‘a al-Kinānī al-Kufī, from ‘Ali.

Imām Ahmad stated that Sufyān b. ‘Uyayna related to him, from al-Ajlāḥ, from al-Sha’bī, from ‘Abd Allāh b. Abū al-Khalīl, from Zayd b. Arqam, who said that several people had intercourse with a woman in the same period. ‘Ali asked two of them, “Do you find this appropriate?” “No,” they replied. ‘Ali then approached the others and asked, “Do you find this appropriate?” They both replied, “No.” He then said, “You are quarrelsome partners.”

He went on, “I will cast lots between you. Whichever of you has his opponent win will receive two-thirds of the blood-wit, and I will award the child to him.”

“This decision was reported to the Prophet (SAAS), who said, ‘I know no more than what ‘Ali said.’”

Al-Tirmidhī also stated that Shurayh b. al-Nu‘mān related to him, quoting Hushaym, quoting al-Ajlāḥ, from al-Sha’bī, from Abū al-Khalīl, from Zayd b. Arqam (who said) that before ‘Ali, while he was in Yemen, three men were brought who had shared (in the conception of) a child. He drew lots between them and awarded to the one to whom the arrow pointed two-thirds of the diyya, and awarded the child to him.

Zayd b. Arqam stated that he went to the Prophet (SAAS), and informed him of ‘Ali’s decision, and that he laughed so loudly that his molars were visible.

Abū Dā‘ūd related this from Musaddad, from Yahyā al-Qaṭṭān, as did al-Nasā’ī, from ‘Ali b. Ḥujr, from ‘Ali b. Mushir. Both these scholars give their line of transmission from al-Ajalh b. 'Abd Allâh, from Âmir al-Sha'bî, from 'Abd Allâh b. al-Khalîl.

Al-Nasâ'î, in his account from 'Abd Allâh b. Abû al-Khalîl, quotes Zayd b. Arqam as stating, “I was with the Messenger of God (SAAS), when a man from Yemen arrived and said, ‘Three men went to 'Ail in dispute over a child with whose mother they had each had intercourse in one period.’ He went on to relate as above and concluded, ‘And the Prophet (SAAS) laughed.’”

Both scholars – Abû Dâ‘ûd and al-Nasâ’î, that is – also related it from a hadith of Shu‘ba, from Salama b. Kuhayl, from al-Sha'bî, from Abû Khalîl or Ibn al-Khalîl, from 'Ali’s words. The source gave an incomplete or improperly transcribed line of transmission.

Our teacher stated in his work al-Aṭrûf, “This ‘Abd Khayr may well be 'Abd Allâh b. al-Khalîl; however, the narrator did not fully specify his name.”

I note that if this identification is correct, it strengthens the hadith, even though other (narrators) are better because they follow him. However, the al-Ajalh b. 'Abd Allâh al-Kindî in the chain is the subject of some dispute.

Imâm Âhind accepts the use of casting lots to establish parenthood; this ruling is one of few in which he is alone.

Imâm Âhind stated that Abû Sa‘îd related to him, quoting Isrâ‘îl, quoting Simâk, from Hânash, from ‘Ali, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) sent me to Yemen and we went out to a group of people who had dug a pit to trap lions. While they were actively engaged in doing this, one man fell in and grabbed hold of another man. The second took hold of another, and so on until there were four men in the pit. The lion wounded them all. Then a man rushed at it with a lance and killed it. But all the wounded died from their injuries.

“The heirs of the first man approached those of the second, who took up arms to do battle with them. ‘Ali arrived thereafter and asked, ‘Do you really want to fight one another even while the Messenger of God (SAAS) is still alive! I will judge between you. If you accept my decision, then so be it. Otherwise, keep away from one another until you go to the Prophet (SAAS), and then he can be the one to judge between you. Anyone who commits aggression after that will have no rights.

‘Gather from the tribes who had dug the pit camels equivalent to one-quarter, one-third, one-half and one whole diyya.” To the first victim he awarded one-quarter of a diyya, since he had died, one-third of a diyya to the second, one-half of a diyya to the third and a full diyya to the fourth.

"They refused to accept this judgement and went to the Prophet (SAA'S), while he was at the maqām Ibrāhīm, 'Abraham's station' at the ka'bā, and told him the story. He said, 'I will judge between you.' One man then said, 'Messenger of God, 'Alī has already reached judgement for us.' They recounted this to him and the Messenger of God (SAA'S) accepted it."

Imām Āḥmad went on to relate this also from Wākī', from Ḥammād b. Salama, from Simāk b. Ḥarb, from Ḥanāsh, from 'Alī.

BOOK ON THE ḤIJJAT AL-WADĀ’,
‘THE FAREWELL PILGRIMAGE’, IN 10 AH.

It is also known as the ḥijjat al-balāgh, “the message pilgrimage”.

It is known as “the farewell pilgrimage” because during it the Prophet (SAA’S), said goodbye to the people and performed no pilgrimage after it. It is also named ḥijjat al-Īlām, “the Islam pilgrimage”, because the Prophet (SAA’S) left on no other occasion from Medina to make the pilgrimage, though he had performed pilgrimages a number of times before the prophethood and thereafter.

It is said that the obligation to make the pilgrimage was revealed that year; it is also said that this was in 9 AH, or in 6 AH, or even before the Hijra, though this last is unlikely.

It is called ḥijjat al-balāgh, “the message pilgrimage” because in it the Messenger of God (SAA’S) gave, both in word and deed, the message to the people concerning God’s laws for the pilgrimage. All the bases and fundamentals of Islam, without exception, were made clear by the Prophet (SAA’S). When he explained and laid out for them the prescribed law for the pilgrimage, God revealed to him as he stood there at Mt. ʿArafāt, “Today I have perfected your faith for you, fulfilled my grace upon you and favoured you with Islam as a religion” (ṣūrāt al-Māʾīdā; V, v.3).

Clarification of all this will follow.

The purpose here is to relate the manner of the pilgrimage of the Messenger of God (SAA’S). The early transmitters differ considerably in this, depending upon the information they each received; this is especially true of those sources who lived after the Companions of the Prophet, may God be pleased with them.

We, thanks be to God and through His help and the success He grants, will relate those accounts given by the Imāms in their works; we will co-ordinate them in such a manner as to please and instruct those who contemplate them, while interpreting the various accounts, if God so wills it, and in Him is all trust and reliance.
The community and the scholastic authorities, both early and later, have demonstrated very great interest in the pilgrimage of the Messenger of God (SAAS).

The scholar Abū Muhammad b. Ḥazm al-Andalūsī, may God have mercy upon him, devoted a complete volume to the “farewell pilgrimage”. While most of this is excellently done, he did fall into certain mistakes, and we will clarify these in the appropriate places. And in God help is to be sought.

Chapter: Information on the fact that the Prophet (SAAS), made only one full pilgrimage from Medina, having previously departed for three ‘umra, ‘lesser’, pilgrimages.

This is as both al-Bukhārī and Muslim related from Hudba, from Hammām, from Qatāāda, from Anas, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) made four ‘umra pilgrimages, all in Dhū al-Qa‘da, except for the one that was during his performance of his (major) pilgrimage.”

Yūnus b. Bukayr related this from ʿUmar b. Dharr, from Mujāhid, from Abū Hurayra to the same effect.

Saʿd b. Maṣūṭ stated, from al-Dārāwardi, from Hishām b. ʿUrwa, from his father, from ʿĀṣaḥa, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) made three ‘umra pilgrimages: one in shawwal and three in Dhū al-qa‘da.”

Ibn Bukayr related similarly from Mālik, from Hishām b. ʿUrwa.

Imām Aḥmad narrated from a ḥadīth of ʿAmr b. Shuʿayb, from his father, from his grandfather, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) made three ‘umra pilgrimages, all in Dhū al-qa‘da.

Aḥmad stated that Abū al-Nāḍr related to him, quoting Dāʾūd – meaning al-ʿAṭṭār – from ʿAmr, from Ikrima, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) made four ‘umra pilgrimages: that of al-Ḥudaybiyya, the ‘umrat al-qaṣiṣās, that from al-Ǧīrāna, and that coincident with his (major) pilgrimage.”

Abū Dāʾūd, al-Tirmidhi and al-Nasāʿī related this from a ḥadīth of Dāʾūd al-ʿAṭṭār, and al-Tirmidhi characterized it as hasan, “good”.

This issue is examined above relative to the ‘umra from al-Ǧīrāna.73 It will also be examined in the section on those who stated that the Prophet (SAAS) made the qirān pilgrimage simultaneously. And help is to be sought from God.

The first ‘umra was that of al-Ḥudaybiyya from which he was blocked. Thereafter came the ‘umrat al-qaṣiṣās, “the retaliation pilgrimage”, and still others the ‘umrat al-qaṣiṣās, “the cause pilgrimage”. Thereafter came the ‘umra from al-Ǧīrāna, on his return from al-Ṭāʾif, when he divided up the spoils from the battle of Ḥunayn. We have examined all this in the appropriate places above. The fourth was the ‘umra he performed along with his major pilgrimage.

We will examine the disagreements between some over his making an 'umra with this pilgrimage – whether it was mutamatti'an, wherein he performed the 'umra prior to the hajj, or was prevented from being discharged (from the ihram) by his having brought along a sacrificial animal, or whether this 'umra was as a qarin, that is performed simultaneously with his major pilgrimage. We will similarly relate those aḥādīth that suggest this, as well as those that say it was performed mufridan, that is separate from the major pilgrimage, where he engaged in it after having completed the latter. This is what is maintained by those who consider the 'umra as ifrād, that is as a specifically separate pilgrimage, a view widely known to be associated with al-Shāfi‘ī.

This will be clarified when we discuss the ihram, the ritual consecration of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and whether it was mufridan, mutamatti'an or muqārin.

Al-Bukhārī stated that ʿAmr b. Khālid related to him, quoting Zuhayr, quoting Abū Ishāq, who quoted Zayd b. Arqam, who said that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) went out on nineteen military expeditions and that he performed one full pilgrimage after his Hijra.

Abū Ishāq said, “And there was another, at Mecca.”

Muslim related this from a ḥadīth of Zuhayr and they both promulgated it from a ḥadīth of Shu‘ba. Al-Bukhārī and Isrā‘īl added a third source, from Abū Ishāq ʿAmr b. ʿAbd Allāh al-Sabī‘ī, from Zayd.

Regarding the comment of Abū Ishāq to the effect that the Prophet (ṢAAS) performed another pilgrimage while at Mecca, if what he implies is that he only performed one pilgrimage there, as is the apparent meaning of his statement, then he is far from correct.

The Prophet (ṢAAS), after the declaration of his mission, would attend the pilgrimage ceremonies and invite people to God, asking for assistance in announcing the words of his Lord, since Quraysh had prevented him from doing so. This went on until God led to him the community of the ansār who met with him on the night of al-ʿAqaba, that is the evening of the animal sacrifice at the meeting at al-ʿAqaba, for three successive years. Eventually, in the final year, they pledged allegiance to him, on the second night at al-ʿAqaba of their third meeting with him. Thereafter came the Hijra to Medina. We have detailed all this in its appropriate place. And God knows best.

In the ḥadīth of Jaʿfar b. Muḥammad b. ʿAlī b. al-Ḥusayn, from his father, Jabir b. ʿAbd Allāh is quoted as having said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) remained in Medina for nine years without making a pilgrimage. He then made an announcement to the people that there would be a pilgrimage. A large number of people gathered in Medina, and the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) went forth four or five days before the end of Dhū al-Qa‘da. When he was at

74. The hajj al-tamattuʿ is when the pilgrim does not bring an animal for sacrifice, and assumes the ihram state only for the 'umra. Thereafter, to perform the hajj proper, the pilgrim re-establishes the ihram state and is required to slaughter a hādi.
Dhū al-Ḥulayfa he performed the prayers. He then mounted his camel and it stood up with him. When it moved off with him into the desert, he called out labbayka! “I am at Your service!” At this we recited the al-talbiyya, thinking only of the pilgrimage.”

This ḥadīth will be given in full. It is in the ṣaḥīḥ collection of Muslim; the above is the phraseology given by al-Bayhaqi, from a line through Ahmad b. Ḥanbal, from Ibrāhim b. Ṭahmān, from Jaʿfar b. Muḥammad.

Chapter: On the date of the departure of the Prophet (SAAS), from Medina

This followed his appointment of Abū Dujāna Simāk b. Kharsa al-Saʿīdī in command of Medina. Others give the name of Sībāʾ b. Urfūṭa al-Ghifārī, both names being given by ʿAbd al-Malik b. Hishām.

Muḥammad b. Ishaq stated, “When Dhū al-Qaʿda of 10 AH arrived, the Messenger of God (SAAS) made preparations to leave on the pilgrimage, and ordered his people to do so too.

“ʿAbd al-Raḍān b. al-Qisim related to me, from his father al-Qasim b. Muḥammad, from ʿAʾisha, wife of the Prophet (SAAS), who said, ‘The Messenger of God (SAAS) left on the pilgrimage five days before the end of Dhū al-Qaʿda.’”

This line of transmission is excellent.

Imām Ṭalḥa related this in his work al-Muwaṭṭa from Yahyā b. Saʿīd al-Anṣārī, from ʿAmra, from ʿAʾisha. Imām Ahmad related it from ʿAbd Allāh b. Numayr, from Yahyā b. Saʿīd al-Anṣārī, from ʿAmra.

It is firmly established in both ṣaḥīḥ collections, in the sunan of al-Nasāʿī and Ibn Māja and the muṣannaf of Ibn Abī Shayba, from various lines of transmission, from Yahyā b. Saʿīd al-Anṣārī, from ʿAmra, from ʿAʾisha, who said, “We left with the Messenger of God (SAAS), five days before the end of Dhū al-Qaʿda, intent solely on making the ḥajj.” This ḥadīth will be given in full hereafter.

75. The word used is al-bayḍāʾ, “desert”. However, some interpret this word in this context to refer to a place by that same name; see page 153 et seq.

76. The word used is the verb ahuℓla. It means in this context to recite the following, which is known as the al-talbiyya:

*Labbayka Allāhumma labbayka
Labbayka lā sharika laka labbayka
Inna al-ḥamda wa-nn iris laika wa al-mulk
Lā sharika laka*

This translates as:

I am at Your service, O God,
I am at Your service.
I am at Your service; You have no associate; I am at your service.
Praise and blessings are Yours. And all power is Yours.
And You have no associate.
Al-Bukhārī stated that Muḥammad b. Abū Bakr al-Muqaddamī related to him, quoting Fudayl b. Sulaymān, quoting Mūsā b. Uqba, quoting Kurayb, from Ibn ‘Abbās, who said, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) started out from Medina after he had dressed and oiled his hair, put on his izār, his loose waist-wrapper, and his rida’, his loose upper wrapper. He forbad only the wearing of such garments that had been stained with saffron that might scent the skin. Arising in the morning at Dhū al-Ḥulayfā, he mounted his camel and rode on till he reached al-Bayḍā’. He reached Mecca five days after the commencement of Dhū al-Ḥijja.”

Al-Bukhārī(6,7),(990,993) is alone in giving this.

Regarding the statement that the departure was five days before the end of Dhū al-Qa‘da, if he is referring to being at Dhū al-Ḥulayfā in the morning, then Ibn Ḥazm is correct in claiming that the Prophet (ṢAAS) left Medina on Thursday and spent the night of Friday at Dhū al-Ḥulayfā. Thus he would have been there in the morning of Friday, that being the 25th of Dhū al-Qa‘da.

If Ibn ‘Abbās means by his reference to the departure of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), as having been on the fifth day of Dhū al-Qa‘da, following his having dressed and oiled his hair and put on his upper and lower pilgrimage garb, as ‘A’isha and Jābir stated, and that they left from Medina five days prior to the end of Dhū al-Qa‘da, then Ibn Ḥazm’s statement is improbable and unacceptable and should be replaced by another. That would be applicable only to Friday, if the month of Dhū al-Qa‘da were complete.

It is not possible for the departure to have been on Friday, according to what al-Bukhārī related, as follows, “Mūsā b. Ismā‘īl related to us, quoting Wahayb, quoting ‘Ayyūb, from Abū Qālābā, from Anas b. Mālik, who said, ‘While we were with him, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) performed the al-ṣuḥr prayer of four raka‘āt in Medina, and the al-ṣa‘r prayer of two raka‘āt at Dhū al-Ḥulayfā. He then spent the night there and next morning mounted his camel and rode it away to al-Bayḍā’, gave praise to God, Almighty and Glorious is He, invoked His greatness and then spoke the talbiyya for the pilgrimage and an ‘umra.”

Both Muslim and al-Nāsā‘ī related this, from Qutayba, from Ḥammād b. Zayd, from ‘Ayūb, from Abū Qilābā, from Anas b. Mālik, who stated that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) performed the al-ṣuḥr prayer, with four raka‘āt at Medina and the al-ṣa‘r prayer, with two raka‘āt at Dhū al-Ḥulayfā.

‘Alī stated that ʿAbd al-Raḥmān related to him, from Sufyān, from Muḥammad – meaning Ibn al-Munkadīr – and Ibrāhīm b. Maysara, from Anas b. Mālik, who said that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) performed the al-ṣuḥr prayer, with four raka‘āt at Medina and the al-ṣa‘r prayer at Dhū al-Ḥulayfā with two.

Al-Bukhārī related it from Abū Nu‘aym, from Sufyān – he being al-Thawrī – and Muslim, Abū Da‘ūd and al-Nasā‘ī promulgated it from a ḥadīth of Sufyān b. ʿUyayna, from Muḥammad b. al-Munkadīr and Ibrāhīm b. Maysara, from Anas.

‘Alī stated that Muḥammad b. Bukayr related to him, quoting Ibn Jurayj, from Muḥammad b. al-Munkadīr, from Anas, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) performed with us the al-zuhr prayer, with four prostrations in Medina and the al-‘asr prayer, with two prostrations, at Dhu al-Ḥulayfa. He then spent that night at Dḥū al-Ḥulayfa until morning. When he mounted his camel and it stood up, he recited the talbiyya.

Āḥmad stated that Ya’qūb related to him, quoting his father, from Muḥammad b. Iṣḥāq, quoting Muḥammad b. al-Munkadīr al-Taymī, from Anas b. Malik, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) performed with us in his mosque in Medina the al-zuhr prayer with four. He then performed with us the al-‘asr prayer at Dḥū al-Ḥulayfa with two – in safety and having no fear – about the ḥijjat al-wadā‘.”

Āḥmad was alone in giving this from these two lines of transmission; both accord with the criteria established for a ḥadith being considered ṣaḥīḥ.

This absolutely precludes the departure of the Messenger of God (SAAS), having occurred on the Friday.

Nevertheless, it is not possible for his departure to have taken place on Thursday, as Ibn Ḥazm stated, because that day would have been the 24th of Dḥū al-Qa‘da. For there is no dispute over the first day of Dḥū al-Ḥijja having been a Thursday, because of what is established both by sequencing and by consensus, that the Prophet (SAAS) stood upon Mt. ‘Arafāt on Friday, that being unquestionably the 9th of Dḥū al-Ḥijja.

If his departure had been on Thursday, the 24th of Dḥū al-Qa‘da, then there would definitely have remained six days of that month, Friday, Saturday, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. These total six days.

Ibn ʿAbbās, ʿAḥīsa and Jābir all stated that he left with five days remaining of Dḥū al-Qa‘da. And it is impossible for that to have been Friday, according to the ḥadith of Anas. Therefore, it is clear that the Messenger of God (SAAS) left Medina on Saturday and that the narrator thought that the month was of complete length.⁷⁷ It so happened, however, that that year it was shorter, the Wednesday having been dropped and Dḥū al-Ḥijja having begun on the night of Thursday. This is substantiated by what is given in Jābir’s narration – that the departure was five or four days before the end (of Dḥū al-Qa‘da).

This determination made by this calculation is unavoidable and incontrovertible. But God knows best.

Chapter: A description of the departure of the Messenger of God (SAAS), from Medina to Mecca for the pilgrimage.

Al-Bukhārī stated that it was related to him by Ibrāhīm b. al-Mundhir, quoting Anas b. Ḥyād, from ʿUbayd Allāh – he being Ibn ʿUmar – from Nāfiʿ, from ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar (who said) that the Messenger of God (SAAS) would leave down Shajāra Street and enter by al-Muʿarras Street. And that whenever he left for ⁷⁷. That is, of 30 days.

Mecca, he would pray at the al-Shajara mosque and on his return he would pray at Dhū al-Ḥulayfa, in the centre of the valley, where he would spend the night until morning.

Al-Bukhārī is alone in relating this from this line.

The ḥāfīz Abū Bakr al-Bazzār stated, “I found in my book the statement from ʿAmr b. Malik, from Yazīd b. Zurayʿ, from Hishām, from ʿAzra b. Thābit, from Thumāma, from Anas, that the Prophet (ṢAAS) set off on the pilgrimage mounted on a tattered saddle beneath which was a piece of cloth. And he said, ‘(It is to be) a pilgrimage devoid of eye service or reputation-seeking.’”

Al-Bukhārī commented upon this in his ṣaḥīḥ collection stating, “And Muḥammad b. Abū Bakr al-Muqaddamī stated that it was related to him by Yazīd b. Zurayʿ, from ʿAzra b. Thābit, from Thumāma, who said, ‘Anas rode away on the pilgrimage on a decrepit old saddle, and he was not stingy. He related that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had departed for the pilgrimage on a mount that had been his baggage transport.’”

Al-Bazzār related it similarly along with al-Bukhārī, as commentary and with its line of authority truncated at its beginning.

The ḥāfīz al-Bayhaqī gave a full line of authority for it in his sunan collection.

He stated, “Abū al-Ḥasan ʿAlī b. Muḥammad b. ʿAlī al-Muqaddamī stated that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) mounted on the pilgrimage on a worn-out saddle and cloth worth four dirhams. And he said, ‘O God, let it be a pilgrimage devoid of eye service.’”

Al-Tirmīdī related this in his work al-Shamāʿīl from a ḥadīth of Abū Dāʾūd al-Ṭayālīstī, Sufyān al-Thawrī and Ibn Māja, from a ḥadīth of Wākī b. al-Jarrāḥ, all three of them quoting from al-Rabīʿ b. Saḥīḥ.

This line of transmission is weak as regards Yazīd b. Abān al-Raqāṣī; he is not viewed as an acceptable narrator by the imāms.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Ḥāshim related to him, quoting Isā b. Saʿīd, from his father, who said, “I set out with Ibn ʿUmar and a Yemeni group passed by us. Their saddles were of leather and the muzzles of their camels were made of woven grass. ʿAbd Allāh commented, ‘Anyone wanting to see a group similar to that going with the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) and his Companions on their way to the ḥijjat al-wādāʾ should look at that party.’”

Abū Dāʾūd related this from Hannād, from Wākī, from Ishāq, from Saʿīd b. ʿAmr b. Saʿīd b. al-ʿĀṣ, from his father, from Ibn ʿUmar.

The ḥāfīz Abū Bakr al-Bayhaqī stated that Abū ʿAbd Allāh al-Ḥāfīz, Abū Ṭāhir al-Faqīh, Abū Zakariyyā b. Abū Ishāq, Abū Bakr b. al-Ḥasan, and Abū Saʿīd b. Abū ʿAmr all said, “Abū al-ʿAbbās – he being al-ʿAṣamm – related to us, quoting Saʿīd b. Bashir al-Qurashi, quoting ʿAbd Allāh b. Ḥakim al-Ḵīrān – a man of Yemen, one of their freed-men – from Bishr b. Qudāma al-Ḍibābi, who said, ‘My eyes saw my beloved Messenger of God (ṢAAS) positioned among the people on ʿArafāt mounted on a red camel he had, Qaṣwā, with a piece of bulānī cloth beneath him. He was saying, “O God, let it be a pilgrimage devoid of eye service, competitiveness or reputation-seeking.” And the people were saying, “This is the Messenger of God.”’

Imām Aḥmad stated, “ʿAbd Allāh b. Idrīs related to us, quoting Ibn Iṣḥāq, from Yahyā b. ʿAbbād b. ʿAbd Allāh b. al-Zubayr, from his father, (who said) that ʿAsmaʾ, daughter of Abū Bakr said, ‘We set out with the Prophet (ṢAAS) to make the pilgrimage. When we reached al-ʿArj, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) dismounted. ʿAʾisha sat down beside him, and I sat next to my father. The baggage camel of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and that of Abū Bakr were one and the same, being conducted by a slave of Abū Bakr. Abū Bakr sat waiting for the latter to appear with it. Eventually, he did appear, but he had no baggage camel with him. Abū Bakr asked, “Where’s your camel?” He replied, “I lost it yesterday.” Abū Bakr commented, “Just one baggage camel and you lost it!” And he began striking him. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) smiled and said, “Just look at that muḥrīm pilgrim and how he behaves!”’

And then there is the ḥadīth related by Abū Bakr b. al-Bazzār in his musnad collection. He stated that it was related to him by Ismāʿīl b. Ḥafṣ, quoting Yahyā b. al-Yamān, quoting Ḥamzah al-Zayyāt, from Ḥumrān b. Ayyān, from Abū al-Ṭufayl, from Abū Saʿīd, who said, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) went on the pilgrimage with his Companions on foot, from Medina to Mecca. They had gathered their garments up and tied them around their waists and their pace was a mixture of jogging and walking.”

This is an objectionable ḥadīth and its line of transmission is weak. Ḥamzah b. Ḥabīb al-Zayyāt is a weak source and his teacher was a person whose traditions were not accepted. Al-Bazzār stated, “This is related only from this line; we nevertheless consider its line of transmission to be ḥasan, ‘good’. The implication here is that they were on an ʿumra pilgrimage, if the ḥadīth is sound, because the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) only went on one ḥijja pilgrimage, and he rode, though some of his Companions went on foot.”

I observe that the Prophet (ṢAAS) never once went on a pilgrimage on foot, not at al-Ḥudaybiyya, not that of al-qaḍaʾ, nor that from al-Ǧīrāna, nor the ḥijja al-wadāʾ.

78. A halt on the road from Medina to Mecca.
The circumstances and fame of the Messenger of God (SAAS) were such that his having done this could not have been unknown to people. In fact, this hadith is objectionable, highly unlikely, and bizarre. But God knows best.

DIVISION

It is shown above that the Prophet (SAAS) performed the al-zuhr, "noon", prayer of four raka'at and then rode from there to al-Hulayfa, in the al-'Aqiq valley, where he performed an 'asr, "late afternoon", prayer of two raka'at.

It is indicated that he came to al-Hulayfa during the day time, at late afternoon, and that there he performed the al-'asr prayer in shortened form. That place is some three miles from Medina. He later performed the al-maghrib prayer and stayed there overnight.

Next morning he prayed there with his Companions and told them that during the night he had received revelation on which he would depend in determining his state of ikhram.

As Imam Aḥmad stated, "Yahya b. ʿAdam related to us, quoting Zuhayr, from Mūsā b. ʿUqba, from ʿAlī b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar, from ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar, from the Prophet (SAAS), (who said) that he had received a revelation in al-Mu‘arras (Street) at Dhū al-Hulayfa and he had been told, ‘You are in a sacred valley.’"

Both authors of the sahih collections gave this from a hadith of Mūsā b. ʿUqba.

Al-Bukhārī stated that it was related to him by al-Ḥumaydī, quoting al-Walīd and Bishr b. Bakr, both of whom stated, “Al-Awzāʿī related to us, quoting Yahyā, quoting Ikrima, (who said) that he heard Ibn ʿAbbās (say) that he heard ʿUmar saying, ‘I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say in Wādī al-ʿAqiq, “Tonight I received a visitation from a spirit from my Lord, who said, ‘Pray in this blessed valley, and say, “It is an umra within a ḥijja.”’’’"

Al-Bukhārī is alone in giving this; Muslim did not.

It is obvious that the Prophet (SAAS) ordered that prayer be performed in Wādī al-ʿAqiq and that this constituted a command to remain there until he had performed the al-zuhr prayer. This is because the instruction only came to him during the night and he informed them after the al-subh prayer. Only the al-zuhr prayer was to remain, and so he ordered them to perform it there and to institute the state of ikhram thereafter.

This is why he stated, “Tonight I received a visitation on behalf of my Lord, Almighty and Glorious is He. (The Messenger) said, ‘Pray in this holy valley, and say, “It is an umra within a ḥijja.”’”

On the basis of the above, an argument has been made in favour of performing the umra with the ḥijja, and this is one of the strongest indications of this. Elucidation of this will come shortly hereafter.
What is implied here is that the Prophet (SAAS) was ordered to remain in the al-'Aqiq valley until the al-zuhr prayer; he obeyed this and did remain there. That morning he visited each of his wives, nine in number. They had all set out with him. He did remain there until he had performed the al-zuhr prayer. This will be shown in the hadith of Abū Ḥassān al-Ārāj, from Ibn ʿAbbās, (who said) that the Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the al-zuhr prayer at Dhū al-Ḥulayfā. He then dressed his sacrificial animal in ceremonial decorations, mounted up and recited the talbiyya.

Imām ʿAḥmad, similarly, stated, “Rawḥ related to us, quoting Ashʿath – he being Ibn ʿAbd al-Malik – from al-Ḥasan, from Anas b. Malik (who said) that the Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the al-zuhr prayer and then mounted his camel. When he was above al-Baydā', he recited the talbiyya.”

Abū Daʿūd related this from ʿAḥmad b. Ḥanbal; al-Nasāʾī did so from Iṣḥāq b. Rāhawayh, from al-Nadhr b. Shumayl, from Ashʿath to the same effect, and from ʿAḥmad b. al-Azhar, from Muḥammad b. ʿAbd Allāh al-Anṣārī, from Ashʿath, in a more complete version.

This hadith gives a refutation of Ibn Ḥazm, in that the latter claimed that the above (departure) occurred early in the day.

His view is that reliance should be placed upon the hadith related by al-Bukhārī through Ayyūb, from “a man”, from Anas, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) spent the night at Dhu al-Ḥulayfā and next morning performed the al-ṣubh prayer there, and mounted his camel that took him to al-Baydā', where he recited the talbiyya for an ‘umra, after which he performed the pilgrimage.

However, in the line of transmission for this there is one narrator who is an unidentified man; it seems clear that this was Abu Qjlaba. But God knows best.

Muslim stated in his Sahīh collection that Yahyā b. Ḥabīb al-Ḥarīthi related to him, quoting Khālid – meaning Ibn al-Ḥarīth – quoting Shuʿba, from Ibrāhīm b. Muḥammad b. al-Muntashir, who said that he heard his father quote ʿAṭīṣha as saying, “I would perfume the Messenger of God (SAAS), and he would then make the rounds to his wives. Next morning, he would adopt the iḥrām state, sprinkling himself with perfume.”

Al-Bukhārī related this from a hadith of Shuʿba. Both al-Bukhārī and Muslim gave it from a hadith of Abū ʿAwāna. (Al-Bukhārī), Muslim, Misʿar and Sufyān b. Saʿd al-Thawrī, all four of them, (also) gave it from Ibrāhīm b. Muḥammad b. al-Muntashir.

In an account of Muslim, Ibrāhīm b. Muḥammad b. al-Muntashir quotes his father as saying, “I asked ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar about a man putting on perfume and adopting the iḥrām state. He replied, ‘I don’t like to adopt the iḥrām state sprinkling myself with perfume; I would much rather anoint myself with aloes-wood perfume rather than do that!’ ʿAṭīṣha commented, ‘But I put perfume on the Messenger of God (SAAS), when he adopted the iḥrām state. He would then make the rounds to his wives and after that would become muḥrim.’”
This wording related by Muslim requires the Messenger of God (SAAS) to put on perfume before he went around to his wives, this being more pleasant for himself and something they liked. Then, after he had washed himself following janāba, “sexual discharge”, and preparatory to adopting the ihram state, he would put on another perfume for the ihram.

This is how al-Tirmidhi and al-Bayhaqi related it, from a hadith of ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. Abū al-Zinnād, from his father, from Khārijah b. Zayd b. Thabit, from his father, who said that he saw the Messenger of God (SAAS) disrobe to recite the talbiyya and wash himself.

Al-Tirmidhi categorized this hadith as hasan gharib, “good and unilateral”.

Imām Al-Ḥaḍār stated that Zakariyya’ b. ‘Adi informed him, quoting ‘Ubayd Allāh b. ‘Amr, from ‘Abd Allāh b. Muḥammad b. ‘Aqil, from Urwa, from ‘A’isha, who said, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) wished to adopt the state of ihram, he would wash his head with marshmallow plant and potash” and then lightly oil it.”

Ahmad is alone in giving this hadith.

Abū ‘Abd Allāh Muḥammad b. Idris al-Shafī‘i, may God have mercy on him, stated that Sufyān b. ‘Uyayna related to him, from ‘Uthmān b. ‘Urwa (who said that) he heard his father say, “I heard ‘A’isha say, ‘I perfumed the Messenger of God (SAAS), for both his ihram and iḥlāl states’. I asked her, ‘What perfume did you use?’ ‘The very best perfume,’ she replied.”

Muslim related this, from a hadith of Sufyān b. ‘Uyayna, and al-Bukhārī quoted it from a hadith of Wahb, from Hishām b. ‘Urwa, from his brother ‘Uthmān, from his father ‘Urwa, from ‘A’isha.

Al-Bukhārī stated that ‘Abd Allāh b. Yusuf related to him, quoting Malik, from ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. al-Qāsim, from his father, from ‘A’isha, who said, “I would perfume the Messenger of God (SAAS), for the ihram when he would adopt that state, as well as for the iḥlāl, prior to his circumambulating the ka‘ba.”

Muslim stated that ‘Abd b. Ḥumayd related to him, quoting Muḥammad b. Abū Bakr, quoting Ibn Jurayj, who said that ‘Umar b. ‘Abd Allāh b. ‘Urwa related to him that he heard ‘Urwa and al-Qāsim, who both related that ‘A’isha stated, “I perfumed the Messenger of God (SAAS), with my own hands, using dharīra” on the hijjat al-wadā‘, for both his states of iḥlāl and ihram.”

Muslim also related, from a hadith of Sufyān b. ‘Uyayna, from al-Zuhri, from ‘Urwa, from ‘A’isha, who said, “I perfumed the Messenger of God (SAAS), with these two hands of mine both for his ihram when he adopted that and for his iḥlāl state before he circumambulated the ka‘ba.”

Muslim stated that ‘Ahmad b. Manṣūr and Yaʿqūb al-Dawraqī both related to him, that Hushaym related to them, quoting Manṣūr, from ‘Abd al-Rahmān b.

79. The Arabic words given are al-khatami and al-‘ushnān; the Arabic printed edition suggests in a footnote that these words referred to “two varieties of plants”.

80. A footnote in the Arabic printed text defines this as a kind of perfume and goes on to quote al-Nawawī as saying that it is of Indian origin. al-Qasim, from his father, from 'A'isha, who stated, "I would put perfume on the Prophet (SAAS), before he would adopt the iḥrām or the iḥlāl state, as well as on the day of the slaughter of the sacrificial animals. I would use a perfume that had musk in it."

Muslim stated that both Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba and Zuhayr b. Ḥarb related to him, saying, "Wākī related to us, quoting al-A'mash, from Abū al-Duhā, from Masrūq, from 'A'isha, who said, 'It is as if I can still see the shine of the musk on the partings in the hair of the Messenger of God (SAAS), as he recited the talbiyya.'"

Then Muslim related it from a hadith of al-Thawrī and others, from al-Ḥasan b. Ubayd Allāh, from Ibrāhīm, from al-Aswad, from 'A'isha, who said, "It is as if I can see now the shine of the musk in the hair parting of the Messenger of God (SAAS), while he was in the state of iḥrām."

Al-Bukhārī related it from a hadith of Sufyān al-Thawrī and Muslim did so from a hadith of al-A'mash. Both of these gave it from Mansūr, from Ibrāhīm, from al-Aswad, quoting 'A'isha.

Both al-Bukhārī and Muslim gave it in their collections from a hadith of Shu'ba, from al-Ḥakam b. Ibrāhīm, from al-Aswad, from 'A'isha.

Abū Dā'ūd al-Ṭayālīsī stated that Ashāth informed him, from Mansūr, from Ibrāhīm, from al-Aswad, from 'A'isha, who said, "It's as though I can see now the shine of the perfume at the roots of the hair of the Messenger of God (SAAS), while he was in a state of iḥrām."

Imām Al-Jamāl stated that 'Affān related to him, quoting Ḥammād b. Salama, from Ibrāhīm al-Nakha'ī, from al-Aswad, from 'A'isha, who said, "It's as though I can see now the shine in the parting of the hair of the Prophet (SAAS), after several days, he being in an iḥrām state."

'Abd Allāh b. al-Zubayr al-Humaydī stated that Sufyān b. Uwayna related to him, quoting 'Atā b. al-Ṣā'ib, from Ibrāhīm al-Nakha'ī, from al-Aswad, from 'A'isha, who said, "I saw the perfume in the parting of the hair of the Messenger of God (SAAS), after three days, he being in an iḥrām state."

These accounts show that the Prophet (SAAS) wore perfume after washing. For if the perfume had been applied before the washing, it would have been removed by it and not a trace of it would have remained, especially three days after his adoption of the iḥrām state.

A group of the early authorities, including Ibn 'Umar, express their disapproval of using perfume while in the iḥrām state.

as saying, “I put perfume on the Messenger of God (SAAS), that was of fine, expensive quality when he adopted the ihram state.”

This line of transmission is gharib, “unilateral”, but it is from sound sources.

The Prophet (SAAS) then braided (the hair of) his head so that it would better retain the perfume and protect it from retaining the dirt and dust.

Mālik stated, from Nāfi‘, from Ibn ʿUmar (who said) that Ḥafṣa, wife of the Prophet (SAAS), asked, “Messenger of God, how is it that some people have freed themselves from the ilzram of the umra, while you have not?” He replied, “I have braided my hair and put necklaces on my sacrificial animal; I shall therefore not adopt the ihlāl state until I have made the sacrifice.”

Both scholars (al-Bukhārī and Muslim) promulgated this in their ṣahih collections from a ḥadīth of Mālik; it has many lines of transmission back to Nāfi‘.

The chain of authorities for this is excellent.

The Prophet (SAAS) then made a sign signifying that his ḥadīth was for the sacrifice and hung that sign around its neck; the animal was with him at Dhī al-Ḥuwayf.

Al-Layth stated, from ʿAqil, from al-Zuhri, from Salīm, from his father, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the tamattuʿ at the ḥijjat al-wadāʾ. He then selected an animal for sacrifice and led that ḥadīth forth with him from Dhī al-Ḥuwayf.

This ḥadīth, given in both ṣahih collections, will be quoted hereafter in full, along with commentary upon it, if God so wills it.

Muslim stated that Muḥammad b. al-Muthannā related, quoting Muʿādh b. Hishām – he being al-Dastuwārī – quoting his father, from Qatāda, from Abū ʿAbd Allāh, from Ibn ʿAbbas, who said that when the Messenger of God (SAAS) arrived at Dhī al-Ḥuwayf, he called for his (sacrificial) camel to be brought and that he made a sign on the right surface of its hump, pressed out some of its blood and hung a pair of shoes around its neck. He then mounted his riding camel.

The ahl al-sunan narrated this through various lines from Qatāda.

This shows that the Prophet (SAAS) performed this marking and neck decoration with his very own hands on this sacrificial camel, while others undertook the marking and decorating of the other sacrificial animals. For he had with him a large number of animals for sacrifice, 100, or close thereto. He himself sacrificed by his own hand 63 animals and allowed ʿAlī to slaughter the remainder.

In a ḥadīth of Jabir, it is said that ʿAlī brought to the Prophet (SAAS) animals from Yemen for the sacrifice.
In the text of Ibn Isḥaq it is said that he shared his sacrificial animals with 'Ali. But God knows best. Others state that on the day of the slaughter, he and 'Ali sacrificed 100 animals.

In this case, he would have brought them with him from Dhū al-Ḥulayfa; although he could have purchased them thereafter while he was in the ihram state.

Chapter: the place from which the Prophet (ṢAAS) recited the talbiyya; the differing views on this expressed by the sources. And the likely truth regarding this.

REFERENCE TO THOSE WHO STATE THAT THE PROPHET (ṢAAS) ADOPTED THE IHRAM FROM THE MOSQUE AT DHU AL-ḤULAYFA AFTER THE PRAYER.

Hereabove there has been given the hadith related by al-Bukhārī from that of al-Awzāʿī, from Yaḥyā b. Abū Kathīr, from ʿIrīma, from Ibn ʿAbbās, from ʿUmar, who stated, “I heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) say in Wādī al-ʿAqiq, ‘Tonight I received a visitation from a spirit from my Lord, who said, “Pray in this holy valley and say, ‘(Let it be) an ‘umra within a ḥijja.’”’”

Al-Bukhārī has a section entitled Chapter on the recitation of the talbiyya at the mosque at Dhū al-Ḥulayfa.

He goes on to state, “ʿAlī b. ʿAbd Allāh related to us, quoting Sufyān, quoting Mūsā b. ʿUqba, quoting Sālim b. ʿAbd Allāh as follows, and also ʿAbd Allāh b. Maslama related to us, quoting Mālik, from Mūsā b. ʿUqba, from Sālim b. ʿAbd Allāh as follows, saying that he heard his father say, ‘The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) only recited the talbiyya from at the mosque.’” This meant the mosque at Dhū al-Ḥulayfa.

The community of scholars, except for Ibn Māja, related this, from various lines, from Mūsā b. ʿUqba.

Also there is an account given by Muslim, from Mūsā b. ʿUqba, from Sālim and Nāfiʿ and Ḥamza b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar, all three quoting ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar. He related as above, but added, “And he said, ‘Labbayka, labbayk! At Your service, O God, at Your service!’”

In one account given by both scholars through Mālik, Mūsā b. ʿUqba, quoted Sālim as saying, “ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar stated, ‘Regarding this baydāʾ of yours about which you tell lies concerning the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), he actually only recited the talbiyya from near the mosque!’”

A statement fully contradicting this is also related from Ibn ʿUmar, as will come in the next section. Namely, the report cited in both sahīh collections from a line through Mālik, from Saʿīd b. Abū Saʿīd al-Maqburi, from ʿUbayd b.

81. An elevated position from which, according to some sources, the Prophet (ṢAAS) began chanting the talbiyya.
Jurayh, from Ibn 'Umar. Therein he relates a hadith in which 'Abd Allah stated, "Regarding the recitation of the talbiyya, I never saw the Messenger of God (SAAS) recite it before his mount set off with him."

Imām Ahmad stated that Ya'qūb related to him, quoting his father, from Ibn Ishaq, quoting Khuṣayb b. 'Abd al-Raḥmān al-Jazari, from Sa'īd b. Jubayr, who said, "I asked 'Abd Allāh b. Abbās, 'Abū al-ʾAbbas, 'It's strange that the Companions of the Messenger of God (SAAS) should differ over his recitation of the talbiyya, over when he made it obligatory."

"He replied, 'I know better than anyone about that. The Messenger of God (SAAS) only performed just one hīja; that's why they differ."

"The Messenger of God (SAAS) went forth to make the pilgrimage. After performing the prayer, of two rakaʾāt in his mosque at Dhu al-Ḥulayfa, it was while in his seat that he made it obligatory. He recited the talbiyya for the pilgrimage when he had completed his two rakaʾāt; people heard him do this and remembered it. He then mounted up, and when his camel stood, he recited the talbiyya. Various people knew he did so; that was because they were arriving in groups. These people heard him make the recitation when his mount stood upright; they said, "The Messenger of God (SAAS) only recited the talbiyya once his mount had stood upright."

"The Messenger of God (SAAS) then proceeded on. And when he was at a point overlooking al-Baydā', he recited the talbiyya. Various people knew he did this and so they concluded, "The Messenger of God (SAAS) only recited the talbiyya once he reached a point overlooking al-Baydā'." But, I swear by God, in fact it was while he was in his chapel that he made it obligatory; he recited the talbiyya when his camel stood up with him, and he also made the recitation when he reached a point overlooking al-Baydā'."

There are those who accept the statement of 'Abd Allāh b. Abbās that the Prophet (SAAS), did recite the talbiyya after he had completed his two rakaʾāt; Al-Tirmidhi and Al-Nasāʾi both related this from Qutayba, from 'Abd al-Salām b. Ḥarb, from Khuṣayf, in a similar account.

Al-Tirmidhi categorized that hadith as ḥasan gharib, "good and unilateral"; we know of no one except 'Abd al-Salām who related this. He stated this, even though the account had been related previously by Imām Ahmad, through Muḥammad b. Ishaq, back to him (Khuṣayf). Similarly, the ḥāfiẓ Al-Bayhaqī related it from al-Qattāqī from 'Abd Allāh b. Ḥāmid, from his father. He then stated, "Khuṣayf al-Jazari is not a strong source. And al-Wāqidi related it, with a line of transmission of his own, from Ibn Abbās." Al-Bayhaqī then commented, "However, it is not purposeful to follow al-Wāqidi; the accounts relating to this subject from 'Umar and others have firm and strong supports. But God, Almighty is He, knows best."

I comment that if this hadith is authentic, what it contains provides a synthesis between these accounts that differ and it also provides excuse for those who related what was contrary to the actual facts. However, there is some weakness in its line of transmission. Moreover, statements have also been attributed to Ibn 'Abbas and Ibn Umar that contradict what is related above from them, as we will show and interpret.

Thus there are the reports of those who state that the Messenger of God (SAAS) recited the talbiyya when his camel stood upright.

Al-Bukhārī stated that it was related to him by 'Abd Allāh b. Muḥammad, quoting Hishām b. Yūsuf, quoting Ibn Jurayj, quoting Muḥammad b. al-Munkadīr, from Anas b. Mālik, who said, “The Prophet (SAAS) performed a prayer of four rakah in Medina then another of two rakah at Dhū al-Ḥulayfā. He then spent the night and was there next morning at Dhū al-Ḥulayfā; when he mounted his camel and it stood upright, he recited the talbiyya."

Al-Bukhārī also related it, as did Muslim and the ahl al-sunan, along various lines of transmission, from Muḥammad b. al-Munkadīr and Ibrāhīm b. Maysara, from Anas.

It is established in both sahih collections from a ḥadīth of Mālik, from Saʿīd al-Maqbūrī, from Ubayd b. Jurayj, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said, “Regarding the recitation of the talbiyya, I never saw the Messenger of God (SAAS) recite it until his mount set off with him.”

Both scholars promulgated in their sahih collections from an account of Ibn Wahb, from Yūnus, from al-Zuhri, from Sālim, from his father, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) would mount his camel at Dhū al-Ḥulayfā and he then recited the talbiyya when it stood upright.

Al-Bukhārī entitles a section: Chapter of those who recited the talbiyya when their camels stood upright.

Muslim and al-Nāsirī related this from a ḥadīth of Ibn Jurayj.

Muslim stated that Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba related to him, quoting ʿAlī b. Mushir, from Ubayd Allāh, from Nafīṣ, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) placed his foot in the stirrup and his mount stood up bearing him, he recited the talbiyya from Dhū al-Ḥulayfā.”

Muslim is alone in relating this through this line. Both scholars related it from a different line, from Ubayd Allāh b. ʿUmar, from Nafīṣ.

Al-Bukhārī went on to head a section: Chapter on reciting the talbiyya facing towards the qibla.

He went on, “Abū Maʿṣūr stated that it was related to him by Abīd al-Wārith, quoting Ayyūb, from Nafīṣ, who said, ‘When Ibn ʿUmar prayed in the morning at Dhū al-Ḥulayfā, he ordered his mount to be brought. It was saddled and he mounted it. When it stood up bearing him, he would face the qibla. He would then ride on, reciting the talbiyya until he reached the ḥaram, “the sacred precincts of Mecca”. He would then cease the recitation until he reached Dhū Ṭuwā’, where he would spend the night until morning. After performing the morning prayer, he would take a bath; he claimed that the Messenger of God (SAAS) had done this.”

He then stated, “Ismā‘īl agreed with him, quoting Ayyūb, concerning the taking of a bath.”

Al-Bukhārī also included this hadīth in his section on the pilgrimage, from Muḥammad b. Ṭālha, from Ḥammād b. Zayd. In his line of transmission, the hadīth comes from Ya‘qūb b. Ibrāhīm al-Dawraqī, from Ismā‘īl, he being Ibn Uliyya.

Muslim related it from Zuhayr b. Harb, from Ismā‘īl, and also from Abū al-Rabī‘ al-Zahrānī, and others, from Ḥammād b. Zayd, each of these three deriving it from Ayyūb, from Abū Tamīma al-Sakhtīyānī. Abū Dā‘ūd related it from Ahmad b. Ḥanbal, from Ismā‘īl b. Uliyya.

Al-Bukhārī went on to state that Sulaymān Abū al-Rabī‘ related to him, quoting Fūlayḥ, from Nāfi‘, who said, “When (‘Abd Allāh) Ibn Ṭūr was about to proceed to Mecca, he would put on a scentless pomade. He would then go to the mosque at Dhū al-Ḥulaqfa, perform the prayer, then mount up. When his camel stood upright, bearing him, he declared himself to be in the ʿibrām state. He then said, ‘This is what I saw the Messenger of God (SAAS) do.’”

Al-Bukhārī is alone in giving this from this line.

Muslim narrated as follows from Qatayba, from Ḥātim b. Ismā‘īl, from Mūsā b. Ṭūr, from Sālim, from his father, who said, “Regarding this ‘al-Bayḍa’ of yours about which you tell lies concerning the Messenger of God (SAAS), he actually only recited the talbiyya from near by the tree, when his camel stood up there bearing him.”

This hadīth gives a combination between the first narrative of Ibn Ṭūr and these accounts about him. Namely, that the declaration of the ʿibrām state was made at the mosque, but after he had mounted his camel and it had stood up bearing him at al-Bayḍa, this word here meaning “the open land”. And that was prior to his arrival at the place known as al-Bayḍa.

Al-Bukhārī stated thereafter, in another section, that Muḥammad b. Abū Bakr al-Muqaddimī related to him, quoting Fuḍayl b. Sulaymān, quoting Mūsā b. Ṭūr, quoting Kurayb, from Ṭabarī b. ‘Abbās, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS), proceeded out from Medina after he had combed and oiled his hair and after he and his Companions had put on their ḥisār, ‘upper body wraps’, and their ṛidā, ‘waist-wraps’. He did not forbid the wearing of any kind of material for these garments except those treated with saffron, since they might leave scent on the skin. When he reached Dhū al-Ḥulaqfa, he mounted his camel and rode it to al-Bayḍa, where he and his Companions recited the talbiyya and placed garlands around the necks of the camels for sacrifice. This occurred five days prior to the end of Dhū al-Ṭa‘īda. He proceeded on to Mecca, reaching 82. A location near Mecca.

there four days into Dhū al-Ḥijja. He then circumambulated the ka'ba and made the sa'i, ‘the passage’. He did not declare his state of ihram ended, since he had a sacrificial camel and had placed a garland on it. He then dismounted at the heights of Mecca at al-Ḥajjān, still being in the ihram state for the pilgrimage. He did not again approach the ka'ba, after having circumambulated it, until he returned from Mt. ‘Arafāt. At that time he told his Companions to circumambulate the ka'ba to pass between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa, to cut their hair short and to conclude their state of ihram. This applied only to those who had not brought sacrificial camels and had not placed garlands around the necks of the animals. Those accompanied by their wives were then allowed to approach them, and to use perfume and wear their normal clothing.”

Al-Bukhari is alone in giving this.

Imām Aḥmad narrated from Bahz b. Asad, Ḥajjāj, Rawḥ b. ʿUbāda, and ʿAffān b. Muslim, all of whom quoted Shu'ba as stating, “Qatāda informed me as follows, ‘I heard Abū Ḥassān al-ʿArāj al-ʿAjrad – he being Muslim b. ʿAbd Allah al-Baṣrī – quote Ibn ʿAbbās as saying, ‘The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) performed the al-ṣuḥr prayer at Dhū al-Ḥulayfa, then called for his sacrificial camel. He stripped off the hair from the surface of its right hump and blood flowed from it. He then garlanded it with two sandals and asked that his riding camel be brought. When it bore him off to above al-Bayḍāʾ, he recited the talbiyya for the pilgrimage.’””

He related this also from Hushaym, who said, “Our men, including Shu'ba, informed us...” He went on to narrate the hadith in similar form.

Imām Aḥmad also related this from Rawḥ, Abū Dāʾūd al-Ṭayālīsī and Wākī b. Jarrāḥ, all of them quoting Hishām al-Dastawīl, from Qatāda, in similar form.

Muslim related it in his sahih collection from this same line and the ahl al-sunan also quote it in their books.

These various lines of transmission quoting Ibn ʿAbbās as stating that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) recited the talbiyya when his camel stood up bearing him, are more secure and sound than the account of Khuṣayf al-Jazari, from Saʿīd b. Jubayr. But God knows best.

This is also true of the account that affirms and explains that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) recited the talbiyya when his mount proceeded on ahead of the other camel; this implies probability that what he meant was that he declared himself in the ihram state at the mosque when his mount arose bearing him. The account relating his riding on his mount gives more information than the other. But God knows best.

83. This rite is a necessary part of both the ḥajj and the ʿumra. It consists of al-sa'i, “walking” or “moving”, seven times between the hillocks al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa. This commemorates the frenzied running of Abraham’s wife Hagar seven times from one of these hills to the other hoping to catch sight of a caravan that might provide water for her child Ismāʿīl. Ultimately the well zamzam miraculously appeared at her son Ismāʿīl’s feet.
The account of Anas relating to that is free from objections, as is that of Jābir b. ʿAbd Allāh in the ʿṣāḥīh collection of Muslim, through Jaʿfar al-Ṣādiq, from his father, from Abū al-Ḥusayn Zayn al-ʿAbidin, from Jābir, in his lengthy ḥadīth that will be related hereafter. It is to the effect that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) recited the talbiyya when his mount arose bearing him. This account, too, is unexceptionable. But God knows best.

Al-Bukhārī related through al-Awzāʾī as follows, “I heard ʿAṭāʾ say, on the authority of Jābir b. ʿAbd Allāh, that the recitation of the talbiyya by the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was at Dhū al-Ḥulayfah when his mount stood up bearing him.”

Regarding the ḥadīth that Muḥammad b. ʿIshaq b. Yāsār related, from Abū al-Zinād, from ʿAʾisha, daughter of Saʿd. She said, “Saʿd stated, ‘The Messenger of God (ṢAAS), when he set off along the al-Farāʾ road, recited the talbiyya as his camel bore him away. When he took another route, he recited the talbiyya when he overlooked al-Baydāʾ.’”

Abū Daʿūd and al-Bayhaqī narrated this from a ḥadīth of Ibn ʿIshaq; it has strange and objectionable aspects. But God knows best.

These various lines of authority indicate the certainty or the high probability that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) adopted the ḥārij al-ifrād. In his account Ibn ʿUmar adds, “... while facing the qibla, towards the ʿkaʿba’.”

Chapter: On a discussion and examination of how the Prophet (ṢAAS) performed the pilgrimage, whether as the ḥajj al-ifrād, the al-tamattuʿ, or the al-qirān.

Accounts indicating that the Prophet (ṢAAS) performed the ḥajj al-ifrād.

The account of ʿAʾisha, “mother of the Believers”, concerning this.

Abū ʿAbd Allāh Muḥammad b. Idris al-Shafiʿī stated that Malik informed him, from Abū al-ʿRaḥmān b. al-Qāsim, quoting his father, who quoted ʿAʾisha as stating, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) performed the ḥajj al-ifrād.”

Muslim related this from Ismāʿīl, from Abū Uways and Yaḥyā b. Yaḥyā, from Malik. Imām Aḥmad related this from Abū al-ʿRaḥmān b. Mahdī, from Malik.

Aḥmad stated that Isḥāq b. Isā related to him, quoting al-Munkadīr b. Muḥammad, from Rabīʿa b. Abū ʿAbd al-ʿRaḥmān, from al-Qāsim b. Muḥammad,

84. These terms refer to the three different ways the pilgrimage may be performed. The ḥajj al-ifrād is when the pilgrim assumes the ʿihram state with the intent of performing only the ḥajj and not the ʿumra at the same time. The ḥajj al-tamattuʿ is when the pilgrim has no ʿaḍā, “sacrificial animal”, and assumes the ʿihram state only to perform the ʿumra. Having completed the ʿumra, the pilgrim acquires a ʿaḍā and resumes the ʿihram state to perform the ḥajj. The ḥajj al-qirān is when a pilgrim has a ʿaḍā, assumes the ʿihram state once only and performs both the ʿumra and the ḥajj in sequence.
from ʿĀʾisha, who said, “The Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa) performed the ḥaǰj al-ʿifrāḍ.”

Imām Aḥmad stated that Shurayḥ related to him, quoting ʿIbn Abū al-Zinād, from his father, from ʿUrwa, who quoted ʿĀʾisha, and from ʿAlqama, from his father, quoting his mother, who quoted ʿĀʾisha, and from ʿHishām b. ʿUrwa, from his father, who quoted ʿĀʾisha. All three accounts quoted ʿĀʾisha as saying, “The Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa) performed the ḥaǰj al-ʿifrāḍ.”

Aḥmad is alone in quoting ʿĀʾisha from these lines of transmission.

Imām Aḥmad stated that ʿAbd al-ʿAlī b. Ḥammād related to him, “I studied under ʿAlī b. Abi al-Zinād, the following ḥadīth, from Abū al-ʿAswād, from ʿUrwa, from ʿAʾisha, who said, ‘The Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa) performed the ḥaǰj al-ʿifrāḍ.’”

He (Aḥmad) went on to state that Rawḥ related to him, quoting Malik, from Abū al-ʿAswād Muḥammad b. ʿAbd al-ʿAlī, an orphan in the care of ʿUrwa, from ʿUrwa b. al-Zubayr, who quoted ʿĀʾisha as saying, “The Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa) performed the ḥaǰj al-ʿifrāḍ.”

Ibn Mājā related this from Abū Muṣʿab, from ʿAlī, in this way.

Al-Nāṣṣārī related it from Qutayba, from Malik, from Abū al-ʿAswād, from ʿUrwa, who quoted ʿĀʾisha as saying, “The Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa) recited the talbiyya for the ḥaǰj.”

Aḥmad also stated that ʿAbd al-ʿAlī b. ʿAlqama related to him, from Malik, from Abū al-ʿAswād, from ʿUrwa, who quoted ʿĀʾisha as saying, “We went forth with the Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa). Some of us recited the talbiyya for the ḥaǰj, others of us did so for the ʿumra, while some did so both for the ḥaǰj and the ʿumra. The Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa) recited the talbiyya for the ḥaǰj. Those who did so for the ʿumra declared their ʿihram state at an end when they had circumambulated the kaʿba and had traversed between al-Ṣaḥā and al-Marwa. Those who did so for the ḥaǰj or for the ʿumra did not declare their ʿihram state concluded until the yawm al-naḥl, the day when the sacrificial animals were slaughtered.”

Al-Bukhārī related it thus from ʿAbd Allah b. Yūsuf, al-Quʾaynī and Ismāʿīl b. Abū Uways, (all) quoting from Malik. Muslim narrated it from Yahyā b. Yahyā, from Malik.

Aḥmad stated that Sufyān related to him, from al-Zuhri, from ʿUrwa, from ʿĀʾisha, who said, “The Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa) recited the talbiyya for the ḥaǰj, while others did so for the ḥaǰj and the ʿumra; yet others did so for the ʿumra.”

Muslim related it from Ibn Abū Ĕumar, from Sufyān b. Uyayna in similar form.

Then there is the ḥadīth of Imām Aḥmad, who stated that Qutayba b. ʿAqīd related to him, quoting ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz b. Muḥammad, from ʿAlqama b. Abū ʿAlqama, from his mother, from ʿĀʾisha, who said, “The Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa) gave instructions to the people on the ḥijjat al-wada’. He said, ‘Those who wish to perform an ‘umra prior to the hajj should do so.’ The Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the hajj al-ifrād and did not perform the ‘umra.’

This hadith is very strange. Ahmad b. Hanbal is alone in giving it. Its line of transmission is not bad, but one phrase in it is completely unacceptable, namely, “and he did not perform the ‘umra”.

If by this it is meant that he did not perform the ‘umra either along with the hajj or prior to it, then the statement agrees with those who say he performed the hajj al-ifrād. If it means that he did not perform the ‘umra at all, neither before, with or after the hajj, then I am unaware of any scholar who would support it. Moreover, this would contradict authentic statements of Ā’isha and others to the effect that the Prophet (SAAS) did perform four ‘umra, all of them in Dhū al-Qa’dā, except for that performed along with his ḥijja.

Discussion of this will follow in detail in the section discussing the hajj al-qirān. But God knows best.

The same applies to the hadith narrated by Imam Ahmad, who stated that Rawḥ related to him, quoting Ṣāliḥ b. Abū al-Akhḍar, quoting Ibn Shihāb (who said) that ‘Urwa informed him that Ā’isha, wife of the Prophet (SAAS), said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) recited the talbiyya for the hajj and the ‘umra on the ḥijja al-wadār, and he led his ḥadi with him. (Some) people with him recited the talbiyya for the ‘umra and led their sacrificial animals; other people recited the talbiyya for the ‘umra and did not lead sacrificial animals.”

‘Ā’isha went on, “I was among those who recited the talbiyya for the ‘umra and I did not lead a ḥadi.

“When the Messenger of God (SAAS) arrived (in Mecca), he said, ‘Those of you who recited the talbiyya for the ‘umra and led a ḥadi should circumambulate the ka‘ba and pass between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā; nothing for which you have declared the iḥrām will be permitted until you have completed the hajj and sacrificed your animal on the day for the slaughter. Those of you who recited the talbiyya for the ‘umra and did not lead with you an animal for sacrifice should circumambulate the ka‘ba, pass between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā; you may then shorten your hair and declare your iḥrām concluded. You may then recite the talbiyya for the hajj and lead an animal for sacrifice. Those unable to do this may fast for three days on the bai‘ and for seven days when you return to your family.’”

‘Ā’isha went on, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) gave priority for the hajj that he feared he might miss, and postponed the ‘umra.”

This is one of the aḥādith unique to Imam Ahmad; some of its phraseology is objectionable. For some of it there is testimony in the saḥih collections. Ṣāliḥ b. Abū al-Akhḍar is not considered one of the prime companions of al-Zuhri, especially when others, as in some of the phraseology of his text here, contradict him.

The quotation, “He gave priority to the hajj that he feared he might miss and postponed the ‘umra” does not fit with the beginning of the hadith that states, “he recited the talbiyya for the hajj and the ‘umra.”
If what he meant is that he recited the talbiyya for both together, then gave priority to the performance of the ḥajj and thereafter, having finished it, recited the talbiyya for the 'umra, as is maintained by those who say he performed the ḥajj al-īfrād, then that accords with our view here.

If what is meant is that he postponed the 'umra, after having declared himself in the iḥrām state for it, then this is a view held by no scholar known to me. If the account means that he found performing the ḥajj enough to dispense with those of the 'umra, and that the 'umra was combined into the ḥajj, then the statement supports those who maintain that he performed the ḥajj al-ġirān. These latter give preference to those who relate that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) gave precedence to the ḥajj, to the performance of the ḥajj, that is, even though he also purposed that of the 'umra. These scholars maintain, “All sources saying he performed the ḥajj al-īfrād also narrate his having performed the ḥajj al-ġirān.” This will be shown hereafter. But God, Almighty is He, knows best.

The Account of Jābir b. ʿAbd Allāh supporting his having performed the ḥajj al-īfrād.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Abū Muʿāwiyah related to him, quoting al-ʿAṣmash, from Abū Sufyān, from Jābir b. ʿAbd Allāh, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) recited the talbiyya for the ḥajj on his pilgrimage.”

The line of transmission for this is excellent and conforms with the criteria of Muslim.

Al-Bayhaqi related this from al-Ḥākim and others, from al-ʿĀṣamm, from Aḥmad b. ʿAbd al-Jabbār, from Abū Muʿāwiyah, from al-ʿAṣmash, from Abū Sufyān, from Jābir, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) recited the talbiyya on his pilgrimage for the ḥajj with no 'umra along with it.”

This addition is very strange. The account of Imām Aḥmad b. Ḥanbal is more appropriate. But God knows best.

In the sahih collection of Muslim an account is related through Jaʿfar b. Muḥammad, from his father, from Jābir, who said, “We recited the talbiyya for the ḥajj; we did not know of the 'umra.”

Ibn Māja narrated, from Hishām b. ʿAmmār, from al-Donaldi and Ḥātim b. Ismāʿīl, who both quoted Jaʿfar b. Muḥammad from his father, from Jābir, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) performed the ḥajj al-īfrād.” This line of transmission is excellent.

Imām Aḥmad stated that ʿAbd al-Wahhāb al-Ṭhaqāfī, quoting Ḥabīb al-Muʿallīm, that is – from ʿAṭāʾ, quoting Jābir b. ʿAbd Allāh, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and his Companions recited the talbiyya for the ḥajj; none of them had a sacrificial animal with him, except for the Prophet (ṢAAS) and Ṭalḥā.”
He proceeded to quote the rest of the ḥadīth, which is given in full in the ṣaḥīḥ collection of al-Bukhārī, as will be given, quoting Muḥammad b. al-Muṭṭathānā, from ʿAbd al-Wahhāb.

The Account of ʿAbd Allāḥ b. ʿUmar regarding the ḥaJJ al-ʾifrād.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Iṣmāʿīl b. Muḥammad related to him, quoting ʿAbbād – meaning Ibn ʿAbbād – quoting ʿUbayd Allāh b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar, from Nāfiʿ, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said, “We recited the talbiyya with the Prophet (ṢAAS) for the ʿaJJ alone.”

Muslim related it in his ṣaḥīḥ collection, from ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAwn, from ʿAbbād b. ʿAbdād, from ʿUbayd Allāh b. ʿUmar, from Nāfiʿ, from Ibn ʿUmar (who said) that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) recited the talbiyya for the ʿaJJ alone.

The line of transmission for this is excellent; they (the major scholars) did not promulgate it.

The Account of Ibn ʿAbbās for the ʿaJJ al-ʾifrād.

The hāfīz al-Bayhaqī narrated from a ḥadīth of Rawḥ b. ʿUbāda, from Shuʿba, from ʿAbbāb, from Abū al-ʿAlīyya al-Barāʾ, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) recited the talbiyya for the ʿaJJ and arrived (in Mecca) four days before the end of Dhū al-Ḥijja. He performed the ṣuḥb prayer with us in al-Bathāʾ and then said, ‘Those who wish to make it an ʿumra should do so.’”

He then stated, “Muslim narrated it, from Ibrahīm b. Dīnār, from Ibn Rawḥ.”

It has been given above, from an account of Qatāda, from Abū Ḥassān al-ʿArraj, from Ibn ʿAbbās, that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) performed the al-zuḥr prayer at Dhū al-Ḥulayfa. Thereafter his sacrificial camel was brought, and he stripped the hair from the right surface of its hump. His riding camel was then brought and he mounted it. When it bore him away and he was overlooking al-Baydāʾ, he recited the talbiyya for the ʿaJJ.

This is also included in the ṣaḥīḥ collection of Muslim.

The hāfīz Abū al-Ḥasan al-Dārquṭnī stated that al-Ḥusayn b. Iṣmāʿīl related to him, quoting Abū Hīshām, quoting Abū Bakr b. ʿAyyāsh, quoting Abū Ḥusayn, from ʿAbd al-ʿRāḥmān b. al-ʿAswād, from his father, who said, “I performed the pilgrimage with Abu Bakr, and he jarrada.\(^{85}\) And also with 'Umar, and he jarrada. And also with Uthman, and he *jarrada."

Al-Thawri traced this from Abu 'Ushayn.

We have only referred to this here because it is apparent that these Imams, may God be pleased with them, would only have done this from having been taught. What is meant here by the verbal noun of jarrada is performing the hajj al-ifrad. But God knows best.

Al-Darqutni stated that Abu 'Ubayd Allāh al-Qāsim b. Ismā'īl and Muḥammad b. Makhlad related to him, quoting 'Ali b. Muḥammad b. Mu'āwiya al-Razzāz, quoting 'Abd Allāh b. Nāfi', from 'Abd Allāh b. 'Umar, from Nāfi', from Ibn 'Umar, who said, "The Prophet (SAAS) appointed 'Attab b. Usayd in charge of the pilgrimage and he performed the hajj al-ifrad. He then placed Abu Bakr in charge (of it) in the year 9 AH, and he performed the hajj al-ifrad. Then the Prophet (SAAS) went on the pilgrimage in the year 10 AH and performed the hajj al-ifrad. After that the Messenger of God (SAAS) died and Abu Bakr succeeded; he dispatched 'Umar and he performed the hajj al-ifrad. Abu Bakr then went on the pilgrimage and performed the hajj al-ifrad. Abu Bakr died, and 'Umar succeeded. He dispatched 'Abd al-Rahmān b. 'Awp on the pilgrimage and he performed the hajj al-ifrad. He ('Umar) then went on the pilgrimage and performed the hajj al-ifrad. Then Uthman was besieged and 'Abd Allāh b. 'Abbās took charge (of the pilgrimage) for the people and performed the hajj al-ifrad."

In the line of transmission for this hadith there is 'Abd Allāh b. 'Umar al-'Umarī; he is qa'lf, "a weak source". However, the hāfiẓ al-Bayhaqī stated, "There is testimony (in favour of this hadith) with a line of transmission that is ṣaḥīḥ, 'authentic'."

REFERENCE TO THOSE WHO STATE THAT THE PROPHET (SAAS) PERFORMED THE HĀJJ AL-TAMATTU.

Imām Ahmad stated that Ḥajjāj related to him, quoting Layth, quoting 'Aqīl, from Ibn Shihāb, from Sālim b. 'Abd Allāh, who said that 'Abd Allāh b. 'Umar stated, "The Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the hājj al-tamattu on 'the farewell pilgrimage', along with the umra. He recited the talbiyya and led his hadīt on from Dhū al-Ḥulayfa. The Messenger of God (SAAS) set off and then recited the talbiyya for the umra and thereafter for the hājj. There were some people who had sacrificial animals and led them forward to Dhū al-Ḥulayfa; some of them did not have animals for sacrifice.

"When the Messenger of God (SAAS) arrived in Mecca, he addressed the people, saying, 'Those of you who brought an animal for sacrifice is not released from his state of ihrām for anything he has so declared until he completes his hijja. Those who have not brought an animal for sacrifice should circumambulate and recite the talbiyya.'"

85. Ibn Kathir goes on to tentatively suggest that the word means "to perform the hajj al-ifrad".
the ka'ba and pass between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa. Then they should shorten their hair and declare their ihram completed. They should then declare the tahlîyya for the hajj and make sacrifice. Those who have no sacrificial animal should fast for three days, or for seven if they return to their families."

"The Messenger of God (SAAS) circumambulated the ka'ba when he arrived in Mecca. He first saluted the corner, then jogged for three circuits of the seven and walked for four. Having completed the circuits of the ka'ba, he performed two rakâ'ât at the maqâm Ibrahim, ‘Abraham’s station’; he then completed the prayer and left. He proceeded on to al-Ṣafâ and circumambulated both it and al-Marwa. He did not declare halâl anything he had previously declared harâm until he had completed his hijja, and he slaughtered his camel at the day for the sacrifice. He thereafter performed the circumambulation of the hajj around the ka'ba. Those who had brought animals for sacrifice did as the Messenger (SAAS) had done."

Imâm Aḥmad stated, "Hajjaj related to us, quoting Layth, quoting ‘Aqîl, from Ibn Shihab, from ‘Urwa b. al-Zubayr (who said that) Ā’isha told him of the Messenger of God (SAAS) having performed the hajj al-tamattû‘ at the ‘umra and on to the hajj and that the other people did as he had. This is similar to what Śālim b. ‘Abd Allâh informed me, from ‘Abd Allâh, concerning the practice of the Messenger of God (SAAS)."

Al-Bukhârî related this hadîth from Yaḥyâ b. Bukayr, while Muslim and Abû Da‘ûd related it from ‘Abd al-Malîk b. Shu‘ayb, from al-Layth, from his father. Al-Nasâ’î related it from Muḥammad b. ‘Abd Allâh b. al-Mubârak al-Makhrami, from Ǧu‘ayyân b. al-Muḥannâ; all three quoted al-Layth b. Sa‘îd, from ‘Aqîl, from al-Zuhri, from ‘Urwa, from Ā’isha. They did so as Imâm Aḥmad, may God have mercy upon him, recounted it.

This hadîth is one that is problematical, relating to all the three accounts (of the hijja).

Regarding the hadîth account of his performing the hajj al-ifrâd, in this there is substantiation for the ‘umra being performed either before the hajj or along with it.

Regarding the account of the special nature of the performance of the hajj al-tamattû‘, (this hadîth) is problematic because he (the source) recounted that the Prophet (SAAS) did not relieve himself of the ihram following his procession between al-Ṣafâ and al-Marwa. And this is not the case with those performing the hajj al-tamattû‘.

Those who claim that he was unable to declare the state of ihram at an end by the fact of his having led a camel to sacrifice substantiate this view by reference to a statement attributed to Ḥafṣa. She asked, “Messenger of God, why

87. The place where the Prophet Abraham stood for prayer. An edifice is built over a stone brought by Isha‘îl when they were building the ka'ba. Pilgrims stop here and perform a prayer of two rakâ'ât after their completion of the circumambulation of the ka'ba.
do some people declare the ihram concluded, while you did not after your 'umra?' He replied, "I had braided my hair and garlanded my sacrificial camel; I could not declare my ihram completed until I had performed the sacrifice."

Their account is implausible, because the ahadith affirming his performing the hajj al-qirān refute this statement and deny his reciting the talbiyya first at the 'umra and then, having passed between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa, he recited the talbiyya for the hajj. This is not reported in this way by anyone with a line of transmission that could be categorized as sahih, hasan or da'if.

Regarding the statement in this ḥadith, "The Messenger of God (ṣaṣṣ) performed the hajj al-tamattu' on 'the farewell pilgrimage', along with the 'umra, if what is meant by this is al-tamattu' specifically, this being the declaration of the conclusion of the ihram state after the passage between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa, then this is not so. For the ḥadith contains material refuting this. Moreover, in the affirmation of his having made the hajj al-qirān there is material contradicting this.

If what is meant here is al-tamattu al-ṣām, or the general enjoyment (of a concession), then that would certainly include the hajj al-qirān; and this is what is meant here.88

The statement, "The Messenger of God (ṣaṣṣ) set off and then recited the talbiyya for the umra and then for the hajj. If by this is meant that he "set off" by pronouncing the word umra before the word hajj, by saying, "I am at Your service, 0 God; an umra in *hajj." This is clear and does not deny (the possibility that it was to be a (bajj) al-qirān.

If by it is meant that he recited the talbiyya for the umra first, and then added to it the hajj much later, but before his performing the circumambulations, then it also constituted hajj al-qirān.

If by it he meant that he recited the talbiyya for the umra and then, having completed its activities, whether he did or did not declare his state of ihram concluded by the leading up of a sacrificial animal, as some claim, but in fact recited the talbiyya for the hajj after finishing the actions for the umra and before his departure for Minā, then this is a view not expressed by any of his Companions, as we have shown above. Those who maintain this are refuted by this lack of testimony and by the fact that it is contradicted by the ahadith that exist to affirm his having performed the hajj al-qirān, as will be shown, and also, indeed, by those ahadith that have come down that substantiate his having performed the hajj al-ifrād, as shown above. But God knows best.

It is clear – though God knows best – that this ḥadith of al-Layth, from ʿAqīl, from al-Zuhri, from Saʿlīm, from Ibn ʿUmar, is also narrated from a different path, from Ibn ʿUmar, when he performed the hajj al-ifrād at the time when al-Ḥajjāj was besieging Ibn al-Zubayr. He was told, "People are disputing over (these two groups); now if only you would postpone your hajj for this year." He replied, "I would in that case do as the Prophet (ṣaṣṣ) did."

88. Ibn Kathīr is here using the tamattu in its literal sense in the second instance.
89. 'umra wa ʿajj should here be understood as fi al-ʿumra wa al-ʿajj.
He was referring to the occasion when he was blocked at the time of al-Ḥudaybiyya. He declared himself in a state of ihram for the ‘umra from Dhū al-Ḥulayfah and then, when he overlooked al-Baydā', said, “I consider both to be one.” Then he recited the talbiyya for the ḥajj along with it (the ‘umra). The narrator believed that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had done this; it was all the same whether he had begun by reciting the talbiyya for the ‘umra and then for the ḥajj. They therefore related it thus, but there is controversy over this, as we will show.

Explanation for this exists in the ḥadīth that ʿAbd Allāh b. Wahb narrated, as follows, “Mālik b. Anas and others informed me that Nāfiʿ had related to them that ʿAbd Allāh b. Umar went forth on the pilgrimage during the period of civil disorder. He said, ‘If I should be blocked from access to the kaʿba we would do as the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had done.’ He left and recited the talbiyya for the ‘umra and travelled on until he arrived at a point above al-Baydā'. He then turned to his Companions and said, ‘I consider both to be nothing but one; I testify to you that I am committing myself to performing the ḥajj along with the ‘umra.’ He continued on until he reached the kaʿba, which he circumambulated. He performed the passages between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa seven times and did not add thereto. He considered that that was sufficient. He also brought an animal for sacrifice.”

The author of the ṣaḥīḥ collection (al-Bukhārī) promulgated it from a ḥadīth of Mālik. And both scholars gave it from a ḥadīth of ʿUbayd Allāh, from Nāfiʿ. ʿAbd al-Razzāq narrated it from ʿUbayd Allāh and ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz b. Abū Rawwād, from Nāfiʿ in similar words. In that account it ends by saying, “That was what the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) did.”

Also there is al-Bukhārī’s account in which he quotes Qutayba, quoting Layth, from Nāfiʿ, who said, “Ibn ʿUmar wanted to perform the pilgrimage when al-Ḥajjāj was besieging Ibn al-Zubayr. He (Ibn ʿUmar) was told, ‘People are engaged in a conflict; we are afraid they will block you.’ He replied, ‘There is indeed in the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) a good model for you. I shall therefore do as he did. I testify to you that I am committing myself to the ‘umra.’

“He proceeded until he was up above al-Baydā'. Then he said, ‘I consider the ḥajj and the ‘umra to be one; I testify to you all that I have committed myself to a ḥajj along with my ‘umra.’ He brought an animal for sacrifice that he had purchased at Qudayd. He added nothing else to that, and he did not declare permissible anything for which he had declared his ihram. He did not shave, nor did he cut his hair short until it was the day for the sacrifice. He then slaughtered his animal and shaved. He considered that he had completed the circumambulations for both the ḥajj and the ‘umra by his first circumambulation.’

Ibn ʿUmar concluded, “It was thus that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) acted.”

Al-Bukhārī stated that Yaʿqūb b. ʿIbrāhīm related to him, quoting Ibn ʿUliyya, from Ayyūb, from Nāfiʿ, (who said) that ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAbd Allāh, the son of Ibn ʿUmar, came into the latter’s house at which was Ibn ʿUmar’s ride (for the pilgrimage). 'Abd Allāh said, “I am uneasy and feel that there may be some conflict between the people that may prevent your access to the ka'ba. What will you do then?”

“Ibn 'Umar replied, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) left (on the pilgrimage) and the Quraysh disbelievers prevented his access to the ka'ba. If that happens to me, I will do as he did. You had a good model in the Messenger of God (SAAS). And I will therefore do as he did. I testify to you that I am committing myself to a hajj along with my 'umra.' He proceeded on and performed for both one circumambulation.”

Al-Bukhārī also narrated it thus from Ibn al-Nu‘mān, from Ḥammād b. Zayd, from Ayyūb b. Abū Tamīma al-Sakhtiyānī, from Nāfi'. Muslim narrated it from a hadīth drawn from both of these, from Ayyūb.

Ibn 'Umar, may God be pleased with him, imitated the Messenger of God (SAAS), in remaining uninvolved with the enemy’s blockade and in sufficing with one circumambulation for both the hajj and the 'umra. That was because he had first declared himself in the iḥrām state for an 'umra, for that to be part of the hajj al-tamattūṭ. He feared there would be a blockade and so combined both, inserting the hajj before the 'umra and before the circumambulation, and it thus became a hajj al-qirān.

What he said was, “I consider both to be nothing but one.” By this he meant, “There is no difference between a person being blocked from the hajj or from the 'umra or from both.” And when he reached Mecca, he accomplished both sufficiently by his first circumambulation – as he clearly stated in the first text we gave. In that he stated, “He considered that he had completed the circumambulation for both the hajj and the 'umra by his first circumambulation.”

Ibn 'Umar stated, “It was thus that the Messenger of God (SAAS) acted.” By this he meant that the Messenger of God (SAAS) had accomplished both the hajj and the 'umra sufficiently by one circumambulation – that is, between al-Ṣaḥā and al-Marwa.

This gives evidence that Ibn 'Umar spoke in favour of the hajj al-qirān.

Therefore al-Nasā’ī narrated, from Muḥammad b. Mānsūr, from Ṣufyān b. ‘Uyayna, from Ayyūb b. Mūsā, from Nāfi’ that “Ibn 'Umar combined together the hajj and the 'umra and performed one circumambulation”.

Al-Nasā’ī then narrated it from ‘Aṭī b. Maymūn al-Raqīṭ, from Ṣufyān b. ‘Uyayna, from Ismā’īl b. Umayya, and Ayyūb b. Mūsā and Ayyūb al-Sakhtiyānī, and ‘Abd Allāh b. ‘Umar, all four of whom quoted Nāfi’ as saying that, “Ibn 'Umar came to Dhū al-Ḥulayfah and recited the talbiyya for the 'umra. He then became concerned that he might be blocked from the ka'ba.” And he proceeded to relate the hadīth, and his including the hajj with the 'umra, the result being his performing the hajj al-qirān.

The implication of this is that when some narrators heard the statement of Ibn 'Umar, “And I will therefore do as the Messenger of God (SAAS) did”, and his other statement, “It was thus that the Messenger of God (SAAS) acted”, they believed that the latter had begun by reciting the talbiyya for the ’umra, then did so for the hajj, combining the latter with the former prior to the circumambulation, and so they related the hadith with this understanding.

But Ibn Umar did not mean this, but implied what we have indicated above. God, however, best knows what is correct.

Moreover, supposing that he did recite the talbiyya for the ’umra first and combined the hajj with it prior to the circumambulation, this would then constitute hajj al-griran, not a case of hajj al-tamattu’ al-khafs (in the technical sense), it thus being evidence for those who support the idea of the superiority of the hajj al-tamattu’. But God, Almighty is He, knows best.

Also there is the hadith related by al-Bukhari in his sahih collection in which he stated that Musa b. Isma’il related to him, quoting Hammam, from Qatada, quoting Mutarrif, from Imam, who said, “During the time of the Prophet (SAAS), we performed the al-tamattu’. Then revelation came in the Qur’an (about the hajj al-tamattu’) and a man said whatever he wished.”

Muslim narrated this from Muhammad b. al-Muthannah, from ‘Abd al-‘Samad b. Abi Warrith, from Hammam, from Qatada.

What is implied here is that it is the mut’a that is more general than the al-griran and the al-tamattu’ of the hajj.

This is shown by what is narrated by Muslim, from a hadith of Shu’ba and Sa’id b. ‘Aruba, from Qatada, from Mutarrif, from ‘Abd Allâh b. al-Shikhir, from Imam b. al-Husayn (who said) that the Messenger of God (SAAS) combined the hajj with the ’umra, and he went on to narrate all the hadith.

Most of the early authorities apply the term al-mut’a to the al-griran. As al-Bukhari stated – that Qutayba related to him, quoting Hajjaj b. Muhammam Al-Awar, from Shu’ba, from ‘Amr b. Murrâ, from Sa’id b. al-Musayyab, who said, “Ali and Uthman, may God be pleased with them both, had a disagreement, while they were at Usfan, over the al-mut’a. ‘Ali said, ‘Is what you want to put an end to something the Messenger of God (SAAS) did?’ When he saw that (to be the case) ‘Ali b. Abû Ta’lib recited the talbiyya for both (the hajj and the ’umra) together.”

Muslim related this also from a hadith of Shu’ba, from Qatada, from ‘Abd Allâh b. Shaqiq. (In that version) ‘Ali said to him, “Don’t you realize that it was only with the Messenger of God (SAAS), that we performed the hajj al-tamattu’?” He replied, “Indeed yes; but we were afraid.”

90. It should be remembered that al-tamattu’ applies to what is temporary and is synonymous with the term mut’a. The narrator is referring to this connotation in the foregoing tradition. The “man” to whom he alludes is Umar, who subsequently forbade the practice.
Then there is the hadith narrated by Muslim from a hadith of Ghundar, from Shu'ba, and from Ubayd Allah b. Mu'adh, from his father, from Shu'ba, from Muslim b. Mikhrag al-Qurri, who heard Ibn 'Abbas say, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) recited the talbiyya for the 'umra, while his Companions did so for the hajj. The Messenger of God (SAAS) did not declare his state of ihram terminated, nor did those of his Companions who had brought an animal to be sacrificed. The rest of them did (declare their state of ihram terminated).”

Abū Dā'ūd al-Ṭayalisi narrated it in his musnad collection, as did Rawḥ b. Ubada, from Shu'ba, from Muslim al-Qurri, from Ibn ‘Abbas, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) and his Companions recited the talbiyya for the hajj. Those of them who did not have a had, for sacrifice (then) declared their state of ihram terminated, while those who did bring a had did not declare this.” The hadith proceeds.

If we consider both accounts authentic, then the conclusion favours the hajj al-qiran. If we decline acceptance of both, its probative value would be suspended. If we give preference to the account of Muslim in his collection concerning the 'umra, where it is stated on the authority of ‘Abbas that he (the Prophet (SAAS) declared the ihram of the hajj (al-isrā'), then this would argue in favour of the hajj al-qiran, especially since evidence supporting this will be given from Ibn 'Abbas.

Muslim narrated from a hadith of Ghundar and Mu'adh b. Mu'adh, from Shu'ba, from al-Ḥakam, from Mujahid, from Ibn ‘Abbas, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) said, “This is an 'umra that we have considered a mut'a; those not having brought a had may consider their ihram fully concluded. The 'umra has entered into the al-hajj until Judgement Day.”

Al-Bukhārī narrated from Ādam b. Abū Iyyās and Muslim from a hadith of Ghundar, both quoting Shu'ba, from Abū Jamra, who said, “I declared my intent to perform the hajj al-tamattu’, but people advised against this. So I asked Ibn 'Abbas and he told me to do so. After that I seemed to see in my sleep a man say to me, ‘It is a hajj mabruk and a mut'a’ that is accepted.’ I told Ibn ‘Abbas of this (dream) and he said, Allāhu Akbar! ‘God is most Great!’ A practice of Abū al-Qāsim, God’s peace and blessings be upon him!”

By the term mut'a used here, the word qiran is really meant.

Al-Quqaynī and others stated, quoting Malik b. Anas, from Ibn Shihāb, from Muḥammad b. ‘Abd Allāh b. al-Ḥarīth b. Nawfal b. al-Ḥarīth b. ‘Abd al-Muțṭalib, who is quoted as saying that he heard Sa'‘d b. Abū Waqqās and al-Ḍahhāk b. Qays, that year when Mu'ayyāya b. Abū Sufyān made the hajj, making reference to the performing of the tamattu' of the 'umra leading to the hajj. Al-Ḍahhāk said, “No one would do that unless ignorant of God’s instruction!” Sa'‘d replied,

91. That is, one that accords with the practice of the Prophet (SAAS), and is therefore supposed to be acceptable to God.
92. Some editions of the sakīh of al-Bukhārī give the word 'umra instead of the mut'a given here.
“Cousin, what you say is quite wrong!” Al-Daḥḥāk went on. “‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb used to forbid it.” Sa‘d responded, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) did it, and we did it along with him.”

Al-Tirmidhī narrated it, as did al-Nasā’ī, from Qutayba, from Mālik. Al-Tirmidhī stated it to be saḥīḥ, “authentic”.

‘Abd al-Razzāq stated, from Mu‘tamir b. Sulaymān and ‘Abd Allāh b. al-Mubārak, both quoting Sulaymān al-Taymī, quoting Ghunaym b. Qays, who said, “I asked Sa‘d b. Abū Waqqās about the performance of the tamattū‘ of the ṣumra leading to the ḥajj. He replied, ‘I did it along with the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). And at that time he’—meaning Mu‘āwiyah—‘was an unbeliever in al-ʿUrh’—meaning Mecca.”

Muslim narrated it from a hadīth of Shu‘bā, and of Sufyān al-Thawrī, Yaḥyā b. Sa‘d and Marwān al-Fazarī, all four of them quoting Sulaymān al-Taymī, who said, “I heard Ghunaym b. Qays say, ‘I asked Sa‘d about the mu‘a, and he replied, ‘We did perform it; and at that time he was an unbeliever in al-ʿUrh.’”

In the account of Yaḥyā b. Sa‘d, the hadīth ends, “meaning Mu‘āwiyah”.

All of this has to do with the application of the term al-tamattū‘ to something more general than the al-tamattū‘ al-khaṣ. That is, it assumes the declaration of the iḥrām state for the ṣumra, then completing it and thereafter again declaring the iḥrām for the ḥajj, and it is (also more general) than the ḥajj al-qirān. In fact, what Sa‘d said about it was evidence for the term al-tamattū‘ being applied to the performance of the ṣumra pilgrimage in the months of the ḥajj. This relates to them having gone on the pilgrimage while Mu‘āwiyah was still an unbeliever, in Mecca, applying either to the ṣumra at al-Ḥudaybiyya or the ṣumrat al-qadā—this being more likely. Regarding the ṣumrat al-jīrānā, Mu‘āwiyah had accepted Islam along with his father (Abū Sufyān) the night of the conquest of Mecca. We have narrated how he had cut short the hair of the Prophet (ṢAAS), using an iron arrow head on one of his ṣumra pilgrimages; that was, undoubtedly, the ṣumra from al-Jīrānā. But God knows best.

Accounts of the pilgrimage as narrated by those who maintain that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) performed the ḥajj al-qirān, along with the relevant aḥādīth.

The Account of the Commander of the Believers, ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb, may God be pleased with him.

It is given above how al-Bukhārī narrated from a hadīth of Abū ‘Amr al-Awzā‘ī, quoting Yaḥyā b. Abū Kathīr, from ʿIkrima, from Ibn ʿAbbās, from ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb, who said, “I heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) say in Wādi “Tonight I received a visitation from a spirit from my Lord, Almighty and Glorious is He. He told me, “Pray in this blessed valley and say, ‘(Let it be) an ‘umra within a hajj.’”’

The hāfiz al-Bayhaqi stated that he was informed by ‘Ali b. Aḥmad b. ‘Umar b. Ḥafṣ al-Maqburi in Baghdād, who quoted Aḥmad b. Sulaymān as saying, “It was narrated to ‘Abd al-Malik b. Muḥammad while I listened, as follows, ‘Abū Zayd al-Harawi related to me, quoting ‘Ali b. al-Mubārak, quoting Yahyā b. Abū Kathir, quoting Ṭkrima, quoting Ibn ‘Abbās, quoting ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb, who said, ‘The Messenger of God (SAAS) stated, ‘Gabriel, may peace be upon him, carne to me while I was at al-‘Aqiq. He said, “Pray two raka‘at in this blessed valley. And say, ‘An ‘umra within a hajj.’ For the ‘umra has entered within the hajj until Judgement Day.”’”

Al-Bayhaqi then stated, “Al-Bukhārī narrated it from Abū Zayd al-Harawi.”

Imām Aḥmad stated that Ḥashim related to him, quoting Sayyār, from Abū Wā’il, who said that there was a man who had been a Christian, named al-Ṣabī b. Ma‘bad, who wanted to engage in the jihad. He was told, “Begin by making the pilgrimage.” So he went to al-Ash‘ari who told him to declare his intention of making the hajj and the ‘umra together. He did so. While he was reciting the talbiyya, Yazīd b. Sūlān and Salīm b. Rabī‘a passed by. One of them said to the other, “This fellow wanders further astray than his people’s donkeys!” The young man overheard this and it annoyed him. And so when he reached Mecca, he went to ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb and related that to him. ‘Umar told him, “You have been led aright, in the practice of your Prophet (SAAS).” (The narrator continued) “On another occasion I heard him use the words, ‘You have been well-guided to the practice of your Prophet (SAAS).’”

Imām Aḥmad also related this from Yahyā b. Sa‘d al-Qaṭṭān, from al-A‘mash, from Shaqīq, from Abū Wā’il, from al-Ṣabī b. Ibn Ma‘bad, quoting ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb. In that version, the latter said, “The two men said nothing (of importance); you have been well-guided to the practice of your Prophet (SAAS).”

He also narrated it from ‘Abd al-Razzāiq, from Sufyān al-Thawrī, from Ṭanṣūr, from Abū Wā’il. And also from Ghundar, from Shu‘ba, from al-Ḥakam, from Abū Wā’il, and from Sufyān b. ‘Uyayna, from ‘Abdu b. Abū Lubaba, from Abū Wā’il, who said, “Al-Ṣabī b. Ma‘bad said, ‘I had been a Christian, but accepted Islam. I declared my intention to make a hajj and an ‘umra, and Yazīd b. Sūlān and Salīm b. Rabī‘a heard me while I was reciting the talbiyya for them both. They commented, ‘This fellow wanders further astray than his people’s donkeys!’ After their words, I felt as if a mountain had been loaded on me! So I approached ‘Umar and told him. He then went to them and berated them. After that he came to me and said, “You have been well-guided to the practice of the Prophet (SAAS).”’”

“Abdū stated, ‘Abū Wā’il commented, ‘I and Masrūq used to go often to that man al-Ṣabī b. Ma‘bad, and ask him about this.’”
The lines of transmission for this are excellent and accord with the criteria for the designation sahih, “authentic”. Abu Da‘ud, al-Nasa‘i and Ibn Maja related it from various lines, from Abī Wā'il Shaqiq b. Salama, who narrated it. Al-Nasa‘i stated, in the chapter on the pilgrimage in his hadith collection, that Muḥammad b. ‘Ali b. al-Ḥasan b. Shaqiq related it to him, quoting his father, from Jamrat al-Sukkarī, from Muṭarrīf, from Salama b. Kuḥayl, from Ṭawūs, from Ibn ‘Abbās, from ‘Umar, who said, “I swear by God, I forbid you performing the mut`a; (although) it is certainly in God’s Book, and although the Prophet (SAAS) performed it.”

The chain of transmission for this is excellent.

An Account relating to the two Commanders of the Believers, ‘Uthmān and ‘Alī, may God be pleased with them both.

Imám ʿAḥmad stated that it was related to him by Muḥammad b. Jaʿfar, quoting Shuʿba, from ʿAmr b. Mūrra, from Saʿd b. al-Musayyab, who said, “‘Ali and Uthmān were together at Usfān. Uthmān was forbidding the performance of the mut`a or the ʿumra. And so ‘Ali said, ‘Why are you forbidding something the Messenger of God (SAAS) did?’ Uthmān replied, ‘Enough of that!’” This abbreviated form is the manner in which Imám ʿAḥmad narrated this. Both scholars of the sahih collections promulgated it from a hadith of Shuʿba, from ʿAmr b. Mūrra, from Saʿd b. al-Musayyab, who said, “While they were at Usfān, Uthmān and ‘Ali differed over the mut`a. ‘Ali asked, ‘Why are you forbidding something the Messenger of God (SAAS) did?’ When ‘Ali saw that (that Uthmān was forbidding the mut`a) he recited the talbiyya for both.” The phraseology given by al-Bukhārī is similar.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Muḥammad b. Bāshshār related it to him, quoting Ghundar, from Shuʿba, from al-Ḥakam, from ʿAli b. al-Ḥusayn, from Marwān b. al-Ḥakam, who said, “I witnessed Uthmān and ‘Ali, while Uthmān was forbidding performance of the mut`a and that both be combined. When ‘Ali saw (this attitude) he recited the talbiyya for both, saying, ‘At Your service, O God, for an ʿumra and a hajj.’ He (ʿAli) went on, ‘I’m not one to abandon a practice of the Prophet (SAAS), because of what anyone says.’”

Al-Nasāʾi narrated it from a hadith of Shuʿba, and from a hadith of al-Aʿmash, from Muslim al-Baṭān, from ʿAli b. al-Ḥusayn. Imám ʿAḥmad stated that it was related to him by Muḥammad b. Jaʿfar, quoting Shuʿba, from Qatāda, who said, “Abd Allāh b. Shaqiq stated, ‘Uthmān was forbidding the mut`a and ‘Ali was recommending it. And so Uthmān said to ‘Ali, “You are doing so and such!” ‘Ali replied, “You know that we performed the mut`a along with the Messenger of God (SAAS).” “Yes,” (replied Uthmān) “but we were afraid (then).”’”
Muslim related it from a hadith of Shu‘ba.

This constitutes recognition from Uthmān, may God be pleased with him, of what ʿAlī, may God be pleased with him, told him. And it is well known that ʿAlī, may God be pleased with him, declared the ihram on the hijjat al-wadā by reciting the talbiyya in the same manner as the Messenger of God (SAAS). ʿAlī had brought an animal for sacrifice and the Prophet (SAAS) ordered him to maintain his ihram state. The Prophet (SAAS) allowed ʿAlī to share in his own hadi, as will be shown.

Mālik narrated in his work al-Muwata from Ja‘far b. Muḥammad, from his father, that al-Miqdād b. al-ʿAwād went in to see ʿAlī b. ʿAbū Ṭalib at al-Suqyā while he was preparing leaves and crushed grain to feed his young camels. Al-Miqdād told him, “This Uthmān b. ʿAffān is forbidding that the hija and the umra be combined.” ʿAlī left, his hands bearing traces of the camel food mash. (The narrator commented), “And I’ll not forget the sight of the mixture on his hands!” When ʿAlī went in to Uthmān, he asked, “Are you forbidding that the hija and the umra be combined?” Uthmān replied, “That’s my view.” At that ʿAlī left in anger, saying, “At Your service, O God, for a hijja and an umra together!”

Abū Daʾūd stated in his work the Sunan that Yaḥyā b. Maʿīn related to him, quoting Hajjāj, quoting Yūnus, from Abū ʿIshaq, from al-ʿĀzib, who said, “I was with ʿAlī when the Messenger of God (SAAS) appointed him Governor of Yemen.” And he went on to relate the arrival of ʿAlī.

(The tradition goes on to state) ʿAlī said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) asked me, ‘How have you done?’ I replied, ‘I have only recited the talbiyya (in the manner) of the Prophet (SAAS). I have brought a hadī and I have combined (both the umra and the hija).’”

Al-Nasāʾī narrated it from a hadith of Yaḥyā b. Maʿīn with his line of transmission which accords with the criteria of the two scholars (al-Bukhārī and Muslim). The ḥāfiz al-Bayhaqi explained it away by the fact of this phraseology not being in the (long) text of the hadith of Jābir.

There is some dispute over this explanation, because the performance of the hijj al-qirān is narrated from a hadith of Jābir b. ʿAbd Allāh, as will be shown shortly. If God, Almighty is He, wishes.

Ibn Hibbān narrated in his sahih collection, from ʿAlī b. Abū Ṭalib, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) left Medina and I left from Yemen. I said, ‘I am at Your service, O God, with the same invocation made by the Prophet (SAAS).’” The Prophet (SAAS) said, “I recited the talbiyya for the hijj and the umra combined.”

The Account of Anas b. Mālik, may God be pleased with him.

A group of the tabiʿūn, “the first generation scholars”, related it; we will quote from them in alphabetical order.
BAKR B. ‘ABD ALLĀH AL-MUZANJ.

THĀBIT AL-BUNĀNĪ.

Imām Ahmad stated that Wāḥīd related to him, from Ibn Abū Laylā, from Thabit, from Anas, that the Prophet (ṢAAS) said, “At Your service, O God, for an ‘umra and a ḥijja combined.” ʿAl-Hasan al-Baṣrī is alone in quoting it on this line.

Imām Ahmad stated that Rawḥ related to him, quoting Ashʿath, from Anas b. Malik (who said), “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) came to Mecca. They recited the talbiyya for a ḥajj and an ’umra. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) ordered them, after they had circumbulated the kaba and passed between al-Šaṣa and al-Marwa, to declare their ihram concluded and to make an ’umra. It seemed as if the people were shocked by that. And the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, ‘Had I not brought a hadī I would have declared my ihram concluded.’ The people then did declare their ihram concluded and performed the ḥajj al-tamattu’."

The ḥāфиз Abū Bakr al-Bazzār stated that al-Ḥasan b. Qazaḥa related to him, quoting Sufyān b. Ḥabīb, quoting Ashʿath, from al-Ḥasan, from Anas, (who said), “The Prophet (ṢAAS) and his Companions recited the talbiyya for a ḥajj and an ’umra. And when they arrived in Mecca, they circumbulated the kaba and passed between al-Šaṣa and al-Marwa. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) ordered them to declare their ihram concluded, but they were afraid to do so. He therefore said, ‘ Declare your ihram concluded. If I did not have a hadī, I would declare my ihram concluded.’”

Al-Bazzār then stated, “We know of no one except Ashʿath b. ʿAbd al-Malik who narrated this from al-Ḥasan.”

HUMAYD B. TĪRUWAYH AL-ṬAWĪL.

Imām Ahmad stated that Yahyā related to him, from Ḥumayd (who said), “I heard Anas say, ‘I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say, “At Your service, with a hajj, and an umra and a hajj.”’

This line of transmission is two-thirds in accord with the criteria of the two scholars. They did not promulgate it. And none of the authors of the books (of hadith) gave it from this line of transmission. However, Muslim did narrate it from Yahyā b. Yahyā, from Hushaym, from Yahyā b. Abū Ishāq and ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz b. ʿUshayb and Ḥumayd (who said that) they heard Anas b. Mālik say, “I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) recite the talbiyya for both combined. (He said) ‘At Your service for an umra and a hajj.’”

Imām ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalib stated that Yaʿmur b. Yusur related to him, quoting ʿAbd Allāh, quoting Ḥumayd al-ʿTawīl, from Anas b. Mālik, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) brought many animals for sacrifice and said, ‘At Your service, with an umra and a hajj.’ I was there at the right flank of his camel.”

Aḥmad was also alone in giving it from this line of transmission.

HUMAYD B. HILĀL AL-ṢADAWĪ AL-BAṢRĪ.

The ḥāfiẓ Abū Bakr al-Bazzār stated in his musnad that Muḥammad b. al-Muṭṭalib related to him, quoting ʿAbd al-Wahhāb, from Ayyūb, from Abū Qīlābā, from Anas b. Mālik, and it is reported from Salama b. Shābīb, quoting ʿAbd al-Razzāq, quoting Maʿmar, from Ayyūb, from Abū Qīlābā, and Ḥumayd b. Hilāl, from Anas, who said, “I was mounted behind Abū ʿAbbās, and his knee was touching that of the Messenger of God (SAAS), while he was reciting the talbiyya for the hajj and the umra.”

This line of transmission is excellent and strong and conforms to the criteria for the designation saḥīh, “authentic”; they (the compilers of the saḥīh collections) did not include it.

Al-Bazzār explained this by saying that the person reciting the talbiyya for the hajj and the umra was Abū ʿAbbās. He said, “And the Prophet (SAAS) did not contradict him.”

This explanation is controversial and unnecessary, because that (fact of the Prophet (SAAS) having recited the talbiyya) comes by various routes from Anas, as above and to follow. Moreover, (grammatically) it is more correct for the pronoun to be related to the closer of the two persons mentioned, which in this instance constitutes very strong evidence. But God knows best.

In the account of ʿAlī b. Abū al-Jaʿd, from Anas, will come a clear refutation of this explanation.

FROM ZAYD B. ASLAM.

“Al-Ḥasan b. ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz al-Jarawī related it to us, as did Muḥammad b. Miskín. They both said, ‘Bīshr b. Bakr related (it) to us, from Saʿd b. ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz, from Zayd b. Aslam, from Anas.’

I note that this line of transmission meets the criteria for ṣāḥīḥ, “authentic”, but they (the authors of the canonical collections) did not promulgate it from this line.

The ḥāfīz Abū Bakr al-Bayhaqī narrated it in a more simple text. He stated that Abū ʿAbd Allāh al-Ḥāfīz and Abū Bakr Aḥmad b. al-Ḥasan al-Qāḍī related to him, that Abū al-ʿAbbas Muḥammad b. Yaʿqūb related to them, quoting al-ʿAbbās b. al-Walīd b. Yazīd, quoting his father, quoting Shuʿayb b. ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz, from Zayd b. Aslam and others, who said that, “A man came to Ibn ʿUmar and asked, ‘With what intention did the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) recite the talbiyya?’ Ibn ʿUmar replied, ‘He recited the talbiyya for the ḥajj, and (the man then) left.’

“The man then came to him the following year and asked, ‘With what intention did the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) recite the talbiyya?’ Ibn ʿUmar asked, ‘Didn’t you come to me last year?’ ‘Yes’, the man replied, ‘but Anas b. Mālik claims that he performed the ḥajj al-qirān.’ Ibn ʿUmar commented, ‘Anas b. Mālik (was then so young that he) used to go in to see the women when their heads were uncovered! I was right underneath the camel of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), its saliva actually touching me, and I heard him reciting the talbiyya for the ḥajj.’”

FROM SĀLĪM B. ABD AL-JAʿD AL-GHAṬAFĀNĪ AL-KUFI.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Yaḥyā b. ʿĀdam related to him, quoting Sharīk, from Mānsūr, from Sālim b. Abū al-Jaʿd, from Anas b. Mālik, who gave a line of transmission back to the Prophet (ṢAAS), to the effect that he combined the ḥajj with the ʿumra and said, “At Your service, for an ʿumra and a ḥijja together.”

(This hadīth may be classified as) ḥasan, “good”; they (the compilers of the canonical collections) did not promulgate it.

Imām Aḥmad stated that ʿAḥfān related to him, quoting Abū ʿAwāna, quoting Uthmān b. al-Mughīra, from Sālim b. Abū al-Jaʿd, from Saʿd, the freed-man of al-Ḥasan b. ʿAlī, who said, “We went forth with ‘Alī, and when we reached Dhu al-Ḥulayfa, ‘Alī said, ‘I wish to combine the ḥajj with the ʿumra. Those who wish should speak as I do.’ He then recited the talbiyya. He said, ‘At Your service for a ḥijja and an ʿumra.’”

The narrator went on, “And Sālim said, ‘Anas b. Mālik stated to me, “I swear by God, my leg was actually touching that of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), while he was reciting the talbiyya for them both together.”’

This line of transmission is also excellent; they (the compilers of the canonical collections) did not promulgate it.

This text refutes the explanation by the ḥāfīz al-Bazzār of the hadīth given by Ḥumayd b. Hilāl quoting Anas, as referred to above. But God knows best.
FROM SULAYMĀN B. TARKHĀN AL-TAYMI.

The ḥāfiz Abū Bakr al-Bazzār stated that Yahyā b. Ḥabīb b. Ṭārīq b. ‘Arabī related to him, quoting al-Muṭṭamir b. Sulaymān, who said that he heard his father quote Anas b. Mālik as saying, “I heard the Prophet (ṢAAS) recite the ṭalḥiyya for both together.”

Al-Bazzār then said, “The only person relating this from al-Taymi is his son al-Muṭṭamir. And only Yahyā b. Ḥabīb al-Ṭārīq b. ‘Arabī heard this from him.”

I note that this meets the criteria for the category saḥīḥ, “authentic”. They (the compilers of the canonical collections) did not promulgate it.

FROM SUWAYD B. ḤUJAYR.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Muhammad b. Ja‘far related to him, quoting Shu‘bā, from Abū Qaza‘a Suwayd b. Ḥujayr, from Anas b. Mālik, who said, “I was mounted behind Abū Ṣa‘d b. Ṭalḥa. The knee of Abū Ṣa‘d b. Ṭalḥa was almost knocking against that of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), while the latter was reciting the talḥiyya for both.”

This line of transmission is excellent. Aḥmad is alone in giving it. They (the compilers of the canonical collections) did not promulgate it. In it there is a clear refutation of the view of the ḥāfiz al-Bazzār.

FROM ‘ABD ALLĀH B. ZAYD ABŪ QILĀBA AL-JARMI.

Imām Aḥmad stated that ‘Abd al-Rażzaq related to him, quoting Ma‘mar, from Ayyūb, from Abū Qilāba, from Anas, who said, “I was mounted behind Abū Ṣa‘d b. Ṭalḥa while he rode beside the Prophet (ṢAAS). My leg was actually touching the stirrup of the latter, and I heard him reciting the talḥiyya for the ḥajj and the ‘umra.”

Al-Bukhārī narrated to him, from various lines, from Ayyūb, from Abū Qilāba, from Anas, who said, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) performed the al-zuhr prayer in Medina with four raḵa‘āt and the al-‘asr prayer in Dhū al-Ḥulayfā with two raḵa‘āt. He then spent the night there, and in the morning mounted his camel. When it bore him out above al-Baydā’, he praised and glorified God and spoke the words Allāhu Akbar! ‘God is most Great!’ He then recited the talḥiyya for both together, the ḥajj and the ‘umra. And the people with him recited the talḥiyya for both together.”

In another account from him, he (Anas) said, “I was mounted behind Abū Ṣa‘d b. Ṭalḥa while they were reciting the talḥiyya for both together, the ḥajj with the ‘umra.”

And in another account, from Ayyūb, from “a man”, Anas is quoted as saying, “He spent the night there. Next morning he performed the al-ṣuḥḥ prayer, then mounted his camel. When it bore him to al-Bayda', he recited the talbiyya for an 'umra and a hajj.'

FROM 'ABD AL-'AZIZ B. SUHAYB.

I have given his account above, with that of Ḥumayd al-Ṭawil from him, given by Muslim.

FROM 'ALI B. ZAYD B. JUDĀN.

The ḥāfiz Abū Bakr al-Bazzār stated that Ibrāhīm b. Sa'īd related to him, quoting 'Alī b. Ḥakīm, from Sharīk, from 'Alī b. Zayd, from Anas, who said, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAṢ) recited the talbiyya for both together."

This tradition is gharib, "unilateral", from this line, and none of the compilers of the canonical collections included it; though it does meet their criteria.

FROM QATADA B. DA'ĀMA AL-SADŪSI.

Imām ʿAbd al-Qādir al-Maʻānī stated that both Bahz and ʿAbd al-Ṣamad al-Maʻānī related to him, saying, "Ḥammām b. Yaḥyā related to us, quoting Qatāda, who said, 'I asked Anas b. Mālik, 'How many times did the Messenger of God (ṢAAṢ) perform the pilgrimage?' He replied, 'One ḥijja; and he also performed the 'umra four times - that at the time of al-Ḥudaybiyya, that in Dhu al-Qa'da from Medina, that from al-Ji'rāna in Dhu al-Qa'da when he divided up the booty from the battle of Ḥunayn, and that along with his ḥijja.'"

Both scholars (al-Bukhārī and Muslim) included it from a hadith of Ḥammām b. Yaḥyā.

FROM MUṢ'AB B. SULAYM AL-ZUBAYRĪ, THEIR FREED-MAN.

Imām ʿAbd al-Qādir al-Maʻānī stated that Wākid related to him, quoting Muṣ'ab b. Sulaym, who said that he heard Anas b. Mālik say, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAṢ) recite the talbiyya for a ḥijja and an 'umra."

ʿAbd al-Qādir is alone in giving this.

FROM YAḤYĀ B. ISḤĀQ AL-HADRĀMI.

Imām ʿAbd al-Qādir al-Maʻānī stated that Husaym related to him, quoting Yaḥyā b. Ishāq and 'Abd al-'Azīz b. Suhayb and Ḥumayd al-Ṭawil, who said that they heard Anas say, "I heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAṢ) recite the talbiyya for the ḥajj and the 'umra together. He said, 'At Your service, for an 'umra and a ḥajj! At Your service for an 'umra and a ḥajj!'"
It has been shown above that Muslim narrated it from Yahya b. Yahya, from Hushaym.

Imam Ahmad also stated that 'Abd al-Aqil related to him, from Yahya, from Anas, who said, “We went forth to Mecca with the Messenger of God (SAAS). And I heard him say, ‘At Your service for an ‘umra and a hajj.’”

FROM ABU ASMA' AL-SAYQAL.

Imam Ahmad stated that Hasan related to him, quoting Zuhayr and that Ahmad b. 'Abd al-Malik related to him, quoting Zuhayr, from Abu Ishtaq, from Abu Asma' al-Sayqal, from Anas b. Malik, who said, “We went forth, shouting (the talbiyya) for the hajj. And when we reached Mecca, the Messenger of God (SAAS) ordered us to make it into an ‘umra. He said, ‘If I had known before hand what I came to learn, I would have made it into an ‘umra; but I had brought the hadd and have combined the hajj with the ‘umra.’”

Al-Nasai narrated this from Hannad, from Abu al-Ahwas, from Abu Ishtaq, from Abu Asma' al-Sayqal, from Anas b. Malik, who said, “I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) recite the talbiyya for both.”

FROM ABU QUDAMA AL-HANAFI; HIS NAME IS ALSO GIVEN AS MUHAMMAD B. 'UBAYD.

Imam Ahmad stated that Rawi b. Ubada related to him, quoting Shu'ba, from Yunus b. Ubayd, from Abu Qudama al-Hanafi, who said, “I asked Anas for what the Messenger of God (SAAS) had recited the talbiyya. He replied, ‘I heard him seven times recite the talbiyya for an ‘umra and a hajj.’”

Imam Ahmad is alone in giving this. The line of transmission is excellent and strong. And to God go all praise and credit, and through Him come success and security.

Ibn Hibban narrated in his Sahih collection, that Anas b. Malik said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) combined between the hajj and the ‘umra, and the people did so with him.”

The hafiz al-Bayhaqi gave some of these same quotations from Anas b. Malik and then went on to offer an explanation that is controversial.

He concludes, “It was Anas who was in doubt (regarding the hajj of the Prophet), but not the others apart from him. It is likely that he had (merely) heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) instruct others how they should recite the talbiyya for the hajj al-qiran, and not that he (the Prophet (SAAS)) did so himself. But God knows best.”

He went on, “This is also narrated from others than Anas b. Malik, but there are questions over its reliability.”
I observe that the apparent controversiality of this statement will not be hidden from anyone who contemplates it. It might well be best, therefore, to disregard it, for it creates doubts about the memory of a Companion from whom others, in substantial numbers, have narrated this tradition, as shown above. And opening up this issue would lead to major difficulty. But God, Almighty is He, knows best.

THE HADITH OF AL-BARAA’ B. AZIZ ON THE HAJJ AL-QIRAN.

The ḥāfiẓ Abū Bakr al-Bayhaqī stated that Abū al-Ḥusayn b. Bishrān informed him, quoting ‘Ali b. Muḥammad al-Miṣrī, quoting Abū Ghassān Mālik b. Yaḥyā, quoting Yazīd b. Hārūn, quoting Zakariyya’ b. Abū Za’ida, from Abū Ưṣāq, from al-Barā’ b. ʿAzīz, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) performed three ‘umra pilgrimages, and all were in Dhu al-qa’dā.” ʿAʾisha said, “He knew he had performed four ‘umra pilgrimages, including that along with which he made the ḥaḍīḥ.”

Al-Bayhaqī stated, “This is not correct.” I observe that this will also follow with a line of transmission that is ṣahīḥ and goes back to ʿAʾisha in similar words.

The Account of Jābir b. ʿAbd Allāh, may God be pleased with him.

Al-Tirmidhī and Ibn Māja narrated this from a ḥadīth of Sufyān b. Saʿīd al-Thawrī.

Al-Tirmidhī himself narrated this as did Ibn Māja from a ḥadīth of Sufyān b. Saʿīd al-Thawrī.

Al-Tirmidhī narrated it from ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Ziyād, from Zayd b. al-Ḥubāb, from Sufyān. He then stated, “It is gharib coming from a ḥadīth of Sufyān; we know it only from a ḥadīth of Zayd b. al-Ḥubāb. I saw that ʿAbd al-Ḥamān b. ʿAbd al-Ḥamān – meaning al-Dārimī – narrated this ḥadīth in his works from ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Ziyād. I asked Muḥammad (b. Ismāʿīl al-Bukhārī) about this, but he did not know of him. I noticed also that he did not consider him reliable. Instead, he said it was narrated from al-Thawrī, from Abū Ưṣāq, from Mujāhid only in a mursal form.”
In the work al-Sunan al-Kabir of al-Bayhaqi, Abū ʿIsā al-Tirmidhī is quoted as stating, “I asked Muhammad b. Ismāʿīl al-Bukhārī about this ḥadīth. He replied, ‘This ḥadīth is in error; this was in fact related as mursal from al-Thawrī.’”

Al-Bukhārī stated, “When Zayd b. al-Ḥubāb narrated, he would be mistaken; or he might make an error about something.”

Ibn Māja narrated it from al-Qāsim b. Muḥammad b. ʿAbbād al-Muhallabī, from Ṭābad al-Khuraybī, from Sufyān. This is a line not followed by al-Tirmidhī or al-Bayhaqi, nor probably al-Bukhārī, when he spoke about Zayd b. Ḥubāb, thinking him to have been alone in relating it. However, this was not so. But God knows best.

A DIFFERENT LINE OF TRANSMISSION FROM JĀBIR.

Abū ʿIsā al-Tirmidhī stated that Ibn Abū ʿUmar related to him, quoting Abū Muʿāwiya, from Ḥaḍarāj, from Abū al-Zubayr, from Jābir, who said that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) combined the ḥajj and the ‘umra together. And he performed one circumambulation for both.

He then stated, “This ḥadīth is ḥasan, ‘good’.” In one version he used the word ṣaḥīh, “authentic”.

Ibn Hibbān narrated this in his ṣaḥīh collection from Jābir. He quoted him as saying, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) performed only one circumambulation for the ḥajj and for his ‘umra.”

I note that the Ḥaḍarāj mentioned above is Ibn Artāt; several of the imāms spoke about him. However, he narrated from a different line – from Abū al-Zubayr, and also from Jābir b. ʿAbbād Allāh.

The ḥāfiq Abū Bakr al-Bazzār stated in his ḥadīth compendium that Muqaddam b. Muhammad related to him, quoting his uncle al-Qāsim b. Yaḥyā b. Muqaddam, from ʿAbbād al-Rahmān b. Uthmān b. Khuthaym, from Abū al-Zubayr, from Jābir, who said that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) arrived (in Mecca), combined the ḥajj and the ‘umra and led a ḥadīth for sacrifice. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, “Those who have not brought a ḥadīth may make it into an ‘umra.”

Al-Bazzār then stated, “We know of these words being attributed to Jābir only from this chain of transmission.”

Al-Bazzār is alone in giving it in his compendium from this line; its chain of transmission is gharib, “unique”. It is not to be found in any of the six (canonical) books from this line. God knows best.

The Account of Abū Ṭalḥa Zayd b. Saḥl al-Anṣāri, may God be pleased with him.

Imām ʿAbd Allāh stated that Abū Muʿāwiya related to him, quoting Ḥaḍarāj – he being Ibn Artāt – from al-Ḥasan b. Saʿd, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “Abū Ṭalḥa informed me that the Messenger of God (SAAS) combined the hājj with the ‘umra.”

Ibn Māja narrated, from ‘Alī b. Muḥammad, from Ābu Muḥāwiya, with the same chain of transmission and terminology. He stated, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) combined the hājj with the ‘umra.”

Al-Ḥajjāj b. Arṭāt is considered a somewhat weak source; God knows best.

The Account of Surāqā b. Malik b. Ju‘shum.

He (Sūrāqā) said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the hājja al-qa‘rān on the hijja al-wādā‘.”

The Account of Sa‘d b. Abū Waqqās from the Prophet (SAAS), to the effect that he performed the hājj with the ‘umra, this constituting the hājja al-qa‘rān.

Imām Mālik quoted Ibn Shihāb, quoting Muḥammad b. ‘Abd Allāh b. Nawfāl b. al-Ḥārith b. Ṭāfīl b. ‘Abd al-Muṭṭalib, who said that he heard Sa‘d b. Abū Waqqās and also al-Ḍāḥḥāk b. Qays, the year that Muḥāwiya b. Ābū Sufyān went on the hājj, recall the performance of the ‘umra with the hājj. Al-Ḍāḥḥāq stated, “Only anyone who was ignorant of God’s command would do that.” Sa‘d responded, “Cousin, what you said is wrong!”

Al-Ḍāḥḥāq said, “Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb used to forbid it.” Sa‘d stated, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) performed it, and we did it with him.”

Al-Tirmidhī and al-Nāṣīr both related it from Qutayba from Mālik. Al-Tirmidhī stated, “This ḥadīth is ṣaḥīḥ, ‘authentic’.”

Imām Ahmad stated that it was related to him by Yahyā b. Sa‘d, quoting Sulaymān – meaning al-Taymī – quoting Ghanaym, who said, “I asked Abū Waqqās’s son about the al-mu‘ta and he replied, ‘We did perform it, while this fellow was still a disbeliever in al-Ursh (Mecca)’” – meaning Muḥāwiya.

He related it that way, in an abbreviated form.

Muslim related it in his ṣaḥīḥ collection, from a ḥadīth of Sufyān b. Sa‘d al-Thawrī, and from Shu‘bā, Marwān al-Fāzārī, and Yahyā b. Sa‘d al-Qatṭān. All four quote from Sulaymān b. Ṭārkhan al-Taymī, quoting Ghanaym b. Qays, quoting Sa‘d b. Abū Waqqās, regarding the al-mu‘ta. Sa‘d b. Abū Waqqās stated, “We did perform it while this fellow was at that time an unbeliever in al-'Ursch.” In his account Yahyā b. Sa'īd added the words, “meaning Mu'āwiya”.

ʿAbd al-Razzāq related it from Mu'tamir b. Sulaymān and ʿAbd Allāh b. al-Mubārak, both of whom quoted from Sulaymān al-Taymi, from Ghunaym b. Qays, who said, “I asked Sa'd about the performance of the 'umra with the hajj. He replied, ‘I performed it with the Messenger of God (SAAS), while this fellow was an unbeliever in al-'Ursch’” — referring to Mecca and to Mu'āwiya.

This second hadīth has a more authentic chain of transmission. However, we have quoted it merely for added support rather than reliance. The first account has an authentic line of transmission; this second is more direct in its intent. But God knows best.

The Account of ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Awfā.

Al-Ṭabarānī stated that Sa'id b. Muḥammad b. al-Mughīrat al-Miṣrī related to him, quoting Sa'id b. Sulaymān, quoting Yazid b. ʿAṭī, from Ismā'il b. Abū Khālid, from ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Awfā, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) only combined the hajj with the 'umra because he knew that he would not perform a pilgrimage after that year.”

The Account of ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAbbās on this subject.

Imām Ahmad stated that Abū al-Nadr related to him, quoting Da'ūd — meaning al-Qaṭṭān — from ʿAmr, from ʿIkrima, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the 'umra four times: that of al-Ḥudaybiyya, that of al-Qaḍa', the third from al-Jīrānā, and the fourth that was performed along with his hijja.”

Abū Da'ūd, al-Tirmidhī and Ibn Māja narrated it through various lines from Da'ūd b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān al-ʿAṭṭār al-Makkī, from ʿAmr b. Dinār, from ʿIkrima, from Ibn ʿAbbās. Al-Tirmidhī referred to it as hasan gharib. Al-Tirmidhī narrated it from Sa'id b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān, from Sufyān b. ʿUyayna, from ʿAmr, from ʿIkrima, as mursal.

The ḥāfsīz al-Bayhaqī narrated it through Abū al-Ḥasan ʿAlī b. ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz al-Baghawi, from al-Ḥasan b. al-Rabī', and Shihāb b. ʿAbbād, both of whom quoted Da'ūd b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān al-ʿAṭṭār, who related it. His account used the words, “and the fourth that he combined with the hijja”.

Abū al-Ḥasan ʿAlī b. ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz stated, “No one except Da'ūd b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān quotes this hadīth from Ibn ʿAbbās.”

Moreover, al-Bayhaqī narrated that al-Bukhārī stated, “Da'ūd b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān is entirely truthful. However, he may be subject to criticism.”
It has been given above how al-Bukhārī narrated through Ibn ʿAbbās, quoting ʿUmar, as having said, “I heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) state, in Wādī al-ʿAqlq, ‘An apparition came to me from my Lord who said, ‘Pray in this sacred valley and say, ‘An ʿumra within a ḥijja.’’” Perhaps it is this that Ibn ʿAbbas relied upon in what he narrated. But God knows best.

The Account of ʿAbd Allah, son of ʿUmar, may God be pleased with them both.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Abū Aḥmad – meaning al-Zubayr – related to him, quoting Yūnus b. al-Ḥarīth, from ʿAmr b. ʿUsuṣb, from his father, from his grandfather (who said that) the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) only performed the ḥajj al-qirān out of fear that he would be blocked from the kaʿba and that he said, “If not a ḥijj, then an ʿumra.”

This hadīth is strange in both its line of transmission and in its content; Imām Aḥmad is alone in narrating it.

(Imām) Aḥmad said of this man Yūnus b. al-Ḥarīth: “He was confused in his narration of hadīth.” He categorized him as a weak source, as did also al-Nasāʾī and Yaḥyā b. Maʿin, in one account.

Regarding the content, his statement that “the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) only performed the ḥajj al-qirān out of fear that he would be blocked from the kaʿba”, who is it who could have so blocked him? God had already firmly established Islam for him and had conquered the Holy City. And it had been proclaimed on the plain at Mina during the (pilgrimage) season the previous year that, “after this year no unbeliever shall perform the pilgrimage and no naked person shall circumambulate the kaʿba”. On the ḥijjat al-wadāʾ, moreover, there were with him close to some 40,000 persons. His statement regarding “fear that he would be blocked from the kaʿba” is therefore strange.

Yet this is no more strange than the statement of the Commander of the Believers ʿUthmān to ʿAli b. Abū ʿUsāib when the latter told him, “You well know that we performed the ḥajj (al-qirān) with the Messenger of God (ṢAAS),” to which ʿUthmān responded, “Yes; but we were afraid”.

I do not know to what this fear could be ascribed, or what could have been its source. Perhaps he accepted the statement as (having been) that of a Companion, and interpreted it according to his own understanding. What he stated is indeed “authentic and to be accepted”. But his theory is not infallible and it is thus only applicable to the narrator. It is not applicable to others. This, however, does not necessitate the rejection of the tradition that such a person has narrated.

This also applies to the statement of ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAmr, provided that its line of transmission is authentic. But God knows best.
The Account of ʿImrān b. Ḥusayn, may God be pleased with him.

Imām ʿAbdullāh as-Saḥīḥī stated that both Mūḥammad b. ʿAlī and ʿAbdullāh b. Ḥajjāj related to him that Shuʿbā related to them, from ʻAbdullāh b. Ḥilāl, who stated that he heard Muṭṭarīf quote ʿImrān b. Ḥusayn as having said, “I am going to narrate a ḥadīth to you through which God may perhaps give you benefit. This is, that the Messenger of God (ṣaṣṣ) combined a ḥiṣa with an ʿumra and he did not forbid it up to his death. And no revelation came down stating it to be ḥarām, ‘prohibited’. He used to greet me; but when I was cupping, he kept aloof from me. When I ceased doing this, he came back to me.”

Muslim narrated this from Mūḥammad b. al-Muthannā and Mūḥammad b. Bashshār, from Ghundar, and from Ubayd Allāh b. Muṣādh, from his father. Al-Nasāʾī gave it from Mūḥammad b. ʿAbd al-ʿĀla, from Khalīd b. al-Ḥārīth. All three sources quote from Shuʿbā, from ʻAbdullāh b. Ḥilāl, from Muṭṭarīf, from ʿImrān.

Muslim narrated it from a ḥadīth of Shuʿbā and Saʿīd b. Abū ʿArūba, from Qatāda, from Muṭṭarīf b. ʿAbdullāh b. al-Shakhīr, from ʿImrān b. al-Ḥusayn, to the effect that the Messenger of God (ṣaṣṣ) combined a ḥiṣa with an ʿumra.

The ḥāfīz Abū al-Ḥasan al-Dārquṭnī stated, “The ḥadīth of Shuʿbā, from ʻAbdullāh b. al-Ḥusayn, is ṣaḥīḥ. As for his ḥadīth from Qatāda quoting Muṭṭarīf, in fact Bāqīya b. al-Walīd narrated it thus from Shuʿbā. Ghundar and others narrated it from Saʿīd b. Abū ʿArūba, from Qatāda.”

I note that al-Nasāʾī also narrated it in his al-Sunan textbook, from Amr b. ʿAbī ʿAli al-Falāṣīrī, from Khalīd b. al-Ḥārīth, from Shuʿbā. In one version it is derived from Saʿīd, instead of from Shuʿbā, from Qatāda, from Muṭṭarīf, from ʿImrān b. al-Ḥusayn. But God knows best.

It is established in both ṣaḥīḥ collections from a ḥadīth of Hammām, from Qatāda, from Muṭṭarīf, from ʿImrān b. al-Ḥusayn, who stated, “We performed al-tamattuʿ in the time of the Messenger of God (ṣaṣṣ), and no revelation came down declaring it ḥarām, ‘prohibited’. And he did not forbid it up to the time of his death.”

ʿAbdullāh, son of Imām ʿAbdullāh, stated, “ʿAbdullāh b. ʿImrān b. ʿAṭṭ Abū Mūḥammad, from al-Rayy, whose origins were in Īsfahān, related to us, quoting Yahyā b. al-Ḍāris, quoting ʿIkrima b. ʿAmmār, from al-Hirmās, who said, ‘I was mounted behind my father and I saw the Prophet (ṣaṣṣ) mounted on a baggage camel, saying, “At Your service for a ḥiṣa and an ʿumra together.”’”

This meets the criteria of the sunan texts, but they (their compilers) did not promulgate it.
The Account of Ḥāfṣa, daughter of ʿUmar, ‘The Mother of the Believers’, may God be pleased with her.

Imām Aḥmad stated that ʿAbd al-Raḥmān related to him, from Mālik, from Nāfiʾ, from Ibn ʿUmar, from Ḥāfṣa, to the effect that she asked the Prophet (ṢAAS), “Why is it you do not declare your state of ihram ended after performing the ʿumra?” He replied, “I braided my hair and placed a garland on my hadī, and so I will not declare my ihram concluded until I make sacrifice.”

Both scholars promulgated it in their sahīḥ collections from a ḥadīth of Mālik and ʿUbayd Allāh b. ʿUmar. Al-Bukhārī added Mūsā b. ʿUqba to these two, while Muslim added Ibn Jurayj. All of these accounts quoted from Nāfiʾ, from Ibn ʿUmar.

In the versions of these two, Ḥāfṣa is quoted as saying, “Messenger of God, how is it that the people declared their ihram concluded following the ʿumra, while you did not after your performance of the ʿumra?” He replied, “I placed a garland on my hadī and braided my hair. And so I will not declare my ihram concluded until I make sacrifice.”

Imām Aḥmad also stated that Shuʿayb b. Abū Hamza related to him as follows, “Nāfiʾ stated, ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar used to say, Ḥāfṣa, the wife of the Prophet (ṢAAS), informed us that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) ordered his wives to declare their state of ihram concluded, that year of the ḥijjat al-wadaʾ. One woman asked him, ‘What prevents you from declaring your ihram concluded?’ He replied, ‘I braided my hair and placed a garland on my hadī. And so I will not declare my ihram concluded until I sacrifice my hadī.’”

Aḥmad also stated that Yaʿṣūb b. Ibrāhīm related to him, quoting his father, from Abū Ishāq, quoting Nāfiʾ, from ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar, from Ḥāfṣa, daughter of ʿUmar, who stated, “When the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) ordered his women to declare their ihram concluded at the ʿumra, they asked, ‘What prevents you, Messenger of God, from declaring yours concluded along with us?’ He replied, ‘I brought a hadī and matted my hair, and I will not declare my ihram concluded until I sacrifice my hadī.’”

Aḥmad then narrated it from Kathārī Hishām, from Jaʿfar b. Barqān, from Nāfiʾ, from Ibn ʿUmar, from Ḥāfṣa.

This hadīth implies that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was engaged fully in an ʿumra and did not declare his ihram concluded after it. It is learned from the above accounts relating to the performance of the ḥajj al-ifrād that he had also recited the talbiyya for a ḥajj. The sum total of that was that he was engaged in a ḥajj al-qirān, as is also stated in the above accounts to that effect. But God knows best.
Al-Bukhāri stated that 'Abd Allāh b. Maslama related to him, from Mālik, from Ibn Shihāb, from Urwa, from A'isha, wife of the Prophet (SAAS), who said, “We went forth with the Messenger of God (SAAS), on the hājjat al-wadāʼ and recited the talbiyya for an umrah. The Prophet (SAAS) then said, ‘Those who have a hadī with them should recite the talbiyya for the hajj along with the umrah. And they should not declare their state of ihram concluded until they have finished both.’ When I reached Mecca, I was undergoing my menstrual period. So I did not circumambulate the ka‘ba, nor did I pass between al-Šafā and al-Marwa. I complained about this to the Messenger of God (SAAS), and he said, ‘Let down your hair and comb it; recite the talbiyya for the hajj and leave the umrah.’ And I did this.

“When I had completed the hajj, the Messenger of God (SAAS) sent me with ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. ʿAbū Bakr to al-Tanʿīm, and I performed the umrah. He said, ‘This is in place of your umrah.’”

She went on, “Those who had recited the talbiyya for the umrah circumambulated the ka‘ba, passed between al-Šafā and al-Marwa and then declared their ihram concluded. They performed another circumambulation after returning from Mīnā. Those who had combined the hajj with the umrah only performed one circumambulation.”

Muslim narrated it similarly from a hadith of Mālik, from al-Zuhri.

He then narrated it from ʿAbd b. Ḥumayd, from ʿAbd al-Razzāq, from Ma‘mar, from al-Zuhri, from A‘isha, who said, “We went forth with the Messenger of God (SAAS), the year of the hājjat al-wadāʼ, and I recited the talbiyya for an umrah. I had not brought a hadī. The Messenger of God (SAAS), said, ‘Those having a hadī with them should recite the talbiyya for the hajj with their umrah; they should not declare their ihram concluded until they complete them both.’”

The account proceeds as above.

The purpose of giving this hadith is to draw attention to his words, “Those having a hadī with them should recite the talbiyya for a hajj with an umrah.”

It is well known that the Prophet (SAAS) had brought a hadī; and so he was the first and the foremost to whom (the foregoing command) applied. For whatever general statement a speaker pronounces also applies to him.

(This hadith is given here) also because she stated, “Those who had combined the hajj with the umrah performed only one circumambulation.” This means between al-Šafā and al-Marwa.

Muslim quoted her as saying that, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) made only one circumambulation between al-Šafā and al-Marwa.” And so it is known from this that he had combined between the hajj and the umrah.
Muslim narrated from a hadith of Hammād b. Zayd, from ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. al-Qāsim, from his father, from A‘īsha, who said, “The hadis were with the Prophet (SAAS), Abū Bakr, Ūmar and those men of means.”

She also related that the Messenger of God (SAAS) did not declare his ihram concluded after the two pilgrimage ceremonies, and that he did not perform the ḥajj al-tamattu’. She recalled that she had asked the Messenger of God (SAAS) to have her perform the ‘umra from al-Tan‘īm. She said, “Messenger of God, you go off and perform a ḥajj and an ‘umra while I perform only a ḥajj.” And so he dispatched her with her brother ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. Abū Bakr and had her perform the ‘umra from al-Tan‘īm.

It is not related that the Prophet (SAAS) performed the ‘umra after his ḥijja, and he did not perform the ḥajj al-ismā‘. It is thus established that he in fact performed the ḥajj al-qirān, because it is a general consensus that he did perform the ‘umra on the ḥijjat al-wadā‘. But God knows best.

It is related above how the ḥāfiz al-Bayhaqi narrated through Yazid b. Hārūn, from Zakariyya b. Abū Zaid, from Abū Ishāq, from al-Bara‘ b. ‘Azib, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the ‘umra three times, all in Dhū al-Qa‘da.” And A‘īsha commented, “It is well known that he performed the ‘umra four times, including that ‘umra along with which he performed the ḥijjat.”

Al-Bayhaqi stated in (his work) al-Khilaftyyat that Abū Bakr b. al-Ḥarīth al-Faqīh informed him, quoting Abū Muḥammad b. Ḥassān al-Iṣbahānī, quoting Ibrāhīm b. Sharīk, quoting Abū ‘Alī Yūnus, quoting Abū Ishāq, from Mūjahid, who said, “Ibn ‘Umar was asked, ‘How many times did the Messenger of God (SAAS) perform the ‘umra?’ He replied, ‘Twice.’ A‘īsha commented, ‘Ibn ‘Umar knew that he performed the ‘umra three times, apart from the ‘umra he combined with the ḥijjat al-wadā‘.’”

Al-Bayhaqi then stated, “This line of transmission is not bad. However, it does contain irsāl.93 Mūjahid did not actually hear directly from A‘īsha, according to some of the scholars expert on aḥādīth.

I note that Shu’ba categorized it as objectionable. Al-Bukhārī and Muslim, however, considered it well-established. God knows best.

It is narrated from a hadith of al-Qāsim b. ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. Abū Bakr and ‘Urwa b. al-Zubayr and others, quoting A‘īsha (as saying) that the Messenger of God (SAAS) brought a hadīth with him the year of the ḥijjat al-wadā‘. (It tells) of her performing the ‘umra from al-Tan‘īm, how he unexpectedly ran into her on his way to the people of Mecca, how he stayed overnight at al-Muḥāṣṣab, and how he performed the al-ṣubh prayer at Mecca and then returned to Medina.

93. A term referring to the attribution of an account to a person who could not have heard it first hand from the person being quoted.
All this shows that the Messenger of God (SAAS) did not perform an 'umra after that hijja of his; and I know of no Companion who communicated that he did so.

It is well known that he did not declare his ihram concluded between the two pilgrimage ceremonies. Nor does anyone narrate that, after circumambulating the ka'ba and his passage between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa, he shaved or cut his hair short or declared his ihram concluded. In fact, all agree that he persisted in his ihram. And it is not reported that he recited the talbiyya for a ḥajj when he went to Minā, and it is thus known that he did not perform the ḥajj al-tamattu'.

They are also in agreement that the Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the 'umra the year of the hijja al-wadā', that he did not declare his ihram concluded between the two pilgrimage ceremonies, that he did not announce his state of ihram for the ḥajj, and that he did not perform the 'umra after the ḥajj, but kept to the ḥajj al-qirān. All this is difficult to refute. But God knows best.

Moreover, the account of his having performed the ḥajj al-qirān is further substantiated because of that which is left out or has been refuted in the statements of those who maintain that he performed the ḥajj al-ifrād or the ḥajj al-tamattu'. The (al-qirān) reports must therefore be given priority as is prescribed in the principles of jurisprudence.

From Abū ʿImrān comes the account that he performed the ḥajj with his freed-man. He stated, "I came to Umm Salama and asked, ‘Mother of the Believers, I have never performed the ḥajj. With what should I begin it, the 'umra or the ḥajj?’ She replied, ‘Begin with whichever you wish.’"

His account continues, "I then went to Ṣafīyya, ‘the mother of the Believers’, and when I asked her, she replied as Umm Salama had done. I went again to Umm Salama and informed her what Ṣafīyya had said. She commented, ‘I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say, “O family of Muḥammad, let those of you who make the pilgrimage recite the talbiyya for an 'umra in a hijja.”’"

Ibn Ḥibbān related this in his saḥīḥ collection. Ibn Ḥazm narrated it in (reference to) the hijja al-wadā' from a ḥadīth of al-Layth b. Ṣa‘d, from Yazīd b. Abū Ḥabīb, from Aslam, from Abū ʿImrān, from Umm Salama.

DIVISION

If it be said, “You have narrated from a group of Companions that the Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the ḥajj al-ifrād. Then you narrated from these very persons, as well as from others, that he combined the ḥajj with the 'umra. How can these be reconciled?”

The answer is, “The narrative of those who related that he performed the ḥajj al-ifrād implies that he performed the activities of the ḥajj individually, while the 'umra entered into that performance in intent, in deed and in time.”

This shows that he was satisfied with the circumambulation of the ḥajj and his procession (between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa) being for it and for that (the 'umra), as is the practice of the majority of scholars in the hajj al-girān. This conflicts with Abū Ḥanīfa, may God have mercy upon him, in that he maintained that the person performing the hajj al-girān makes two circumambulations and makes the procession (between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa) twice. He relied in this conclusion upon what was quoted from ʿAli b. Abū Ṭālib, even though there are questions raised about the line of transmission of the hadith back to him.

As for those who narrate his having performed the hajj al-tamattūʿ and then narrate his having performed the hajj al-girān, we have dealt with this issue above. Namely, the term al-tamattūʿ as used by the early authorities was more general in meaning than the al-tammatuʿ of the al-ḥijja and the hajj al-girān. In fact, they apply it to performing the ʿumra in the months for the hajj, even when not in conjunction with the hajj, as Saʿd b. Abū Waqqās stated; “We performed the tamattūʿ with the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), at a time when this fellow” — meaning Muʿāwiyah — was an unbeliever in al-ʿUrsh” — meaning Mecca.

In this he was referring to one of two ʿumras — either that of al-Ḥudaybiya, or the ʿumrat al-qadʾ. Regarding the ʿumra from al-Jirāna, Muʿāwiyah had by then already accepted Islam, since it came after the conquest of Mecca. And the ḥijjat al-wadāʿ was after that, in the year 10 AH. This is clear and obvious. But God knows best.

DIVISION

If it be said, “What is your response to the hadith narrated by Abū Daʿūd al-Ṭayālīsī in his musnad text: ‘Hishām related to us, from Qatāda, from Abū Shaykh al-Hunāʾī, whose name was Ḥaywān b. Khalīd, that Muʿāwiyah said to a number of the Companions of the Messenger of God ‘Do you know that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) forbade the use of a tiger’s skin as a saddle blanket?’ ‘Why yes, by God,” they replied. ‘I testify to that,” he went on. ‘And do you know that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) forbade the wearing of gold, except for very little of it?’ ‘Yes, by God,” they replied. ‘And do you know that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) forbade that the hajj and the ʿumra be combined together?’ ‘No, by God,” they replied. He said, ‘By God, this too is with those (statements).’”

(Imām) Ahmad stated that ʿAffān related to him, quoting Hammām, from Qatāda, from Abū Shaykh al-Hunāʾī, who said, “I was amongst a group of Companions of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), at Muʿāwiyah’s home when the latter said, ‘I adjure you by God, do you know that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) forbade riding mounted upon the skins of tigers?’ ‘Indeed yes, by God,’ they replied. ‘And do you know that he forbade the wearing of gold, except for very little of it?’ ‘Yes indeed, by God,’ they replied. ‘And do you know that he forbade the al-mutʿa?’ — meaning the hajj al-mutʿa. ‘No, by God,’ they replied.”

(Imām) Ahmad stated that Muḥammad b. Jaʿfar related to him, quoting Saʿd, from Qatāda, from Abū Shaykh al-Hunāʾī, that he witnessed Muʿāwiyah being with a group of the Companions of the Prophet (SAAS), and that Mu'āwiyah asked them, “Do you know that the Messenger of God (SAAS) forbade riding mounted on the skins of tigers?” “Yes indeed,” they replied. “And do you know that he forbade the wearing of silk?” he asked. “Yes indeed, by God” they replied. “And do you know that he forbade drinking from a vessel of gold or silver?” “Yes indeed, by God”, they replied. “And do you know that he forbade combining a ĥajj with an ‘umra?” “No, by God,” they replied. “By God, it is with those (statements),’ he said."

Hassan b. Salama narrated it thus, from Qatada. And his account adds (Mu'āwiyah's statement) “But you have forgotten.”

Abū Da’ūd and al-Nasa’ī narrated it along various lines from Abū Shaykh al-Huna’ī; it is a hadith with a fine line of transmission.

From it the account of Mu'āwiyah, may God be pleased with him, for forbidding combining the ĥajj with the ‘umra seems strange. Perhaps the hadith originally referred to forbidding the mut'a.94 The narrator thought the mut'a of the ĥajj was meant, whereas it was the mut'a relating to women. Yet those Companions narrate no hadith forbidding it.

Or the prohibition may have related to the iqrān95 of dates, as in the hadith of Ibn ‘Umar, but the narrator believed it to refer to the al-qirān in the ĥajj. That was not the case.

Or perhaps Mu'āwiyah, may God be pleased with him, said, “Do you know that such-and-such was forbidden” without the person making known the prohibition being named, and then the narrator attributed this to the Prophet (SAAS), imagining this. For the person who forbade the mut'a of the ĥajj was actually 'Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb, may God be pleased with him, and his forbidding it was not actual prohibition, as we have shown above. He actually forbade it so that it should be performed separately from the ĥajj, on a different trip, in order to increase visits to the ka'ba.

The Companions, may God be pleased with them, were in great awe of him; they generally did not dare to contradict him. His son 'Abd Allāh would disagree with him and he would be told, “Your father used to forbid it.” And he would respond, “I was afraid a rock would fall from the sky upon you! The Messenger of God (SAAS) performed it. Is the practice of the Messenger of God (SAAS) to be emulated, or that of ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb?”

94. The term here refers to the controversial early practice of “temporary marriages”, to which this word also referred.

95. A note to the Arabic printed text states that the word also meant “eating two dates in one mouthful”.

Similarly, 'Uthmān b. 'Affān, may God be pleased with him, used to forbid it, and 'Alī b. Abū Ṭālib opposed him, as is told above. 'Alī said, “I will not give up a practice of the Messenger of God (SAAS), because of a statement made by one of the people.”

Ibn b. Ḥusayn stated, “We performed the ḥajj al-tamattuʿ with the Messenger of God (SAAS), and no revelation came rendering it harām. And he did not forbid it before his death.”

This was promulgated by both authors of the sahih collections.

In the sahih collection of Muslim, it is stated about Sa'd that he expressed opposition to Mu'āwiya's disapproval of the ḥajj al-mut'a. He stated, “We performed it with the Messenger of God (SAAS), while this fellow was still an unbeliever in al-'Urs.” By this he meant Mu'āwiya who was, at the time, an unbeliever in Mecca.

I note that the Messenger of God (SAAS) did indeed perform the ḥajj al-qirān according to the aḥādīth we have quoted above to that effect. And there was a period of only 81 days between the ḥijjat al-wadāʿ and the death of the Messenger of God (SAAS).

Approximately 40,000 witnessed, in word and deed, his performance of the ḥijja. If he had forbidden combining the ḥajj, which people had witnessed him perform, then it would not have been just one of the Companions who would have refuted it but a group of those who had either heard this or not heard this from him.

All this shows that this cannot be correct as reported from Mu'āwiya, may God be pleased with him. But God knows best.

Abū Da'ūd stated that Aḥmad b. Ṣalīḥ related to him, quoting Ibn Wahb, quoting Ḥaywa, quoting Ābū ʿIsā al-Khurāsānī, from Ābd Allāh b. al-Qāsim al-Khurāsānī, from Sa'd b. al-Musayyab (who said) that one of the Companions of the Prophet (SAAS) went to 'Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb and testified that he had heard the Messenger of God (SAAS), while suffering from the illness from which he died, forbid the performance of the 'umra prior to the ḥajj.

This line of transmission is not devoid of controversy. Moreover, if this Companion was narrating this from Mu'āwiya, then the matter is as discussed above; this was in regard to the mut'a, and not the ḥajj al-qirān. If, however, he was narrating this from someone else, then it is problematical in general, but not specifically regarding the qirān. But God knows best.

Accounts substantiating those stating that the Messenger of God (SAAS) announced the state of iḥrām and did not initially specify a ḥajj or an 'umra, and then thereafter rendered it specific.

It is narrated from al-Shāfi'i that this is preferable; however, it is a statement that is weak.
Al-Shafi‘i, may God have mercy upon him, stated that Sufyān informed him, quoting Ibn Tawūs, Ibrāhīm b. Maysara and Hishām b. Ḥujayr, all of whom heard Tawūs say, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) left Medina without specifying a hajj or an ’umra, waiting for a divine decree. The decision did come down to him while he was between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa. Then he ordered those of his Companions who had recited the talbiyya for the hajj and had not brought hadis with them to make it into an ’umra. He stated, ‘If I had known earlier what I now do, I would not have brought the hadi. However, I have matted my hair and I did bring my hadi, and the only time when I can declare my iḥrām concluded is after sacrificing my hadi.’

“Sūrāqā b. Malik then approached him and asked, ‘Messenger of God, make a decision for us as if born today. Is the ’umra of ours for this year or for ever?’ The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) replied; ‘No; it is for ever; the ’umra has entered into the hajj on until Judgement Day.’

“‘AIlī arrived from Yemen and the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) asked him, ‘For what have you recited the talbiyya?’ One of the two of them then said, ‘Labbāyka! “At Your service!”’ With the recitation of the talbiyya of the Prophet (ṢAAS).’ The other then said, ‘At Your service, for the hajj of the Prophet (ṢAAS)!’”

This hadith is mursal, going back no further than to Tawūs; there is oddity in it.

It is a cardinal principle of al-Shafi‘i, may God have mercy upon him, not to accept a hadith that is mursal merely by itself, unless supported by another hadith. Unless, that is, it derives from one of the major tabī‘un, “the authorities of the second generation”, as he stated in his risāla, “his treatise”. This is because in most cases they relate such ahādith only from the Companions. But God knows best.

This mursal hadith is not of that category. In fact, it contradicts those ahādith given before, whether relating to the hajj al-ifrād, the hajj al-tamattu‘ or the hajj al-qirān. These ahādith are authentic and have full lines of transmission, as given above. They have precedence over it. And since they affirm a matter denied by this hadith that is mursal, and an affirmation takes precedence over a negation if otherwise equal, then how should it be here, where a hadith with a full line of transmission is (classified as) saḥīh and (the other account) is classified as mursal and could not substantiate an issue because of its broken line of transmission? But God knows best.

The hāfiż Abū Bakr al-Bayhaqī stated that Abū ʿAbd Allāh al-Hāfiż informed him, quoting Abū al-ʿAbbās al-Aṣamm, quoting al-ʿAbbās b. Muḥammad al-Dūrī, quoting Muḥādīr, quoting al-ʿAṭmas, from Ibrāhīm, from al-Aṣwād, from ʿAṭīṣa, who said, “We went forth with the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), without making reference to either a hajj or an ’umra. When we arrived, he ordered us to declare our state of iḥrām concluded. When it was the night of al-ʿNafr, 96 ʿAṣiyya, daughter of Ḥuyayy began to menstruate. The Prophet (ṣaṣṣ), exclaimed, ‘Ḥalaq ʿaqra! “With a shaven head and menstruating!” ‘I can only see her impeding you all.’ He then asked (her), ‘Did you make a circumambulation the day of the sacrifice?’ ‘Yes,’ she replied. He then said, ‘Then you may leave.’ She said, ‘Messenger of God, I did not recite the tāliyya (for the ʿumra).’ He said, ‘So make an ʿumra from al-ʿTanʿīm.’”

The narrator continued, “And so her brother accompanied her. She said, ‘And we met Muḍlij, and he said, ‘You’re (to assume the state of iḥrām) from so-and-so.’”

This is how al-Bayhaqī narrated this.

Al-Bukhārī narrated it from Muḥammad, said to be the son of Yaḥyā al-Dhuhlib, from Muḥādīr b. al-Muwarrī. His version, however, states, “We went forth with the Messenger of God (ṣaṣṣ), making reference only to the ḥaįj . . .”

This is similar to the ahādīth attributed to her quoted above.

However, Muslim narrated from Suwayd b. Saʿīd, from ʿAlī b. Mushir, from al-ʿAʾmash, from Ibrāhīm, from al-ʿAswad, from ʿAʾisha, who said, “We went forth with the Messenger of God (ṣaṣṣ), making reference to neither a ḥaįj nor an ʿumra.”

Al-Bukhārī and Muslim included it, from a ḥadīth of Maḥṣūr, from Ibrāhīm, from al-ʿAswad, quoting ʿAʾisha as saying, “We went forth with the Messenger of God (ṣaṣṣ), thinking only that it was for the ḥaįj.”

This is highly authentic, and very firmly founded. But God knows best.

In another account from this line, she stated, “We went forth reciting the tāliyya, but not referring either to a ḥaįj or to an ʿumra.”

It is likely that they used not to mention that along with the tāliyya. They had designated it as hāl al-iḥrām, “the state of iḥrām”, as in the ḥadīth of Anas: “I heard the Messenger of God (ṣaṣṣ) say, ‘At Your service, 0 God, for a ḥaįj and an ʿumra.’” Anas went on to comment, “And I heard them shouting for both together.”

Also there is the ḥadīth narrated by Muslim from a ḥadīth of Daʿūd b. Abū Hind, from Abū Naḍrā, quoting Jabir, and Abū Saʿīd al-Khudrī, who both said, “We came (to Mecca) with the Messenger of God (ṣaṣṣ), shouting vigorously for the ḥaįj.” This ḥadīth is problematic. But God knows best.

An Account of the recitation of the tāliyya made by the Messenger of God (ṣaṣṣ)

Al-Shāfiʿī stated that Malik informed him, from Nāfīʿ from ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar, that the tāliyya spoken by the Messenger of God (ṣaṣṣ) was:

96. During the pilgrimage, the day of the departure from Miḥa to Mecca.
"Labbayka Allāhumma, Labbayk! Labayka, Lā sharika laka! Labbayk! Inna al-ḥamda wa al-miʿmata laka, wa al-mulku laka. Lā sharika laka. 'At Your service, O God, at Your service! at Your service; You have no associate! At Your service! Praise and grace are Yours! Power is Yours! You have no associate!"

'Abd Allāh b. Umar would make an addition to this: "Labbayka laka wa saʿdayk! Wa al-khayru fī yadaykā, Labbayka! Wa al-raghbaʿu ilayka wa al-ʿamal. 'At Your service, and at Your pleasure! And all good is in Your hands! At Your service! And all joy, and all good are in Your hands! At Your service! And all aspirations are to You, and (all) work!"

Al-Bukhārī narrated it from 'Abd Allāh b. Yūsuf, and Muslim did so from Yahyā b. Yaḥyā, both quoting Mālik.

Muslim stated that Muhammad b. ʿAbbād narrated to him, quoting Hātim b. Ismāʿīl, from Mūsā b. ʿUqba, from Sālim b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar, and from Nāfiʿ, the freed-man of ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar, and ʿAbbās b. ʿUmar, from ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar, to the effect that the Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa) recited the talbiyya when his camel stood up at the mosque at Dhu al-Ḥulayfa. He recited the talbiyya, saying, "At Your service, O God, at Your service! At Your service! You have no associate; at Your service. Praise and grace are Yours. And power is Yours. You have no associate."

They said, "ʿAbd Allāh used to say, 'This is the talbiyya of the Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa).' Nāfiʿ said, 'ʿAbd Allāh would add along with this, "At Your service! At Your service! At your service, and at Your pleasure! Good is in Your hands, and aspirations are to You, and so is work."'"

Muḥammad b. al-Muthanna related to us, quoting Yahyā b. Saʿīd, from ʿUbayd Allāh, quoting Nāfiʿ, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said, "I learned the talbiyya from (the mouth of) the Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa)." And he went on to narrate as the others had stated in their ahādīth.

Ḥarmala b. Yahyā narrated to me, quoting Ibn Wahb, quoting Yunus, from Ibn Shihāb, who said, "Ṣālim b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar quoted to me his father as having stated, 'I heard the Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa), having matted his hair, recite the talbiyya, saying, 'At Your service, O God, at Your service! At Your service! You have no associate. At Your service. Praise, grace and power are Yours; You have no associate.' He added nothing to these words.

"ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar used to say, 'The Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa) used to perform two rakāʾāt at Dhu al-Ḥulayfa. When the camel stood up bearing him at the mosque at Dhu al-Ḥulayfa, he recited the talbiyya in those words.'"

"ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar stated that ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb used to recite the talbiyya as had the Prophet (Ṣaḥḥa), using those words. He would say, 'At Your service, O God, at Your service! At Your service, and Your pleasure. Good is in Your hands. At Your service! Aspirations are to You, and so is work.'"

This is the phraseology of Muslim. The hadith of Jābir gives the talbiyya as in that of Ibn ʿUmar; it will be given in full shortly. Muslim related it separately.
Al-Bukhārī stated, after giving it through Mālik, from Naṣīr, from Ibn ʿUmar, as is given above. He stated, “Muḥammad b. Yūsuf related to us, quoting Ṣufyān, from al-ʿAṯārī, from ʿUmāra, from Abū ʿAṭiyya, who quoted Ṣaʿīda as saying, ‘I well know how the Prophet (ṢAAS) would recite the talbiyya. He would say, ‘At Your service, O God! At Your service! At Your service; You have no associate. Praise and grace are Yours.’’”

Abū Muʿāwiya gave it from al-ʿAṯārī. Shuʿba stated that Sulaymān informed him that Khaythama quoted Abū ʿAṭiyya from Ṣaʿīda.

Al-Bukhārī is alone in giving this.

Imām ʿAḥmad narrated it from ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Mahdi, from Sulaymān al-Thawrī, from Sulaymān b. Mahrān al-ʿAṯārī, from ʿUmāra b. ʿUmayr, from Abū ʿAṭiyya al-Wāḍi, quoting Ṣaʿīda. His account is the same as that narrated by al-Bukhārī.

ʿAḥmad narrated it from Abū Muʿāwiya, and ʿAbd Allāh b. Numayr did so from al-ʿAṯārī, the same as was narrated by al-Bukhārī. He (ʿAḥmad) also narrated it from Muḥammad b. Jaʿfar and Rawḥ b. ʿUbadā, from Shuʿba, from Sulaymān b. Mahrān al-ʿAṯārī, giving it as had al-Bukhārī. Abū Dāʿūd al-Ṭayālīsī narrated it the same in his text from Shuʿba.

Imām ʿAḥmad stated that Muḥammad b. Fuḍayl narrated to him, quoting al-ʿAṯārī, from ʿUmāra b. ʿUmayr, from Abū ʿAṭiyya, who said, “Ṣaʿīda stated, ‘I well know how the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) would recite the talbiyya.’”

Abū ʿAṭiyya went on to state, “I then heard her recite the talbiyya. She said, ‘At Your service, O God! At Your service! At Your service! You have no associate. At Your service. Praise and grace are Yours, and Power. You have no associate.’”

He is alone in adding in this text the words, “and Power. You have no associate”.

Al-Bayhaqī stated that al-Ḥakīm informed him, quoting al-Āṣamm, quoting Muḥammad b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAbd al-Ḥakam, quoting Ibn Wahb, quoting ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAbd al-Salāma, quoting ʿAbd Allāh b. al-Fāḍl, from ʿAbd al-Raḥmān al-ʿArāj, from Abū Hurayra, who said, “Part of the talbiyya of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was the words, ‘At Your service, O God of the truth.’”

Al-Nasāʾī narrated it from Qutayba, from Ḥumayd b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān, from ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz b. ʿAbd al-Salāma and Ibn Māja, from Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba and ʿAlī b. Muḥammad, both of whom quoted Waki', from ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz.

Al-Nasāʾī stated, “I know of no one except ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz who gave its line of transmission from ʿAbd Allāh b. al-Fāḍl.”

Ismāʿīl b. Umayya narrated it as mursal.

Al-Shaftī stated that Ṣaʿīd b. al-Qaddāḥ informed him, from Ibn Jurayj, quoting Ḥumayd al-ʿArāj, from Muḥājir, who said, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) would express in the talbiyya ‘At Your service, O God!’” And he went on to state the talbiyya.
He stated, “Eventually, one day when the people were standing away from him, it was as though he was delighted by his circumstances and he added to it, saying, ‘At Your service! The (real) life is that of the hereafter!’”

Ibn Jurayj went on, “I considered that to have been the day on Mt. ‘Arafat.”

This hadith is mursal from this line.

The ḥāfīz Abū Bakr al-Bayhaqi stated that ‘Abd Allāh al-Ḥāfīz informed him, quoting Abū ʿAbd Allāh Yūsuf b. Muḥammad b. Muḥammad b. Yūsuf, quoting Muḥammad b. Išāq b. Khuzayma, quoting Naṣr b. ʿAlī al-Jahdāmi, quoting Maḥbūb b. al-Ḥasan, quoting Daʿūd, from ʿIkrima, from Ibn ʿAbbās (who said) that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) made an address at ‘Arafat and that when he had said, “At Your service, O God, at Your service!” he went on to say, “The only good is that of the afterlife!”

This line of transmission is gharib; its line of transmission does meet the criteria of the sunan texts, but the compilers of these did not promulgate it.

Imām ʿAbd Allāh stated that Rawḥ related to him, quoting Usāma b. Zayd, quoting ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Labīd, from al-Muṭṭalīb b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Ḥanṭāb, who quoted Abū Hurayra as having said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) stated, ‘Gabriel ordered me to raise my voice in the talbiyya; it is one of the rites of the hajj.” ʿAbd Allāh was alone in giving this.

ʿAbd al-Razzāq stated that al-Thawrī informed him, from Ibn Abū Labīd, from al-Muṭṭalīb b. Ḥanṭāb, from Khallād b. al-SAʿīb, from Zayd b. Khālid, who said, “Gabriel came to the Prophet (ṢAAS) and said, ‘Order your Companions to raise their voices in the talbiyya; it is a rite of the hajj.’”

Ibn Māja narrated it thus, from ʿAlī b. Muḥammad, from Wāḥīd, from al-Thawrī. Similarly Shuʿba narrated it, as did Musa b. ʿUqba, from ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Labīd.

Imām ʿAbd Allāh stated that Wāḥīd related to him, quoting Sufyān, from ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Labīd, from al-Muṭṭalīb b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Ḥanṭāb, from Khallād b. al-SAʿīb, from Zayd b. Khālid al-Juhant, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) stated, ‘Gabriel came to me and said, “Muḥammad, order your Companions to raise their voices in the talbiyya; it is a rite of the hajj.’”

Our teacher Abū al-Ḥajjāj al-Mīzzi stated in his work al-ʾAṭrāf that Muḥāwiya also related the above from Hishām; and Qabīṣa (gave it) from Sufyān al-Thawrī, from ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Labīd, from al-Muṭṭalīb, from Khallād b. al-SAʿīb, from his father, from Zayd b. Khālid.
Ahmad stated that Sufyân b. 'Uyayna related it to him, from 'Abd Allâh b. Abû Bakr, from 'Abd al-Malik b. Abû Bakr b. al-Ḥarîth b. Hishâm, from Khallâd b. al-Sâ'îb b. Khallâd, from his father, who quoted the Prophet (S.A.W.), as saying, “Gabriel came to me and said, ‘Order your Companions to raise their voices in reciting the talbiyya.’”

Al-Tirmidhî stated, “I studied it under 'Abd al-Rahmân b. Mahdî, from Mâlik. And Rawlî related to us, quoting Mâlik – meaning Ibn Anas – from 'Abd Allâh b. Abû Bakr b. Muḥammad b. 'Amr b. Ḥazam, from 'Abd al-Malik b. Abû Bakr b. 'Abd al-Rahmân b. al-Ḥarîth b. Hishâm, from Khallâd b. al-Sâ'îb al-Ansârî, from his father, who quoted the Messenger of God (S.A.S.), as saying, ‘Gabriel came to me and ordered me to order my Companions – or those with me – to raise their voices in reciting the talbiyya or in the iḥlâl’” – meaning of one of the two.

Al-Shâfi‘î narrated it thus from Mâlik. And Abû Da‘ūd narrated it from al-Qânâbî, from Mâlik. Imâm Aḥmad also narrated it from a ḥadîth of Ibn Jurayj. Al-Tirmidhî, al-Nâṣîhî and Ibn Mâja did so from a ḥadîth of Sufyân b. 'Uyayna, from 'Abd Allâh b. Abû Bakr. Al-Tirmidhî stated, “This ḥadîth is ḥasan ṣaḥîh.”

The ḥâfîz al-Bayhaqî stated, “And Ibn Jurayj narrated that, “Abû Allâh b. Abû Bakr wrote to me giving mention of it. And he did not refer to Abû Khallâd in his line of transmission.”

He (al-Bayhaqi) went on, “What is authentic is the account of Mâlik and Sufyân b. 'Uyayna, from 'Abd Allâh b. Abû Bakr, from 'Abd al-Malik, from Khallâd b. al-Sâ'îb, from his father, from the Prophet (S.A.S.), similarly.”

Al-Bukhârî and others gave it in the same form. Imâm Aḥmad is quoted in the musnad text of al-Sâ'îb b. Khallâd b. Suwåyâd Abû Sahâla al-Ansârî, as follows, “Muḥammad b. Bakr related to us, quoting Ibn Jurayj, and Rawî related to us, quoting Ibn Jurayj as saying, ‘Abû Allâh b. Abû Bakr Muhammad b. 'Amr b. Ḥazm wrote to me, from 'Abd al-Malik b. Abû Bakr b. 'Abd al-Rahmân b. al-Ḥarîth b. Hishâm, from Khallâd b. al-Sâ'îb al-Ansârî, from his father al-Sâ'îb b. Khallâd, that he heard the Messenger of God (S.A.S.) say, ‘Gabriel came to me and said, ‘God orders you to order your Companions to raise their voices with the talbiyya or the iḥlâl.’’”

He (Imâm Aḥmad) stated, “I do not know which of us, whether myself or 'Abd Allâh, or Khallâd gave it as ‘in the iḥlâl or the talbiyya.’”

This is the wording of Aḥmad in his musnad text. Our teacher gave it thus in his work al-Aṣrâf, from Ibn Jurayj, as in the account of Mâlik and Sufyân b. 'Uyayna. But God knows best.

THE ḤADITH OF JĀʿBĪR B. ‘ABD ALLĀH, MAY GOD BE PLEASED WITH HIM, ON THE ḤIJJA OF THE MESSENGER OF GOD (S.A.S.).

It represents by itself an independent rite that we consider more appropriate to give here, since it includes the talbiyya and other matters, as has been mentioned heretofore and as follows.

We will report its various lines of transmission and phraseology. Then we will follow it with testimonials from the various ahādīth to the same effect. And to God one turns for help.

Imām ʿAlīmad stated that Yaḥyā b. ʿAbd Allāh related to him, quoting Jaʿfar b. Muḥammad, quoting his father, who said, "We came to Jābir b. ʿAbd Allāh while he was with Banū Salama. We asked him about the ḥijja of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).

Jābir related to us that the latter stayed in Medina for nine years without making the pilgrimage. He then had an announcement made to the people that he would be a pilgrim that year.

Jābir went on, "A great mass of people came to Medina, all hoping to imitate the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and to do as he did. He went forth five days prior to the end of Dhu al-Qaʿda, and we left with him. When he reached Dhu al-Ḥulayfa, Ṣa`mā, daughter of Ṣa`ma, went into labour with Muḥammad, son of Abū Bakr. She sent a message to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), asking what she should do. He replied, ‘Wash, then put in place a folded cloth, then recite the talbiyya.’

"The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) proceeded on to where his camel came to a point overlooking al-Bayda'; there he recited the talbiyya and the tawḥīd, saying, ‘At Your service, O God! You have no associate; at Your Service. Praise and grace are Yours, along with power; You have no associate.’

"The people recited the talbiyya, adding words such as dhā al-maʿārij, ‘He who possesses ladders.’ The Prophet (ṢAAS) heard (this), but said nothing to them.

“I looked as far as I could ahead of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and there were people riding and walking. And it was the same behind him, and to both of his sides.

“He was right there among us; to him the Qurʾān would be revealed, and he knew how to interpret it. Whatever he did, we knew.

“We left, with our only intention being to make the ḥajj. When we reached the kaʿba, the Prophet (ṢAAS) saluted the ‘black stone’, jogged for three circumambulations and walked for four. When he had finished, he made his way to the maqām Ibrāhīm. Behind it he performed two prayer rakaṭs. He then recited, ‘and use Abraham’s station as a place for prayer’ (sūrat al-Baqara; II, v.125).”

“‘He then saluted the stone and went off to al-Ṣafā and al-Mārwa are rites of God’ (sūrat al-Baqara; II, v.158).

97. To heaven, that is.
“He then stated, ‘We will begin with that which God began.’ And he scaled al-Ṣafā and, gazing out at the kaʿba spoke the words, ‘God is Most Great’, and then ‘There is no god but God alone. He has no associate. He has power, and to Him there is praise. He has control over everything. There is no god but God alone! He has fulfilled His promise, and proved His promise true. And he hazama, ‘defeated’ – or ghalaba, ‘overcame’ – the factions by Himself.’ He then prayed and repeated these words.

“Thereafter he came down until his feet were in the wādī, when he proceeded at a jog until, having ascended, he walked and proceeded on until he reached al-Marwa. He scaled it until he stood facing out to the kācba and spoke the same words there as he had upon al-Ṣafā. When it was the seventh circumambulation, at al-Marwa, he said, ‘0 people, if I had known beforehand what I came to learn, I would not have brought the hadī, and would have made it an ‘umra. Those who do not have hadīs with them should declare their ihram concluded, and make it into an ‘umra.’ And all the people declared their ihram concluded.

“Surāqā b. Mālik b. Juṣhūm asked, while down in the lowest part of the valley, ‘Messenger of God, is this for this year (alone) or for ever?’ The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) intertwined his fingers and replied, ‘For ever.’ He repeated this five times. He then said, ‘The ‘umra has entered into the hajj until Judgement Day.’”

Jābir went on, “‘Ali arrived from Yemen with a hadī. And the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had brought a hadī from those in Medina. Fatīma had put on jewellery, colour-dyed clothing and had decorated her eyes with mascara. He (‘Ali) criticized her for that and she replied, ‘My father ordered me to do it.’ He said, ‘Bring me the head kerchief.’ (Gaʿfar commented: ‘This word “he said” was not a reference to Jabir’s speech’ [but to ‘Ali’s])

“So ‘Ali left, upset, to enquire from the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), about what Fatīma had said. ‘Ali said, ‘Fatīma dressed in colour-dyed clothes and put on mascara, saying her father told her to do so.’ He (the Messenger of God, ṢAAS), replied, ‘She spoke the truth. She spoke the truth. I did tell her to do this.’”

Jābir went on, “He (the Prophet (ṢAAS)) asked ‘Ali, ‘With what intent did you recite the talbīyya?’ He replied, ‘I said, “O God, I recite the talbīyya with the same intent as Your Messenger.”’ He added, ‘I have a hadī with me.’ ‘Then you should not declare your ihram concluded,’ he told him.”

Jābir went on, “The number of hadīs brought by ‘Ali from Yemen and by the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) totalled 100. The latter sacrificed by his own hand 63, and he then gave ‘Ali (permission) to sacrifice the remainder. He allowed him to share in his own hadī. He then ordered that meat be removed from each sacrificed animal and it was placed in a cooking pot. They both then ate the meat and drank the gravy.

98. Between Ṣafā and Marwa is a short strip where Hagar, unable to see her son Ismā‘īl, ran. Running at this site is now recommended as a part of the performance of the saʿi, as was the practice of the Prophet (ṢAAS), according to the foregoing tradition.

“The Messenger of God (SAAS) then stated, ‘I have made sacrifice here; and all Minā is a place for sacrifice.’ He then stood upon Mt. ‘Arafāt and said, ‘I have stood here; and all ‘Arafāt is a station.’ He then halted on al-Muzdalifā and said, ‘I have stood here, and all Muzdalifā is a station.’”

This is how Imām Aḥmad gave this hadith; its ending is much abbreviated.

He gave us information of the different additions from the text of Aḥmad and Muslim, up to the statement of the Messenger of God (SAAS) to ‘Alī, “She spoke the truth. She spoke the truth. What was it you said when you declared your intention to make the ḥaḍīr?” ‘Alī replied, “O God, I am reciting the talbiyya for that which the Messenger of God (SAAS) recited it.” He went on, “I have a ḥaḍīt with me.” “Then do not declare your iḥrām concluded,” he told him. The total number of hadīts that ‘Alī brought from Yemen and were brought by the Messenger of God (SAAS) was 100.

“And all the people declared their iḥrām at an end and shortened their hair except for the Prophet (SAAS) and those who had brought hadīts with them.

“When it was the yawm al-tarwiyya99 they made their way to Minā and recited the talbiyya for the ḥajj. The Messenger of God (SAAS) mounted his camel and performed the al-zuhr, al-ṣaṣr, al-maghrib, al-‘ishr, and al-fajr prayers there. He then remained there a little while until the sun came up and he called for a pavilion of haircloth he had and it was set up for him at Namira.100

“The Messenger of God (SAAS) proceeded on, while Quraysh had no doubt that he was remaining at al-Mashʿar al-Ḥarām,101 as Quraysh used to do in the jāhilyya period. However, the Messenger of God (SAAS) went across to ‘Arafāt and found that the pavilion had been set up for him at Namira. There he dismounted.

“When the sun had begun to decline, he called for his camel Qaṣwāw and it was saddled for him. He then went down into the centre of the valley where he made an address to the people. He said, ‘Your blood and your possessions are sacrosanct for you, just as this day of yours is holy for you, in this month, in this your land.

99. The rite of “making provisions of water”, performed on the eight day of Dhū al-Ḥijja, the day preceding the “standing” at ‘Arafāt.
100. A location close to ‘Arafāt.
101. The station at Muzdalifā to the east of Mecca. The Quraysh, as opposed to all the other tribes, spent the ninth day of the ḥajj at this station as an indication of their superior status. They expected the Prophet to so the same, but he proceeded to ‘Arafāt along with the other tribes.
"I declare that everything relating to the jahiliyya is cast down beneath my two feet. The blood (feuds) of the jahiliyya are abolished. The first blood feud I dismiss is that relating to the blood of Ibni Rabi'a b. al-Ijārith brought up as a foster-child in Banū Sa'd and killed by Hudhayl. Also the interest charges of the jahiliyya are abolished. The first interest charge I abolish is that of al-Abbās b. 'Abd al-Muṭṭalib; it is all abolished.

"Fear God (in your treatment of) women. You have taken them in God's trust, and their persons are made permitted to you by God's word. You may require of them that they not allow anyone you dislike to enter your furnishings; if they should do this, then beat them, but not viciously. They have the right from you to have their sustenance and their clothing, with kindness.

"I have left amongst you something wherein, if you keep to it, you will not go astray thereafter: God's Book. You will be questioned about me. What is it you will say?' They responded, 'We will bear witness that you did convey (the message), that you gave good advice and did your duty.' He then spoke with his index finger, using it to convey meaning to the people, saying, 'O God, I bear witness! O God, I bear witness!' (He said this) three times.

"He had a call to prayer made and then arose and performed the al-zuhr prayer. Thereafter, he performed the al-ṣaṣr prayer; he made no other prayer between them both.

"After that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) rode his camel to the mawqif ('Arafat), making the chest of his mount face towards the rocks. He positioned Mt. al-Mashāt ahead of him and faced the ka'ba. He remained standing there until the sun set. The yellow of the sky had dissipated somewhat, and the sun-disk had set. Usāma b. Zayd then mounted behind him and the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) moved away; he had so tightened al-Qāswā's bridle that her head almost touched the front of his saddle. With his right hand he was making a gesture that said, 'People! Go easy! Go easy!' Whenever he passed over hilly terrain, he loosened his grip somewhat until she had climbed up.

"When he came to Muzdalifa he prayed the al-maghrib and the al-ishā with a single adhān and two iqāmas; between these two prayer times he did not speak prayers.

"The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) then lay down until the dawn came. He performed the al-fajr prayer until morning arrived, with an adhān and an iqāma. He then mounted al-Qāswā and proceeded to the mash'ar al-ḥarām (at Muzdalifa). He faced the qibla, spoke a prayer, praised and glorified God and asserted His Oneness. He remained standing until the dawn light was strong.

"He proceeded on before the sun rose, mounting al-Faḍl b. al-Abbās behind himself; this was a man with fine hair, a pale complexion and dignified mien. When the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) moved forward, several women in howdahs passed by, at a gallop. When al-Faḍl began looking towards them, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) placed his hand over the former’s face. Al-Faḍl moved his hand over to the other side, but the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) moved it back over to the other side of al-Faḍl’s face. Al-Faḍl then moved his face away from the other side, looking.

“When he reached the wādi Muḥāṣir, he spurred on his mount a little, then followed the middle trail that emerges at al-Jamrat al-kubra\(^{104}\) and he went on to the jamra, the stone pile at the tree. He cast seven pebbles at the stone mound, glorifying God with each pebble; each pebble was small and he threw them from the centre of the wādi.

“He then proceeded on to the sacrifice site, where he slaughtered 63 sacrificial camels by his own hand. He then allowed ‘Ali to sacrifice those that remained and had him share in his own ḥadi. He ordered that a piece of the meat of each animal be cut out and placed in a pot, where it was all cooked. Both men ate from that meat and drank the gravy.

“The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) then rode off and proceeded to the kaḥba. He performed the al-zuhr prayer in Mecca, and went over to Banti ‘Abd al-Muṭṭalib, who were distributing the water at zamzam. He said, ‘Draw water, ‘Abd al-Muṭṭalib! Were it not that people would usurp this right from you (by wanting to do the same in emulation of my sunna) I would certainly have joined you in drawing water.’ They handed him a bucket and he drank from it.’

Muslim then narrated it from ‘Amr b. Ḥafṣ, from his father, from Ja’far b. Muḥammad, from his father, from Jābir. He recounted it in similar words.

He proceeded to relate the story of Abu Sayyāra, to the effect that he (the Prophet (ṢAAS)), used to (perform the ḥajj with those of the jahiliyya riding on a mule. And that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, “I made sacrifice here, and all Miṣr is a place for sacrifice. And so make sacrifice on your journeys. I have stood here, and so all ʿArafāt is a station. And I have stood over here, and all Jamʿ \(^{105}\) is a station.”

Abū Da’ūd narrated it in full from al-Nuṭaylī, ḌUthmān b. Abū Shayba, Ḥishām b. ʿAmmār and Sulaymān b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān. No doubt some of these added a word or a point. All four quoted from Ḥātim b. Ismāʿīl, from Jābir, his account being similar to that of Muslim. We have referred above to some of his additions to it.

Abū Da’ūd and al-Nasāʾī also narrated it, from Yaṣqūb b. Ibrāhīm, from Yahyā b. Saʿd al-Qattān, from Jaʿfar. Al-Nasāʾī narrated it also, from Muḥammad b. al-Muṭhannā from Yahyā b. Saʿd, in part, from Ibrāhīm b. Ḥārūn al-Balkhī, from Ḥātim b. Ismāʿīl, in part.

\(^{104}\) It is said that Satan tried to mislead Ismāʿīl at three different places during his trek with his father Abraham towards the place of sacrifice. A part of the pilgrimage rites is the standing at the “pillars of Satan” in commemoration of that event.

\(^{105}\) Another name for al-Muzdaliḍa.
An Account of those places in which the Messenger of God (SAAS) prayed while travelling from Medina to Mecca on his 'umra and his hajj.

Al-Bukhari’s text has a section headed Chapter on the mosques on the way from Medina, and the places where the Messenger of God (SAAS) performed prayers.

He stated, “Muḥammad b. Abū Bakr al-Muqaddimī related to us as follows, ‘Fudayl b. Sulaymān related to us, quoting Mūsā b. Ḥaqī, who said, “I saw Salīm b. ‘Abd Allāh searching out places on the route, and praying in them. He would relate that his father used to pray in them, and that the latter had seen the Prophet (SAAS), pray in those places.” Nāfī’, related to me, from Ibn ʿUmar, may God be pleased with both, that he used to pray in those places. I questioned Salīm and I know only that he agreed with Nāfī about all these places. However, they did differ over a mosque at Sharaf al-Rawḥā.”

He (Fudayl) went on, “Ibrāhīm b. al-Mundhir said, ‘Mūsā b. Ḥaqī narrated to us, from Nāfī’, that ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar told him that the Messenger of God (SAAS) would dismount at Dhu al-Bulayfā when he performed the ‘umra and on his ʿījja, beneath an acacia tree at the place of the mosque that is there. Whenever he was returning from a military expedition, or a hajj or an ʿumra, and his path would pass through there, he would descend to the centre of the wādī. When he appeared at the wādī, he would make his mount kneel at the plain that was on its eastern edge. He would dismount and rest there, and not at the mosque that was at a rock, nor at the palm trees near which the mosque stood. There was a deep wādī nearby in which ʿAbd Allāh would pray. At its bottom there were piles of sand near which the Messenger of God (SAAS) would pray. The flood from the plain ultimately buried that location where ʿAbd Allāh would pray.’”

(The account went on to state that) ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar related to Nāfī’, that the Prophet (SAAS) would pray at the site of the small mosque, other than the one at the Sharaf al-Rawḥā. ʿAbd Allāh would point out the place where the Prophet (SAAS) would pray, and say, “Over there at your right when you stand praying in the mosque.” That mosque is at the right edge of the road when you are proceeding to Mecca. The distance between it and the bigger mosque is approximately a stone’s throw.

(The account goes on that) Ibn ʿUmar would pray towards the sand hillock which was at the end of al-Rawḥā. The side of that hillock would end at the edge of the road, below the mosque which lies between it and the beginning point of the open land, if on your way to Mecca. A mosque had been built there, but ʿAbd Allāh did not pray in that mosque. He would leave it on his left and his rear and pray in front of it, facing towards the sand hillock itself. ʿAbd Allāh would leave al-Rawḥā and not perform the al-ṣuhūr prayer until he reached that place, where he would pray. If he should be coming from Mecca and pass by it an hour before the al-ṣuhūr prayer, or at the end of the period before dawn, he would dismount to rest until he could pray the al-ṣuhūr prayer there.
(The account went on that) 'Abd Allah (Ibn 'Umar) related to him that the Prophet (SAAS) would dismount beneath a large sarha tree below al-Ruwaytha, at the right of the road and opposite it, in a place where there was a broad, level gulley which comes out at a hillock a little below the mail-station of al-Ruwaytha, some two miles away. Its top had broken off and it has bent at its centre; it stands on a track in which there are many deposits of sand.

(The account states that) 'Abd Allah b. 'Umar told Nafi' that the Prophet (SAAS) also prayed at the side of a hillock at the back of al-‘Arj, on the way to Haḍba; at that mosque there are two or three graves. Over them stand stone markers, to the right of the road, at some salam trees. It was between those trees that 'Abd Allāh would pass from al-‘Arj, after the sun had begun to decline after noon; he would perform the al-zuhr prayer in that mosque.

(The account states that) 'Abd Allāh b. 'Umar also related to him that the Messenger of God (SAAS) stopped at some trees to the left of the road at a rivulet below Harsha; that stream adjoins the extremity of Harsha, roughly an arrow’s cast away from the road. 'Abd Allāh would pray at the tree closest to the road; it was also the tallest tree.

'Abd Allāh b. 'Umar also told him that the Messenger of God (SAAS) would go down into the stream that is very close to Marr al-Zahrān, before Medina, when he would descend from al-Ṣafrūwāt. He would go down to the bed of the stream, to the right side of the road if you are headed for Mecca, there being only a stone’s throw between that place and the road.

(Nafi' also stated) that 'Abd Allāh b. 'Umar related to him that the Messenger of God (SAAS) would dismount at Dhu Tuwa and spend the night there. Next morning he would perform the al-subb prayer when he arrived in Mecca. The place where he would perform that prayer was at some rough hillocks; this was not at the mosque that had been built there, but lower down on some rough hillocks.

(The account proceeds to state that) 'Abd Allāh (b. 'Umar) related to him that the Messenger of God (SAAS) approached the two gaps in the mountain that stands between him and al-Jabal al-Ṭawil, facing the ka'ba and constructed the mosque that was built there to the left of the mosque beside the hillocks. The prayer-place of the Prophet (SAAS) was below it upon the black (hillocks). "You move some ten arms’ lengths away from the hillocks and then pray facing the two gaps in the mountain that stands between you and the ka'ba."

Al-Bukhārī, may God have mercy upon him, is alone in reporting this hadith in full and with this line of transmission. However, Muslim narrated it from the point, at its end, where it states, "that 'Abd Allāh b. 'Umar related to him that the Messenger of God (SAAS) would dismount at Dhu Tuwa" to the conclusion of the hadith. He gives a line from Muhammad b. Išāq al-Muṣayyabī, from Anas, from ʿIyyād, from Muṣā b. Uqba, from Nafi', from Ibn 'Umar.

Imām Aḥmad narrated it in full, from Abū Qurra Muṣā b. Tāriq, from Muṣā b. Uqba, from Nafi', from Ibn 'Umar in similar form.
Many - or most of - these places (named) are not known today, because the names of most of them have been changed by the bedouin who are there. Ignorance has overcome most of them.

The reason al-Bukhārī, may God have mercy upon him, gave them in his work was so that a person might find his way to them for contemplation or sightseeing. Or perhaps most or many of them were known in al-Bukhārī's time. God, Almighty is He, knows best.

Chapter: The entry of the Prophet (SAAS) into Mecca, may God the Almighty and Glorious, honour it well.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Musaddad related to him, quoting Yahyā b. ʿAbd Allāh, quoting Nāfi’, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) spent the night at Dhu Ṭuwā. When morning came, he entered Mecca.” Ibn ʿUmar would do this.

Muslim narrated it from a ḥadīth of Yahyā b. Saʿīd al-Qattān and added, “until he performed the al-ṣubḥ prayer”. Or his words were “until morning came”.

Muslim stated that Abū al-Rabiʿ al-Zahrānī related to him, quoting Hammād, from Ayyūb, from Nāfi’ that Ibn ʿUmar never came to Mecca without spending the night at Dhu Ṭuwā until morning came and he washed himself. He would then enter Mecca later that morning. He would relate that the Prophet (SAAS) would do this.

Al-Bukhārī narrated it from a ḥadīth of Hammād b. Zayd, from Ayyūb.

Both (these scholars) give it from a different line, from Ayyūb, from Nāfi’, from Ibn ʿUmar, to the effect that when he entered close to the sanctified area, he would refrain from reciting the talbīyya until he had spent the night at Dhu Ṭuwā. And he narrated as above.

We have given above the account given by both scholars through Mūsā b. ʿUqba, from Nāfi’, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said that the Messenger of God (SAAS) would spend the night at Dhu Ṭuwā until morning came. When he reached Mecca he would perform the al-ṣubḥ prayer. Moreover, it was at some rough hillocks that he would pray. And that the Messenger of God (SAAS) would face towards the two crevices of the mountain that stood between him and the Jabal al-Ṭawīl, towards the kaʿba, and that he kept (the place) where the mosque was (later) built at the left of the mosque beside the hillocks. (The ḥadīth states) that the prayer place of the Messenger of God (SAAS) was below it upon the black hillocks and that he would move some ten arms' lengths away from the hillocks, then pray facing the two gaps in the mountain that, “stood between you and the kaʿba”.

Both scholars included this in their saḥīḥ collections.

The outcome of all this is that when the Messenger of God (SAAS) had completed his journey to Dhu Ṭuwā, a place near Mecca adjacent to the sanctuary, he refrained from reciting the talbiyya because he had arrived at his objective. He stayed there overnight until morning, then performed the *al-*ṣubḥ prayer at that place they described – between the two gaps of the Jabal al-Ṭawil over from there.

Whoevers contemplated by sight these places referred to knows them very well and can visualize the spot where the Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the prayer.

He then bathed in order to enter Mecca. He then mounted and entered in full view, in daytime, from the high pass at al- Баţḥā. It is also called “Kadā” because people see it and it looks down upon them. He entered Mecca the same way the day of its conquest, as we related above.

Malik stated, from Nāfi‘, who quoted Ibn Umar as saying that the Messenger of God (SAAS) entered Mecca from the upper pass and left by the lower.

Both scholars included this in their ṣaḥīḥ collections, from Nāfi‘s ḥadīth.

They both give it also through ʿUbayd Allāh b. Umar, from Nāfi‘, quoting Ibn Umar, to the effect that the Prophet (SAAS) entered Mecca from the upper pass at al- Баţḥā, and left from the lower pass.

Both scholars relate a similar ḥadīth of Hishām b. ʿUrwa, from his father, quoting ʿAṣīmah.

When his gaze fell upon the kaʿba, the Prophet (SAAS) spoke the words narrated by al-Shāfiʿī in his musnad collection, as follows. Al-Shāfiʿī stated that Saʿīd b. Salim informed him, from Ibn Jurayj, that when he saw the kaʿba, the Messenger of God (SAAS) raised his hands and said, “O God, grant this building ever more honour, glory, respect and awe. And favour those who venerate and revere it and all those who make the ḥajj or the ʿumra pilgrimage to it, augmenting their respect, honour, glory and reverence.”

The ḥāfiz al-Bayhaqi stated, “This ḥadīth is incomplete. It has one witness, with a (tradition) that is mursal, from Sufyān al-Thawrī, from Abū Saʿīd al-Shāmī, from Makhūl, who said, ‘When the Prophet (SAAS) entered Mecca and saw the kaʿba, he would raise both hands and say, Allāhu Akbar, “God is most Great!”. Then he would state, “O God, You are peace, and peace comes from You. Greet us, therefore, our Lord in peace! O God, grant this building ever more honour, glory, awe and reverence. And favour those who make the ḥajj or the ʿumra to it, augmenting their respect, honour, glory and reverence.”’”

Al-Shāfiʿī stated that Saʿīd b. Salim informed him, from Ibn Jurayj, who said, “It was related to me from Miqsam, from Ibn ʿAbbās, from the Prophet (SAAS), who said, ‘Hands should be raised (after) prayer when one sees the kaʿba, and upon al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā, as well as in the evening with the throng upon ʿArafāt, at both monuments where stones are cast, and in the presence of a deceased person.’”

The ḥāfiz al-Bayhaqi stated that Muḥammad b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Abū Lāylā narrated this, from al-Ḥakam, from Miqsam, from Ibn ʿAbbās, as well as from Nafi', quoting Ibn 'Umar. One of his ahadith is mawquf, while the other is marfu' to the Prophet (SAAS), without reference to the deceased person.

Ibn Abī Laylā stated, “This (tradition) is not strong.”

The Prophet (SAAS) entered the mosque through the Banū Shayba gate.

The ḥāfiz al-Bayhaqi stated that it was related to him from Ibn Jurayj, from ‘Ata’ b. Abū Rabāḥ, who said, “The person in a state of ihram may enter from wherever he wishes.”

He went on to say, “The Prophet (SAAS) entered through the Banū Shayba gate and left through the Banū Makhzūm gate to al-Ṣafā.”

Al-Bayhaqi then stated, “This hadith is very mursal.”

Al-Bayhaqi gives evidence for the preferability of entering the ka'ba from the Banū Shayba gate by giving an account through Abu Da'ūd al-Tayalisi, (who said), “Ḥammād b. Sa'īd related to me, as did Qays b. Sallām, from Simāk b. Ḥarb, from Khalid b. ‘Ur‘ūra, from ‘Ali, may God be pleased with him, who said, ‘When the ka'ba collapsed, following (the reign) of Jurhum, Quraysh rebuilt it. When they wished to position the (black) stone, they argued over who should place it there. They agreed that the first person to enter through that gate should do so. It was the Messenger of God (SAAS), who came in through the Banū Shayba gate. He asked for a cloth, placed the stone in its middle, then told (a representative of) each sub-tribe to take hold of one of its sides, and they raised it up. The Messenger of God (SAAS) then took it and positioned it.’’”

We have given this in full in the chapter on the rebuilding of the ka'ba prior to the mission. Evidence for the preferability of entering through the Banū Shayba gate in this way is controversial. But God knows best.

DESCRIPTIONS OF THE CIRCUMAMBULATIONS MADE BY THE MESSENGER OF GOD (SAAS).

Al-Bukhārī stated that Aṣḥāb b. al-Faraj related to him, from Ibn Wahb, quoting ‘Amr b. Muḥammad, from Muḥammad b. ‘Abd al-Raḥmān, who said that he told the following to ‘Urwa, “‘A’īsha told me, ‘The first thing the Prophet (SAAS) did when he arrived (in Mecca) was to perform the ablutions. He then circumambulated; it was not an umra. Then Abū Bakr and ‘Umar performed the ha Naj as he had done. Following that, I performed the ha Naj with Abū al-Zubayr. He began first with a circumambulation; then I saw the muhājirūn and the anṣār do as he had. My mother told me that she, her sister, al-Zubayr and various others had recited the talbiyya for an umra. After they had touched the corner (of the ka'ba with the “black stone”) they declared their ihram concluded.’’”

This is the phraseology of al-Bukhārī. He also narrated it elsewhere from Ahmad b. Ṣa'īd. Muslim narrated it from Hārūn b. Sa'īd. All three accounts quote from Ibn Wahb.
Her statement, "it was not an 'umra", shows that the Messenger of God (SAAS) did not declare his ihram concluded between both rites (of the hajj and the 'umra).

Moreover, the first thing the Messenger of God (SAAS) did was to salute the "black stone", before the circumambulation, as Jabir stated, "until when he reached the ka'ba with him, he saluted the 'corner', jogged for three circumambulations and walked four".

Al-Bukhari stated that Muhammed b. Kathir related to him, quoting Sufyan, from al-A'mash, from Ibrahim, from Abi b. Rabia, from Umare, (who said) that when he reached the (black) stone, he kissed it and said, "I well know that you are a stone that can bring neither harm nor advantage. Had I not seen the Messenger of God (SAAS) kiss you, I would not have done so."

Muslim narrated this from Yahya b. Yahya, as did Abu Bakr b. Abub Shayba, Zuhayr b. Harb and Ibn Abu Numayr, all quoting from Abu Muawiya, from al-A'mash, from Ibrahim, from Abi b. Rabia, who said, "I saw Umar kiss the stone and say, 'I well know that you are a stone that can bring neither harm nor advantage. Had I not seen the Messenger of God (SAAS) kiss you, I would not have done so."

Imam Al-Humad stated that Muhammed b. Ubayda and Abu Muawiya narrated to him, both saying, "Al-A'mash related to me, from Ibrahim, from Abi b. Rabia, who said, 'I saw Umar go to the stone and say, 'I swear by God, I well know that you are a stone and can bring neither harm nor advantage; had I not seen the Messenger of God (SAAS) kiss you, I would not have done so.' He then approached and kissed it."

This text requires that he made his statement and then kissed it thereafter, contrary to the text given by the compilers of both sahih collections. But God knows best.

Al-Humad stated that Waki' and Yahya related to him as follows, the wording being from Waki', from Hisham, from his father, who said that 'Umar b. al-Khaṭṭab went to the stone and said, "I well know that you are a stone that can bring neither harm nor advantage. Had I not seen the Messenger of God (SAAS) kiss you, I would not have done so." Hisham's father went on, "He then kissed it."

This hadith is incomplete in its line between Urwa b. al-Zubayr and 'Umar.

Al-Bukhari also stated that Sa'id b. Abü Maryam related to him, quoting Muhammed b. Jafar b. Abü Kathir, quoting Zayd b. Aslam, from his father, who said that 'Umar b. al-Khaṭṭab said to the corner (stone), "I swear by God, I well know that you are a stone and can bring neither harm nor advantage. Had I not seen the Messenger of God (SAAS) salute you, I would not have done so." And he did salute it.

Then he (Umar) stated, "We had nothing to do with geomancy. We did, however, see the unbelievers using it, and God destroyed them." He went on, "It is something that the Messenger of God (SAAS) did and we do not want to give it up.”

This shows that the salutation (of the stone) came after the statement.

Al-Bukhārī stated that ʿĀhmād b. Sinān related to him, quoting Yazīd b. Hārūn, quoting Warqāʾ, quoting Zayd b. Aslam, from his father, who said, “I saw ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb kiss the stone and say, ‘Had I not seen the Messenger of God (SAAS) kiss you, I would not have done so.’”

Muslim b. al-Ḥajjāj stated that Ḥarmāla related to him, quoting Ibn Wahb, quoting Yūnus – he being Ibn Yazīd al-Ayli – and ʿĀmr – he being Ibn Dinār (who narrated the hadīth) – and Hārūn b. Saʿīd al-Abī related to us, quoting Ibn Wahb, quoting ʿĀmr, from Ibn Shihāb, from Sālim, quoting his father as saying, “ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb kissed the stone and then said, ‘I swear by God, I know that you are a stone. And had I not seen the Messenger of God (SAAS) kiss you, I would not have done so.’”

In his account, Hārūn added, “ʿĀmr stated, ‘And Zayd b. Aslam related the same to me, from his father Aslam’ – meaning from ʿUmar – ‘as above.’”

This is clear in stating that the kiss preceded the statement. But God knows best.

Imām Ṭāhāstated that ʿAbd al-Razzāq related to him, quoting ʿAbd Allāh, from Nāfīʾ, from Ibn ʿUmar, that ʿUmar kissed the stone and then stated, “I know you are a stone. Had I not seen the Messenger of God (SAAS) kiss you, I would not have done so.”

This is how Imām Ṭāhā narrated it.

Muslim included it in his collection, from Muḥammad b. Abū Bakr al-Muqaddamī, from Ḥammād b. Zayd, from Ayyūb, from Nāfīʾ, from Ibn ʿUmar, (who said that) ʿUmar kissed the stone, then stated, “I am kissing you even though I well know you are a stone. But I saw the Messenger of God (SAAS) kiss you.”

Muslim then stated that Khalāf b. Hīshām and al-Muqaddamī related to him, as did Abū Kāmil and Qatayba, all quoting from Ḥammād. Khalāf stated, “Ḥammād b. Zayd related to us, from ʿAṣīm al-ʿĀhwāl, from Abū Allāh b. Sarjīs, who said, ‘I saw al-ʿAṣlāt’ – meaning ʿUmar – ‘kiss the stone and say, “By God, I am kissing you even though I well know that you are a stone and that you can bring neither harm nor advantage. Had I not seen the Messenger of God (SAAS) kiss you, I would not have done so.”’”

In the account of al-Muqaddamī and Abū Kāmil, the words are, “I saw al-ʿUsaylī.” 106

Muslim is alone in giving this; al-Bukhārī does not.

Imām Ṭāhā narrated it from Abū Muḥāwīya, from ʿAṣīm al-ʿĀhwāl, from Abū Allāh b. Sarjīs. Ṭāhā also narrated it from Ghundar, from Shuṭba, from ʿAṣīm al-ʿĀhwāl.

106. The word is a diminutive form of ʿAṣlāt, ‘the bald-headed’, ʿUmar, that is.
Imām Aḥmad stated that ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Mahādī related to him, from Sufyān, from Ibrāhīm b. ʿAbd al-Aʿlā, from Suwayd b. Ghaffāl, who said, "I saw ʿUmar kiss the stone and say, ‘I well know that you are a stone that cannot bring harm nor advantage, but I saw Abū al-Qāsim,107 may God’s peace and blessings be upon him, saluting you.’" ʿUmar then narrated it from Wākiʿ, from Sufyān al-Thawrī. He added, “And he kissed it and embraced it.”

Muslim related it similarly from a ḥadīth of ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Mahādī, without additions. And from a ḥadīth of Wākiʿ with the following addition, “He kissed and embraced the stone and said, ‘I saw the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) saluting you.’”

Imām Aḥmad stated that ʿAffān related to him, quoting Wahīb, quoting ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿOthmān b. Khuthaym, from Saʿīd b. Jubayr, from Ibn ʿAbbas (who said) that ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb bent down over the corner and said, “I well know that you are a stone; had I not seen my beloved, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), kiss you and salute you, I would not have saluted nor kissed you.” He then recited, “In the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) you had a fine example” (ṣūrat al-Anfūs; XXXIII, v.21).

This line of transmission is excellent and strong; they (the compilers of the canonical collections) did not include it.

Abū Daʿūd al-Ṭayalīsī stated that Jaʿfar b. ʿUthmān b. al-Qurashi related to him, from the people of Mecca. He said, “I saw Muḥammad b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Jaʿfar kiss the stone and he prostrated over it. Then he said, ‘I saw your maternal uncle Ibn ʿAbbas kiss it and prostrate himself over it. And Ibn ʿAbbas stated, ‘I saw ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb kiss it and prostrate over it. And ʿUmar then said, ‘Had I not seen the Prophet (ṢAAS) kiss you, I would not have done so.”’

This line of transmission is also good. But the major authorities did not include it; except, that is, for al-Nasāʾī, who gave a line from ʿAmr b. ʿUthmān, from al-Walīd b. Muslim, from Ḥanẓāla b. Abū Sufyān, from Ṭawūs, from Ibn ʿAbbas, from ʿUmar. He related it in similar terms.

Imām Aḥmad also narrated this ḥadīth from ʿUmar in his musnad collection, from Yaʿlā b. Umayya and Abū Yaʿlā al-Mawṣili, through Hishām b. Ḥashish b. al-Ashqar, who quoted ʿUmar.

We gave all the above with their various lines of transmission, differences in wording and interpretations and explanations in the book we compiled of ḥadīth traced to the Commander of the Believers, ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb, may God be pleased with him. And all praise and credit go to God.

In sum, this tradition is narrated by various lines from the Commander of the Believers, ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb, may God be pleased with him. They provide conclusive proof for most of the imāms relating to this issue.

107. An honorific for the Prophet (ṢAAS).
In this account, it is not stated that the Prophet (SAAS) prostrated over the stone, except, that is, for the purport of the account of Abū Da‘ūd al-Ṭayalisi, from Ja‘far b. ‘Uthmān; and it is not fully clear in its line of transmission.

The ḥafiz al-Bayhaqi, however, narrated it through Abū ʿĀsim al-Nabī, quoting Ja‘far b. ʿAbd Allāh, who said, “I saw Muḥammad b. ʿAbbād b. Ja‘far kiss the stone, prostrate over it and then say, ‘I saw your maternal uncle, Khalīd Ibn ʿAbbās, kiss it and prostrate over it. And Ibn ʿAbbās said, ‘I saw ʿUmar kiss it and prostrate over it. He then said, ‘I saw the Messenger of God (SAAS) act like this, and so I did it.’”

Al-Ṭabrānī stated, “Only Yahyā b. Yamān related it from Sufyān.”

Al-Bukhārī stated that Musaddād related to him, quoting Ḥammād, from al-Zubayr b. ʿArabī, who said, “A man asked ʿUmar’s son about the salutation of the stone. He said, ‘I saw the Messenger of God (SAAS) salute it and kiss it. He said, ‘What if (in the process) I am jostled or overwhelmed by the crowd?’ Ibn ʿUmar replied, ‘Abandon such talk! I did indeed see the Messenger of God (SAAS) salute it and kiss it!’”

Although al-Bukhārī gave this, Muslim did not.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Musaddād related to him, quoting Yahyā, from ʿUbayd Allāh, from Nāfi‘, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said, “I never omitted saluting these two corners, in hard times or easy, ever since I saw the Messenger of God (SAAS) salute them both.”

(ʿUbayd Allāh continued) “I asked Nāfi‘, ‘Did Ibn ʿUmar walk between the two corners?’ He replied, ‘He only walked so that it would be easier for his salutation.’”

Abū Da‘ūd and al-Nasāʾī narrated from a ḥadīth of Yahyā b. Saʿd al-Qatṭān, from ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz b. Abū Rawwād, from Nāfi‘, from Ibn ʿUmar (who said) that the Prophet (SAAS) never failed to salute the Yamānī (south-west) corner and the stone in each circumambulation.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Abū al-Walīd related to him, quoting Layth, from Ibn Shihāb, from Sālim b. ʿAbd Allāh, from his father, who said, “The only corners of the kaʿba I saw the Prophet (SAAS) salute were the two Yamānī corners.”

Muslim narrated it from Yahyā b. Yahyā and Qutayba, from al-Layth b. Saʿd.

In one account from him, it is related that he said, “I don’t think that the Prophet (SAAS) would have neglected to salute both Shāmī corners except for the fact that they were not completed on the foundations (set by) ʿAbraham.”

108. That is, the two corners on the side closest to Yemen. The other two are known as the “Shāmī” corners and are closest to Syria—al-Shām, that is.
Al-Bukhārī stated, “And Muhammad b. Bakr said that he was informed by Ibn Jurayj, quoting ‘Amr b. Dinar, from Abū al-Sha‘thār who said, ‘And who would avoid touching anything from the ka‘ba!’”

Mū‘awwiya used to salute the corners and so Ibn ‘Abbās told him, “These two corners are not saluted.” He replied, “No part of the ka‘ba is to be left out. Ibn al-Zubayr used to salute them all.”

Al-Bukhārī, may God Almighty have mercy upon him, was alone in giving this. Muslim stated, in his sahih collection, that Abū al-Ṭāhir related to him, quoting Ibn Wahb, quoting ‘Amr b. al-Ĥārith, (who said) that Qatāda b. Da‘āma related to him that Abū al-Ṭufayl al-Bakrī related to him that he heard Ibn ‘Abbās say, “I only ever saw the Messenger of God (SAAS) salute the two Yamānī corners.” Muslim is alone in giving this.

The account related by Ibn ‘Umar agrees with what Ibn ‘Abbās stated – that the two Shāmī corners were not saluted because they were not completed on the foundations (set by) Abraham. This was because Quraysh could not meet the expense, and they put the stone outside of the ka‘ba when they built it. This is explained above.

The Prophet (SAAS) wished that it had been built and completed on the foundations of Abraham. But he was concerned over the fact that the people had so recently been in the jahiliyya period, and that they would have resented it (the omission).

During the rule of ‘Abd Allāh b. al-Zubayr, he demolished the ka‘ba and rebuilt it according to the directions given by the Messenger of God (SAAS), as related by his (‘Abd Allāh’s) aunt, the Mother of the Believers’, Ɗa‘īsha, daughter of Abū Bakr.

If Ibn al-Zubayr used to salute all the corners, then it was after their rebuilding on the foundations of Abraham; then this would have been fine. And this is certainly the preponderant view.

Abū Da‘ūd stated that Musaddad related to him, quoting Yahyā, from ‘Abd al-‘Azīz b. Abū Rawwād, from Naṣīr, from Ibn ‘Umar, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) never failed to salute the Yamānī corner and the stone during each circumambulation.”

Al-Nasā‘ī narrated this from Muḥammad b. al-Muthannā, from Yahyā. Al-Nasā‘ī stated that Ya‘qūb b. Ibrahim al-Dawrāqī narrated to him, quoting Yahyā b. Sa‘īd al-Qaṭṭān, from Ibn Jurayj, from Yahyā b. Ɗubayd, from his father, from ‘Abd Allāh b. al-Sā‘īb, who said, “I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say, between the Yamānī corner and the stone, ‘O our God, bring us good on earth, and also good in the hereafter; save us from the torture of hell-fire’” (ṣūrat al-Baqara; II, v.201).

Abū Da‘ūd narrated it from Musaddad, from Ɗisā b. Yūnus, from Ibn Jurayj. Al-Tirmidhī stated that Mahmūd b. Ghaylān narrated to him, quoting Yahyā b. Ādam, quoting Sufyān, from Ja‘far b. Muḥammad, from his father, from Jabir, who said, “When the Prophet (SAAS) arrived in Mecca, he entered the mosque and saluted the stone. He then passed on to his right, jogged for three circumambulations and walked four. He thereafter went to the maqâm Ibrahim, ‘Abraham’s station’, and said, ‘And adopt maqâm Ibrahim as a place to pray.’ He performed two raka‘āt with the maqâm between himself and the ka‘ba. He then, after two raka‘āt went to the stone and saluted it. After that he left for al-Ṣafâ. I think he said, ‘Al-Ṣafâ and al-Marwa are rites of God.’”

This is a hadith that is hasan and sahih. And scholars act on that basis.

Ishāq b. Ruhawayh narrated it as above, from Yahyā b. Ādam. And al-Ṭabrānî narrated it from al-Nasā’î and others, from ‘Abd al-A‘lā b. Wāsîl, from Yahyā b. Ādam.

An Account of how the Messenger of God (SAAS) jogged and moved at a fast pace on his circumambulations and the i'tībā‘, ‘tucking up one’s gown under the right arm’.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Aṣbaqā b. al-Faraj related to him, quoting Ibn Wahb, from Yūnus, from Ibn Shihāb, from Sālim, from his father, who said, “I saw the Messenger of God (SAAS), when he arrived in Mecca, act as follows. As he began the circumambulations, he saluted the ‘black stone’, and then he ran for three courses out of the seven.”

Muslim narrated it from Abū al-Ṭāhir b. al-Sarh, as did Ḥarmala, both of them quoting from Ibn Wahb.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Muḥammad b. Sallām related to him, quoting Shurayḥ b. al-Nūmān, quoting Fulayḥ, from Nāfī‘, from Ibn ‘Umar, who said, “The Prophet (SAAS) ran for three courses, then walked for four during the hajj and the ’umra.”

Al-Layth agreed with this, quoting from Kathīr b. Farqad, from Nāfī‘, from Ibn ‘Umar, from the Prophet (SAAS).

Al-Bukhārī is alone in giving this.

Al-Nasā’î narrated it from Muḥammad and from ‘Abd al-Rahmān, both of whom were sons of ‘Abd Allāh b. ‘Abd al-Ḥakam. They both quoted from Shurayḥ b. al-Layth, from his father, al-Layth b. Sa‘d, from Kathīr b. Farqad, from Nāfī‘, from Ibn ‘Umar.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Ibrāhīm b. al-Mundhir related to him, quoting Abū Ḫamrā Anas b. Ḥiyād, quoting Mūsā b. Ṭalib, from Nāfī‘, from ‘Abd Allāh b. ‘Umar, (who said) that the Messenger of God (SAAS), when he first arrived in Mecca and began the circumambulations for the hajj or the ’umra, would run for three courses and walk for four and then would make two raka‘āt before making the courses between al-Ṣafâ and al-Marwa.

Muslim narrated it from a hadith of Mūsā b. Ṭalib.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Ibrāhīm b. al-Mundhir related to him, quoting Anas, from ‘Ubayd Allāh b. ‘Umar, from Nāfī‘, from Ibn ‘Umar, (who said) that the Messenger of God (SAAS), "would for the first tawaf (circumambulation) move at a fast pace for three circumambulations, and then walk for four. And he also ran in the middle of the course when he passed between al-Šāfā and al-Marwa."

Muslim narrated it from a hadith of Ubayd Allāh b. 'Umar. Muslim stated that 'Abd Allāh b. 'Umar b. Abān al-Jufrī informed him, quoting Ibn Mubārak, quoting 'Ubayd Allāh, from Nāfi', from Ibn 'Umar, who said that the Messenger of God (SAAS) moved at a jog from the stone to the stone for three circumambulations, and then walked for four.

He went on to narrate it from a hadith of 'Abd Allāh b. Abū Da'ūd, from Ubayd Allāh, in similar terms. Muslim also stated that Abū al-'Tāhir related to him, quoting 'Abd Allāh b. Wāḥib, quoting Mālik and Ibn Jurayj, from Ja'far b. Muḥammad, from his father, from Jābir b. 'Abd Allāh, to the effect that the Messenger of God (SAAS) moved at a jog for three circumambulations from the stone back to the stone. And 'Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb asked, "Why the movement at a jog and the 'exposing of the shoulder', seeing that God had firmly established Islam and had ousted apostasy? However, we will not give up anything we used to do with the Messenger of God (SAAS)."

All of this refutes Ibn 'Abbas and those who support his view that the movement at a jog is not an orthodox practice, since the Messenger of God (SAAS) did perform it when he and his Companions arrived on the morning of the Wednesday – during the 'umrāt al-qatā'a, that is – and the polytheists commented, "A delegation is arriving who have been weakened by the Yathrib fever." And so the Messenger of God (SAAS) ordered them to move at a jog for three courses, then walk between the two corners. He only prevented them from jogging for all the circumambulations because of his concern for their health.

This is firmly established in both ṣaḥīḥ collections; his statement giving the reasons for this are very clear in the ṣaḥīḥ collection of Muslim.

It is as though Ibn 'Abbās denies that there was movement at a jog on the hijājat al-wadā‘! This fact, however, is fully substantiated as above. Indeed, in it there is evidence that the jogging was completed in the course from the stone and back to it. And that the passing between the two Yamānī corners was not made at a walking pace because of the absence of that cause referred to, namely weakness.

It is stated in an authentic hadith from Ibn 'Abbās, that they moved at a jog between them at the 'umra from al-Jīrāna and that they performed idṭiba‘, "tucked up their gowns under their right arms".

This fact also refutes the above objection, since there was no longer any fear remaining at the time of the 'umra from al-Jīrāna, since it occurred after the conquest of Mecca, as told above.
Imam Abū al-Fidā' Ismā'īl Ibn Kathīr 225

Herāmād b. Salama narrated it from ‘Abd Allah b. Uthmān b. Khuthaym, from Sa‘īd b. Jubyar, from Ibn ‘Abbās, to the effect that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) and his Companions performed the ‘umra from al-Ji‘rāna and moved at a jog around the ka‘ba, tucking their garments under their armpits and over their shoulders.

Abū Dā‘ud narrated it from a hadīth of Ḥammād in similar words, as well as from a hadīth of ‘Abd Allah b. Khuthaym, from Abū al-Ṭufayl, from Ibn ‘Abbās.

Al-Tirmidhī narrated it from a hadīth of al-Thawrī and categorized it as ḥasan sahih.

Abū Dā‘ud stated that Muḥammad b. Kathīr related to him, quoting Sufyān, from Ibn Jurayj, from Ibn Ya‘la, from his father, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) circumambulated with a green cloak he was wearing muḏḥaba‘, ‘tucked up’, under his arm.”

Imām Aḥmad narrated it similarly, from Wāki‘, from al-Thawrī, from Ibn Jurayj, from Ibn Ya‘la, from his father, to the effect that when the Prophet (ṢAAS) arrived in Mecca, he circumambulated the ka‘ba while wearing a cloak from the Ḥadramawt muḏḥab‘, “tucked up”.

Jābir stated in his hadīth quoted above, that when they reached the ka‘ba, the Prophet (ṢAAS) saluted the “black stone”, jogged for three circumambulations and walked for four. When he had finished, he made his way to the maqām Ibřāhīm and recited, “And use Abraham’s station as a place for prayer” (sūrat al-Baqara; II, v.125). He positioned himself so that the maqām was between himself and the ka‘ba. He related that he performed two raka‘at and then recited, “Say, ‘He is God the One’” (sūrat al-Ikhlaṣ; CXII, v.1), and “Say: ‘O Unbelievers’” (sūrat al-Kāfirdin; CIX, v.1).

What if it were asked whether the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was mounted or on foot on this circumambulation?

The answer would be that two different accounts have been transmitted that might seem contradictory. We will give both and offer reconciliation between them and so refute those who imagine there to be a contradiction in them. And through God comes success; His help is sought and He is sufficient for us and the best support of all.

Al-Bukhmārī, may God have mercy upon him, stated that Aḥmad b. Ṣāliḥ and Yaḥyā b. Sulaymān both related to him that Ibn Wahb related to him, quoting Yūnus, from Ibn Shihāb, from ʿUbayd Allah b. ʿAbd Allah, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) circumambulated while upon his camel at the hijjat al-wadā‘, saluting the corner with a bent staff.”
The other major scholars promulgated it, except for al-Tirmidhi, by various lines from Ibn Wahb.

Al-Bukhari stated that al-Darawardi supported this, from the nephew of al-Zuhri, who quoted his uncle.

This sequence is very odd.

Al-Bukhari stated that Muhammad b. al-Muthanna related to him, quoting ʿAbd al-Wahhab, quoting Khālid al-Ḥadhīḥa, from Ikrima, from Ibn ʿAbbas, who said, "The Prophet (SAAS) circumambulated the kaʿba on a camel; each time he came to the corner, he gestured towards it."

Al-Tirmidhi narrated it from a hadith of ʿAbd al-Wahhab b. ʿAbd al-Majīd al-Thaqafi and ʿAbd al-Wārith, both of them quoting from Khālid b. Mahrān al-Ḥadhīḥa, from Ikrima, from Ibn ʿAbbas, who said, "The Messenger of God (SAAS) circumambulated upon his mount; and when he ended up at the corner, he gestured to it."

He categorized this as ḥasan sahih.

Al-Bukhari went on to state that Musaddad related to him, quoting Khālid b. ʿAbd Allāh, from Khālid al-Ḥadhīḥa, from Ikrima, from Ibn ʿAbbas, who said, "The Prophet (SAAS) circumambulated the kaʿba upon a camel; and when he came to the corner, he gestured to it with something he had and invoked, 'Allāhu Akbar! "God is most Great!"'"

Ibrahīm b. Ṭāhīnān supported this, quoting Khālid al-Ḥadhīḥa.

He (al-Bukhari) traced this comment in his kitāb al-Ṭawāf back on a line from ʿAbd Allāh b. Muhammad, from Abū ʿAmīr, from Ibrahīm b. Ṭāhīnān.

Muslim narrated (it) from al-Ikām b. Musā, from Shuʿayb b. Ishāq, from Hishām b. ʿUrwa, from his father, from ʿAisha, to the effect that on the ṭijjat al-wadaʿ the Messenger of God (SAAS) circumambulated around the kaʿba on a mule saluting the corner, disliking (the possibility) that the people would turn away from him.109

This substantiates that on the ṭijjat al-wadaʿ, the Messenger of God (SAAS) circumambulated upon a mule. However, during the ṭijjat al-wadaʿ he made three tawāf. The first was that of al-qudūm. The second that of the ifāda, that being the tawāf al-fard, it being the day for the sacrifice. The third was the tawāf al-wadāʿ.110

Perhaps his being mounted referred to one of the other two, or to them both. Regarding the tawāf al-qudūm, he was on foot for it. Al-Shāfiʿī gives a text on all this. But God knows best and is most Wise.

Proof for this explanation is provided by what the ḥāfīz Abū Bakr al-Bayhaqī stated in his work al-Sunan al-Kabīr: "Abū ʿAbd Allāh al-Ḥāfīz told us, quoting Abū Bakr Muḥammad b. al-Muʿāmmil b. al-Ḥasan b. Ṭūl, quoting al-Faḍl b.

109. For giving up a pre-Islamic practice that they favoured.
110. The tawāf al-qudūm is performed on arrival into the city of Mecca and the Sacred Mosque for the first time. The tawāf al-ifāda is a key rite of the ḥajj ceremony, while the tawāf al-wadāʿ is performed when bidding farewell to the Sacred City.
Muḥammad b. al-Musayyab, quoting Nuʿaym b. Ḥammād, quoting ʿĪsā b. Yūnus, from Muḥammad b. ʿĪsāq – Ibn Yasār, that is, may God have mercy upon him – from Abū Jaʿfar – he being Muḥammad b. ʿAlī b. al-ʿĪsāq – from Jabir b. ʿAbd Allāh, who said, ‘We went into Mecca as dawn rose. The Prophet (ṢAAS) came to the door of the mosque and made his camel kneel. Then he entered the mosque, beginning at the stone, which he saluted. His eyes welled with tears. He then moved at a jog for three circumambulations, and walked for four. When he had finished, he kissed the stone, placed his hands upon it and then wiped them over his face.’’

This line of transmission is excellent.

The account given by Abū Daʿūd states that Musaddad related to him, quoting Khalīd b. ʿAbd Allāh, quoting Yazīd b. Abū Ziyād, from ʿIrīma, from Ibn ʿAbbas, to the effect that when the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) arrived in Mecca, he was suffering somewhat.

He circumambulated on his camel and when he reached the corner, he saluted it with his staff. When he had completed the circumambulation, he made his camel kneel and then performed two ṛaḍār in prayer.

Yazīd b. Abū Ziyād, who is regarded as a weak source, is alone in giving this. He did not refer, moreover, to it having been the ḥijājat al-wada’, nor that it was the first circumambulation of the ḥijājat al-wada’.

And neither Ibn ʿAbbas, in the authentic ḥadīth from him given by Muslim, nor Jābir, similarly, said that the Prophet (ṢAAS) rode during his circumambulation due to his weakness. Both these authorities in fact referred to the large throng of people and their massing around him. He did not like for them to be a throng in front of him. Information on this will be given shortly hereafter, if God so wills it.

This second act of kissing, moreover, mentioned by Ibn Ishāq in his account, that after the circumambulation and also after his having performed the two ṛaḍār, is firmly set in the saḥīḥ collection of Muslim, from a ḥadīth of Jabir. In it he stated, after reference to praying for the two ṛaḍār of the circumambulation, “he then returned to the corner and saluted it”.

Muslim b. al-Ḥajjāj stated in his saḥīḥ collection that Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba and Ibn Numayr together related to him, from Abū Khaḍīl, that Abū Bakr stated, “Abū Khālid al-Ahmār related to us, from ʿUbayd Allāh, from Nāfi’, who said, ‘I saw Ibn ʿUmar salute the stone with his hand and then kiss his hand. He said, ‘I have not given it up since I saw the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) do it.’”

This suggests that he saw the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) (kiss his hands) on one of his circumambulations or in the last salutation he made, as we have related. Or that Ibn ʿUmar did not actually get to the stone due to some weakness he had, or so that he would not jostle against other persons and so do them harm.

For the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) spoke as follows to Ibn ʿUmar’s father, as quoted by ʿAlīmad in his munṣāḥ collection, “Waki’ related to us, quoting Sufyān, from Abu Ya'fur al-‘Abdi, who said, 'I heard a sheikh in Mecca during the reign of al-‘Hajjaj quote from ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb as having said that the Messenger of God (SAAS) told him, ‘‘Umar, you are a strong man. Don’t jostle at the stone, perhaps harming someone who is weak; if you should find the way to it clear, then salute it. Otherwise, face it and say Allāhu Akbar “God is most Great!”.’”

This is an excellent line of transmission; however, the narrator who quotes ‘Umar is unknown and is not named.

It is apparent, however, that this hadith is trustworthy and important. For al-Shafi’ī narrated it from Sufyān b. Uyayna, from Abu Ya’fur al-‘Abdi, his name being Waqdān, (who said), “I heard a man of Khuzā’i say, following the killing of Ibn al-Zubayr who had been ruler of Mecca, ‘The Messenger of God (SAAS) said to ‘Umar, ‘Abū Ḥafṣ, you are a strong man, so don’t jostle at the corner in case you harm someone weak. However, if you find the way clear, then salute it; otherwise say, ‘God is most Great’, then pass on.’”

Sufyān b. Uyayna stated, “He (the source quoted) was ‘Abd al-Raḥman b. al-‘Harith; al-‘Hajjaj had made him Governor or Mecca when he departed from there following the death of Ibn al-Zubayr.”

I note that this ‘Abd al-Raḥman was a distinguished and important man. He was one of the four persons whom ‘Uthmān b. ‘Affān appointed to write out the copies of the Holy Qurān whom he dispatched to all places abroad; this text has met unanimous acceptance.

Accounts of the circumambulation of the Prophet (SAAS) between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa.

Muslim narrated in his sahih collection quoting Jābir in his long hadith given above. Following his report of the Prophet (SAAS) having made seven circumambulations of the ka’ba and his having performed two prayer raka’āt at the maqām Ibrāhīm, he went on to say that he returned to the corner (al-rukn), saluted it and then left through the door towards al-Ṣafā. When he approached al-Ṣafā, he recited, “al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa are rites of God” (sūrat al-Baqara; II, v.158). He then said that he would begin with that with which God began.

He commenced at al-Ṣafā and scaled it until he saw the ka’ba. Facing towards it, he called out, “God is most Great!” Then he declaimed, “There is no god but God alone! He has no associate. He has power, and to Him there is praise. He has control over everything. There is no god but God! He has fulfilled His promise. He has aided his servant, and has alone defeated the factions.” During this, he prayed and spoke similar words three times.

He then came down until his feet were set in the wādī; he moved at a jog, until having ascended, he walked to al-Marwa. He scaled it until he looked over to the ka’ba and he spoke upon it what he had upon al-Ṣafā.
Imām Aḥmad stated that 'Umar b. Harūn al-Balkhl, Abū Ḥafṣ, that is, quoted Ibn Jurayj, from one of the Banū Ya'qūb b. Umayya, who quoted his father as saying, "I saw the Prophet (SAAS) proceed between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa wearing a najrānī burda, μudšabba′,an, ‘gown from Hajrān tucked up beneath his armpit’.”

Imām Aḥmad stated, quoting Yūnūs, quoting ‘Abd Allāh b. al-Muammil, from ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-Raḥmān, quoting ‘Abd Allah b. al-Mu‘ammil, from ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-Raḥmān, quoting ‘Aṭā b. Abū Rabal, from ‘Atīyya, from Ḥabibā, daughter of Abū Naḥrāt, who said, "I went into Ḥusayn’s house, along with some women of Quraysh, while the Prophet (SAAS) was circumambulating between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa. As he ran, his izār, ‘his waist-wraper’, was moving around because of the energy with which he was running. He was saying to his Companions, “Run! God made running incumbent upon you.”"

Aḥmad also stated that Shurayḥ related to us, quoting ‘Abd Allāh b. al-Mu‘ammil, quoting ‘Aṭā b. Abū Rabal, from ‘Atīyya, daughter of Shayba, from Ḥabibā, daughter of Abū Tajrat. She said, “I saw the Prophet (SAAS) circumambulating between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa; the people were ahead of him, and he behind them. He was running so vigorously that I could see his knees. His izār was moving around and he was saying, ‘Run, for God has made running incumbent upon you.’”

Aḥmad is alone in giving this.

Aḥmad also narrated it from ‘Abd al-Raẓzāq, from Ma‘mar, from Wāṣil, the freed-man of Abū ‘Uyayna, from Mūsā b. ‘Ubayda, from Ṣafiyya, daughter of Shayba, (who stated) that a woman informed her that she had heard the Prophet (SAAS), while passing between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa, saying, “Running (between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa) has been made incumbent upon you, so run!”

This woman was Ḥabibā, daughter of Abū Tajrat, who is quoted in the first two aḥādīth. (It is also related) from the mother of the son of Shayba b. ‘Uthmān, to the effect that she saw the Prophet (SAAS), while he was running between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa, saying, “The valley is only to be traversed vigorously.”

Al-Nasāʾī (also) narrated it. What is meant here by al-sāy, “running”, is the movement from al-Ṣafā to al-Marwa and back. What is meant her by al-sāy is not movement at a fast pace or racing, for God definitely did not make that incumbent upon us. Indeed, if a person walks in that same manner for the seven circumambulations between them both and does not jog in the river bed, that will suffice him (from God) according to the community of scholars; we know of no dispute among them regarding that.

Al-Tirmidhī, may God have mercy upon him, transmitted this from the scholarly community. He stated that Yūsuf b. Ṣāliḥ related to him, quoting Ibn Fudayl, from ‘Aṭā b. al-Sāfīb, from Kathīr b. Jahmān, who said, “I saw Ibn Umar walking on the course, and I asked, ‘Are you going to walk on the passage between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa?’ He replied, ‘If I should run, I have seen the Messenger of God (SAAS) run; and if I should walk, I have also seen him walk. I am now a very old man (and am forced to walk).’”

Al-Tirmidhī stated, “This hadīth is hasan ṣaḥīḥ.”

Ibn ‘Umar’s statement that he witnessed both activities by the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) offers two possibilities. One is that he saw him move on one occasion at a walking pace from which jogging was absolutely absent. The second is that he saw him run for part of the way and walk for a part.

This (latter) is a strong possibility, since al-Bukhārī and Muslim narrated from a ḥadīth of ‘Ubayd Allah b. ‘Umar al-‘Umai, from Nāfi‘ from Ibn ‘Umar, to the effect that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) would run along the bed of the river when he made the circumambulation between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā.

It is stated above in the ḥadīth of Jābir that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) came down from al-Ṣafā and when his feet were set in the wāḍī, he moved at a jog until he had climbed above, when he came to al-Marwā.

This is what the scholars prefer in unanimity – that the person moving between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā (mentioned above in Jābir’s account) should preferably jog on each circumambulation in the bed of the wāḍī, the stream bed that runs between them. They (the scholars) defined that to apply to the distance between the āmyāl al-khudr,111 the ‘green markers’, one standing alone towards al-Ṣafā, adjacent to the mosque, and two more placed together towards al-Marwā, also adjacent to the mosque.

Some scholars have stated that the distance between these miles today is greater than the bed of the stream in which the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) moved at a jog. But God knows best.

Muḥammad b. Ḥazm, in the book he compiled on the hijjat al-wadā‘, stated, “Then the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) left for al-Ṣafā and recited there, ‘Al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā are rites of God. I shall begin with that which God began.’ And he then circumambulated also between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā seven times. For three of these courses he was mounted on his mule and moving at a trot, while for four he walked.”

He made no further comment on this statement, one not made by anyone preceding him – namely, that the Prophet (ṢAAS) was mounted on his mule for three courses between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā, and that he walked for four.

He offered no proof whatsoever for this horrendous error. When he arrived at the point (in his account) where evidence would be expected, he stated, “We did not find the number of the courses made at a jog referred to in sources; however, it is the object of (general) agreement (as above).”

This is his wording. If what he meant is that movement at a jog on the first three circumambulations is the object of agreement, as he states, this is not true; indeed, no one related this.

111. The description given here is unclear, as are the distances to which reference is made.
If he meant that the movement at a jog on the first three circumambulations is the object of unanimous agreement, this point is devoid of value and useless. For just as there is agreement on the movement at a jog in the first three circumambulations, as we have indicated, there is also agreement on its preference also in the remaining four.

Ibn Hazm's insisting on the preference of movement at a jog specifically for the first three circumambulations is contrary to what the scholars relate. But God knows best.

Regarding this comment of Ibn Ḥazm, that the Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) was mounted between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā, it has been shown above from Ibn ʿUmar that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) used to make the al-saʿy jogging on foot along the stream bed.

Both compilers (of the ṣaḥīḥ collections) included this. Al-Tirmidhī quotes him (Ibn ʿUmar) as stating, “If I run, I have seen the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) run; and if I walk, I have seen the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) walk.”

And Jābir stated, “When his feet set in the wāḍī, he moved at a jog until, having ascended, he walked.”

Muslim narrated this. Ḥabība, daughter of Abū Tajrāt, said that he ran, while his izār was moving around him from the vigour of his running.

Al-Hāmid related this. In the ṣaḥīḥ of Muslim, quoting from Jābir, as given above, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) is said to have ascended al-Ṣafā until he saw the kaʿba. And the same for al-Marwā. We gave above from the hadith of Muḥammad b. Iṣḥāq, from Abū Jaʿfar al-Baqir, from Jābir (who said that) the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) made his camel kneel at the door of the mosque – until he circumambulated, that is. Moreover, he does not relate that he mounted it immediately on his departure for al-Ṣafā.

All this requires that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) moved at a walk between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā.

However, Muslim stated that ʿAbd b. Ḥumayd related to him, quoting Muḥammad – meaning Ibn Bakr – quoting Ibn Jurayj, quoting Abū al-Zubayr, who said that he heard Jābir b. ʿAbd Allāh say, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) circumambulated on his rāḥila, ‘his riding camel’, at the ḥijjat al-wadāʾ at the kaʿba and between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā riding on a baʿṣr,112 ‘a donkey’, so that people would see him and be able to question him and he could look down. The throng inundated him, and the Prophet (ṢAAS) and his Companions made only one circumambulation between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā.”

112. The word baʿṣr more commonly applies to a male camel; however, it is sometimes in early sources applied to an ass or donkey. Since there seems to be a distinction necessary here, the word has been translated as “donkey.”
Muslim also narrated this from Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba, from ʿAlī b. Mushir and also from ʿAlī b. Khashram, from ʿIsā b. Yūnus, and from Muḥammad b. Ḥattīm, from Yaḥyā b. ʿAṣīd. All of these quoted it from Ibn Jurayj. In some of these accounts the words ‘and between ʾAl-Safā and al-Marwā’ are not given.

Abū Dāʾūd narrated it from Aḥmad b. Ḥanbal, from Yaḥyā b. ʿAṣīd al-Qaṭṭān, Ibn Jurayj, quoting Abū al-Zubayr, who said that he heard Jābir b. ʿAbd Allāh say, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) circumambulated the kaba on the ḥijjat al-wadaʿ riding his camel, and also between ʾAl-Safā and al-Marwā.”

Al-Naṣāʾī narrated it from al-Fallas, from Yaḥyā, and from ʿImrān b. Yazīd, from ʿAṣīd b. Iṣḥāq, both of them quoting from Ibn Jurayj.

This is recorded in a ḥadīth of Ibn Jurayj. Yet is is very problematical. Because the rest of the accounts from Jābir and others indicate that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) would walk between ʾAl-Safā and al-Marwā.

The account of Abū al-Zubayr from Jābir might well be that way because of the addition; I refer to his statement, “And between ʾAl-Safā and al-Marwā”. This (statement) may have been interpolated by someone after the Companion. But God knows best.

Or perhaps the Prophet (ṢAAS) did proceed on foot between ʾAl-Safā and al-Marwā for some of the circumambulations, and his reported behaviour was witnessed then. When there was a heavy throng around him, he rode, as is shown in the account of Ibn ʿAbbas that follows shortly.

Ibn Ḥazm conceded that his first circumambulation of the kaba was on foot, and he maintained that his riding while on the circumambulations came thereafter. He also claimed that he was riding on the passage between ʾAl-Safā and al-Marwā. He stated, “Because he only circumambulated between them once.” He went on to explain Jābir’s statement, “until his feet were set in the wāḍī, he moved at a jog” by saying that he accepts that, even though the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was mounted, and that when his camel “was set” in the wāḍī, so was all of himself, his feet being “set” along with the rest of his body. Ibn Ḥazm stated, “And the same goes for the reference to the al-ramal, “the movement at a jog”. By this the account refers to his mount’s movement at a jog, along with its rider.

This explanation is extremely far-fetched. But God knows best.

Abū Dāʾūd stated that Abū Salama Mūsā related to him, quoting Ḥammād, quoting Abū ʿĀṣim al-Ghanawi, from Abū al-Ṭufayl, who stated, “I said to Ibn ʿAbbas, ‘Your people claim that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) moved at a jog at the kaba, and that that was his sunna, his “orthodox practice”.’ He replied, ‘They both spoke the truth and lied.’ I asked, ‘In what did they speak the truth, and in what lie?’ He replied, ‘They spoke the truth by saying that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) moved at a jog, but lied in that it was not a sunna. Quraysh said at al-Ḥudaybiyya, ‘Just leave Muḥammad and his Companions alone to die of worms!’ And then they made peace with him on the basis of his making the pilgrimage the following year and agreeing to them staying in Mecca for three days. And then the Messenger of God (SAAS) arrived while the unbelievers were over in front of Mt. Qu'ayqi'ān. And the Messenger of God (SAAS) told his Companions, 'Move at a jog three times around the ka'ba.' This was not a sunna.

"I asked, 'Your people claim that the Messenger of God (SAAS) circumambulated between al-Šafā and al-Marwa on a camel, and that that is a sunna.' He replied, 'They spoke the truth, and they lied.' I asked, 'In what did they speak the truth, and in what did they lie?' He replied, 'They spoke the truth in that the Messenger of God (SAAS) did circumambulate between al-Šafā and al-Marwa on a camel. And they lied; that was not a sunna. The (throng of) people could not be kept away from the Messenger of God (SAAS), or diverted from him. And so he circumambulated on a camel so that they could hear his words and see where he was, but their hands could not reach him.'"

This is how Abu Da'ud narrated it.

Muslim narrated it from Abu Kamil, from 'Abd al-Wa!d b. Ziyād, from al-Jurayrī, from Abū al-Ṭufayl, from Ibn 'Abbās. He (Abu al-Tufayl) related the virtue of circumambulating the ka'ba as above, then said, "I asked Ibn 'Abbās, 'Tell me about circumambulating between ai-Sara and aI-Marwa, while mounted. Is that a sunna? Your people claim that it is a sunna.' He replied, 'They spoke the truth and they lied.' I asked, 'What do you mean by saying they spoke the truth and lied?'"

"He replied, 'People massed around the Messenger of God (SAAS), saying, 'This is Muḥammad! This is Muḥammad!' Even the aged were coming out of their houses. The Messenger of God (SAAS) did not (want) to have people throng before him. And so when they crowded in large numbers around him, he rode.'"

"Ibn 'Abbās concluded, 'Walking and running are better.'"

This is the wording of Muslim. It requires that he only rode when the circumstances warranted. Through this, reconciliation between the various ahādīth is possible. But God knows best.

Then there is the account related by Muslim in his ṣaḥīḥ collection. He stated that Muḥammad b. Ṭafi' related to him, quoting Yahyā b. Ādam, quoting Zuhayr, from 'Abd al-Malik b. Sa'id, from Abū al-Ṭufayl, who said, "I told Ibn 'Abbās, 'I believe I saw the Messenger of God (SAAS). He asked, 'Describe him to me.' I said, 'I saw him at al-Marwa on a camel with a great many people all around him.' Ibn 'Abbās said, 'That was the Messenger of God (SAAS). People would not be struck (to keep them away) from him, nor would they be forced (to keep away) from him.'"

Muslim is alone in giving this. In this account there is no evidence that he was mounted while passing between al-Šafā and al-Marwa, for he (the narrator) did not specify it to relate to the ḥijājat al-wādā or to some other time. Assuming that the account did relate to the ḥijājat al-wādā, it is possible that it related to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), having finished the courses, sat down upon al-Marwa, addressed the people, told those who had not brought a hadī to convert the ḥajj into an 'umra and all those except the ones who had brought a hadī having concluded their iḥrām, stated, as is related above in the hadīth of Jābīr. And thereafter, following all this, he had his camel brought, mounted it and rode off to his house at al-Abtāḥ, as we will relate shortly, and it was at that point that he was seen by Abū al-Tūfayl ʿĀmir b. Wāthila al-Bikrī, a man included among the lesser Companions.

I note that a faction of Iraqis, persons such as Abū Ḥanīfa and his companions, and al-Thawrī, maintain that the person performing the ḥajj al-qiran makes two circumambulations and makes two courses at a run; this is narrated from ʿAlī, Ibn Masʿūd, Mujāhid and al-Shaʿbī. They cite as evidence the long hadīth of Jābīr and his evidence that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) moved on foot between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa and the fact that his hadīth reports that the Prophet (ṢAAS) passed between them mounted, according to the account of the circumambulation between them both, once at a walk, then mounted.

Saʿīd b. Maṃṣūr narrated in his work al-Sunan, from ʿAlī, may God be pleased with him, that he (the Prophet (ṢAAS)) recited the talbiyya for a ḥijja and an 'umra, and when he reached Mecca he circumambulated the kaʿba and made the course between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa for his 'umra. He then came back and circumambulated the kaʿba and passed between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa for his ḥijja. And that he remained in a state of iḥrām until the day of the sacrifice.

This is his wording. Abū Dharr al-Harawi narrated it in his work Manāṣik from ʿAlī, to the effect that he combined the ḥajj with the 'umra and made two circumambulations and two saʿy courses for them. He (ʿAlī) stated, “That is what I saw the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) do.”

Al-Bayhaqi narrated it similarly, as did al-Dārquṭnī and al-Nāṣīrī in their materials relating to ʿAlī. Al-Bayhaqi stated, in his work on the sunna, that Abū Bakr b. al-Ḥārith al-Faqīth, quoting ʿAlī b. Umayr b. al-Ḥāfīz, quoting Abū Muḥammad b. Saʿīd, quoting Muḥammad b. Zumbūr, quoting Fuḍayl b. ʿIyād, from Maṃṣūr, from ʿIbērīm, from Malik b. al-Ḥārith, or Maṃṣūr, from Malik b. al-Ḥārith, from Abū Naṣr, who stated, “I met ʿAlī, and had recited the talbiyya for the ḥajj, while he had done so for the ḥajj and the 'umra. I said, ‘Can I do as you did?’ He replied, ‘That is so – provided you began with the 'umra.’ I asked, ‘What should I do if that is what I wish?’ He replied, ‘Take a vessel of water and pour it over yourself. Then recite the talbiyya for both of them together. After that, circumambulate twice and make the saʿy passages twice for them. And do not declare your iḥrām concluded before the day of the sacrifice.’”

Maṃṣūr stated, “I related that to Mujāhid, and he said, ‘We used to combine with only one circumambulation. But nowadays that is not what we do.’”

The ġāfīz al-Bayhaqī stated that Suṭyān b. ʿUyayna, Suṭyān al-Thawrī and Shuʿbā narrated it from Maṃṣūr, but in his account he made no reference to the saʿy. He also stated that the “Abū Naṣr” mentioned in the line of transmission is not known. If what he relates is authentic, then it is likely, he concluded, that he meant the tawaf al-qudum and the tawaf al-ziyara.

Al-Bayhaqi stated, “It is also narrated with other lines of transmission from ‘Ali, both marfu‘ and mawquf.” It pivots upon al-Hasan b. ‘Amara and Haš b. Abū Dā‘ūd, Qaš b. ‘Abd Allāh and Ḥammād b. ‘Abd al-Raḥmān. All of them are weak, and nothing on that subject that they narrate should be cited as evidence. But God knows best.

What is transmitted in the authentic hadith contradicts the above.

We previously quoted the account of Ibn ‘Umar given in al-Bukhārī’s sahih collection to the effect that the Prophet (SAAS) recited the talbiyya for an umra and added the ḥajj to it. And so Ibn ‘Umar also performed the ḥajj al-qiran. He circumambulated for both the ḥajj and the umra, once only, saying, “This is what the Messenger of God (SAAS) did.”

Al-Tirmidhi, Ibn Māja and al-Bayhaqi narrated it from a hadith of al-Darāwardi, from Ubayd Allah, from Nāfi‘, from Ibn ‘Umar, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) stated, ‘Those who join the ḥajj together with the umra perform one circumambulation for them both and one sa‘y for them both.”

Al-Tirmidhi stated, “This hadith is hasan gharib.”

I note that the line of transmission for this meets the criteria of Muslim.

The same happened to ʿA‘isha, “the mother of the Believers”. She was one of those who recited the talbiyya for an umra since she had not brought a hadd with her. When she menstruated, the Messenger of God (SAAS) told her to wash and to recite the talbiyya for a ḥajj with her umra. And so she performed the ḥajj al-qiran. When they returned from Mina, she asked that he allow her to perform an umra after the ḥajj and the Messenger of God (SAAS) did so in order to please her, as is asserted in the hadith.

Imām Abū ʿAbd Allāh al-Shafī‘ stated that Muslim al-Zanjī, he being Khalīd’s son, informed him, from Ibn Jurayj, from ʿAṭā‘, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) said to ʿA‘isha, “Your circumambulation of the kūḥa and between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā suffice for you for both your ḥajj and your umra.”

This is evidently a mursal quotation; but its content is fully substantiated by many of al-Shafī‘s comments.

He stated that Ibn ʿUayyna informed him, from Ibn Abū Najīh, from ʿAṭā‘, from ʿA‘isha, who quoted the Prophet (SAAS).

Al-Shafī‘ stated, “And Sufyān may have quoted it from ʿAṭā‘, from ʿA‘isha, and he may have said, ‘and the Prophet (SAAS) said to ʿA‘isha’.” He went on to quote as above.

The hāfuṣ al-Bayhaqi stated, “And Ibn Abū ʿUmar narrated it from Sufyān b. ʿUayyna as mawṣūl. Muslim narrated it from a hadith of Wahib, from Ibn Ṭawūs, from his father, from ʿA‘isha, in similar form.

Muslim narrated it from a hadith of Ibn Jurayj, quoting Abū al-Zubayr, who said that he heard Jabir say, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) went in to see 'A'isha, she was weeping. He asked her, "Why are you crying?" "I am crying because the people have declared their ihram concluded, while I have not, and because they have circumambulated the ka'ba and I have not. And now is the time for this hajj."

He stated, "This is a matter that God has decreed for Adam's daughters. Wash yourself and recite the talbiyya for a hajj." She stated, "And so I did that. When I had cleansed myself, he said, 'Circumambulate the ka'ba, and between al-Šafā and al-Marwa, and then your state of ihram for the hajj will be concluded, as well as your umra.'"

She asked, "Messenger of God, I am concerned about my umra and that I did not circumambulate until I had performed the hajj." He said, "Go with her, 'Abd al-Rahmān, and let her make the umra from al-Tan'im."

Muslim also quotes a hadith of Ibn Jurayj. The latter stated that Abū al-Zubayr informed him that he heard Jābir say, "The Prophet (ṢAAS) and his Companions made only one circumambulation between al-Šafā and al-Marwa."

The supporters of Abu Ḥanīfa, may God have mercy on him, maintain that the Prophet (ṣaas) and his Companions who had brought hadis combined between the hajj and the umra, as the aforementioned ahādīth indicate. But God knows best.

Al-Shāfi'ī stated that Ibrāhim b. Muḥammad informed him, from Ja'far b. Muḥammad, from his father, from ʿAli who said about those who perform the hajj al-qirān, "They should perform two circumambulations and one sa'y."

Al-Shāfi'ī stated, "Some people said that there should be two circumambulations and two sa'y. They cite as evidence for this a weak account from ʿAli." Ja'far said, "Our statement is narrated from ʿAli, and we also narrated it from the Prophet (ṢAAS)."

However, Abū Dā'ūd stated that Hārūn b. ʿAbd Allāh and Muḥammad b. Rāfi' related to us, that Abū ʿAṣīm related to them both, from Ma'rūf - meaning Ibn Kharrābūd al-Makkī - quoting Abū Ṭūfayl, who said, "I saw the Prophet (ṢAAS) circumambulate the ka'ba upon his camel, saluting the corner with a staff and then kissing it." Muḥammad b. Rāfi' added, "He then went forth to al-Šafā and al-Marwa and circumambulated seven times on his camel."

Muslim narrated this in his sahih collection, from a hadith of Abū Dā'ūd al-Ṭayālīsī, from Ma'rūf b. Khurbūdī, without the addition given by Muḥammad b. Rāfi'. ʿUbayd Allāh b. Mūsā narrated it similarly from Ma'rūf, without the addition. The hāfīẓ al-Bayhaqī narrated it from Abū Sa'd b. Abū ʿAmr, from al-Asamm, from Yahyā b. Abū Ṭālib, from Yazīd b. Abū Ḥakīm, from Yazīd b. Mālik, from Abū al-Ṭūfayl, also without the addition. But God knows best.

The hāfīẓ al-Bayhaqī stated that Abū Bakr b. al-Ḥasan and Abū Zakariyyā b. Abū Isḥāq both stated that Abū Ja'far Muḥammad b. ʿAli b. Duḥaym related to them, quoting Ahmad b. Ḥāzīm, quoting ʿUbayd Allāh b. Mūsā and Ja'far b. ʿAwn who both stated, "Ayman b. Nābil informed us, from Qudāma b. Abū Ṭālib b. ʿAmmār, who said, 'I saw the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) pass between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā upon a camel; there was no hitting, no sending away and no shouts to get out of the way.”

Al-Bayhaqi stated, “They both spoke thus. A group other than Ayman also related it. They stated, ‘Stones were thrown on the day of the slaughter.’ It is likely that the statements of both men were authentic.”

I note that Imam Abū ʿAlī al-Maコピー narrated it in his musnad hadīth collection, from Wakiʿ, Qirān b. Tamām, Abū Quṣra Mūsā b. Ṭārīf, the qāḍī of the people of Yemen, Abū ʿAlī al-Maコピー Muhammad b. ʿAbd Allāh al-Zubayrī and Muʿtamīr b. Sulaymān, from Ayman b. Nābil al-Ḥabashi, the father of ʿImrān al-Makkī, a resident of ʿAṣqalān, the freed-man of Abū Bakr al-Ṣiddīq. He is considered a very reliable source whom al-Bukhārī quoted. He gave the account of Qudāma b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAmmār al-Kilābī, who related that he saw the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) cast stones on the day of the sacrifice from the middle of the wādí, mounted upon a grey female camel, and that there was no hitting, no sending away and no shouts to get out of the way.

Al-Tirmidhi narrated it similarly, from Abū ʿAlī al-Maコピー b. Manīʿ, from Marwān b. Muʿāwiya. Al-Nasāʿī gave it from Ishāq b. Rāhawayh. Ibn Māja gave it from Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba, both of whom quoted from Wakiʿ, from Ayman b. Nābil, from Qudāma. This is how Imam Abū ʿAlī al-Maコピー narrated it. Al-Tirmidhi categorized it as hasan saḥīh.

DIVISION

Jābir stated in his hadīth, “until, at the conclusion of his circumambulation, at al-Marwā, he (the Prophet (ṢAAS)) said, ‘If I had known beforehand what I came to learn, I would not have brought the hadīth.’”

Muslim narrated this.

In this account there is evidence against those who maintain that the saʿy between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā totals fourteen passages, each movement out and back being counted as one time. A group of major authorities of the Shafiʿī view maintain this.

This hadīth constitutes a refutation of them. Because the final circumambulation, according to what they say, would be at al-Ṣafā, not at al-Marwā.

This is why Abū ʿAlī al-Maコピー stated in his account in the hadīth of Jābir, “When it was the seventh circumambulation, at al-Marwā, he (the Messenger of God (ṢAAS)) said, ‘O people, if I had known beforehand what I came to learn, I would not have brought the hadīth and I would have made it an ḫumra. Those who have not brought a hadīth with them may declare their ḥirām concluded and they should make it an ḥumra.’ And so all the people did declare their ḥirām concluded.”

Muslim stated, “And so all the people did declare their ḥirām concluded and removed their hair, except for the Prophet (ṢAAS), and those who had brought hadīth with them.”
Chapter.

A group of the Companions of the Prophet (SAAS), too long to mention here, narrated his order to those who had not brought hadis to convert the hajj into an ‘umra. The proper place for giving that information is in my work al-Abkam al-Kabir. If God so wills it.

There are differences about this. Malik, Abu Ḥanifa and al-Shafi‘ī stated that this was a prerogative of the Companions and that this conversion was abrogated for others. They hold fast to the statement of Abu Dharr, may God be pleased with him, “Conversion from the hajj to the ‘umra applied only to the Companions of Muhammad. May God be pleased with them.”

Muslim narrated this.

Imām Ahmad refuted this. He stated, “Eleven of the Companions narrated it; where does this account stand with regard to that?” He then, may God have mercy upon him, went on to allow the conversion to other than the Companions.

Ibn ʻAbbās, may God be pleased with him, stated that this conversion should necessarily apply to all those who had not brought hadis. Indeed, he maintained that it was legally permissible for someone who had circumambulated the kaʻba and had not brought a hadi, and that these circumstances alone made this permissible. In his view, the pilgrimage ceremonies consist either of the hajj al-qiran for those who have brought a hadi, or the hajj al-tamattu‘ for those who have not. But God knows best.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Abū al-Nu‘mān related to him, quoting Ḥammād b. Zayd, from ʻAbd al-Malik b. Jurayj, from ʻAtiq, from Jabir. And from Tāwūs, from Ibn ʻAbbās. They both stated, “The Prophet (SAAS) and his Companions arrived on the morning of the 4th day of Dhū al-Ḥijja, reciting the talbiyya for the hajj, mixing in nothing with it. When we arrived, he gave us orders and we made it an ‘umra. And he declared that our ihram was concluded (thus allowing us to go) to our wives. Gossip about this spread thereafter.”

ʻAtiq went on to quote Jabir as saying, “So one of us might go off to Minā with his penis damp from sperm!” He went on, gesturing, “This reached the Prophet (SAAS), and he said, ‘It has reached me that there are people saying such-and-such. I swear by God, I am more innocent, more pious towards God than they are! If I had known beforehand what I came to learn, I would not have made sacrifice. And if I had not had a hadi I would have declared my ihram concluded.’

“Surāqā b. Jušhum then arose and said, ‘Messenger of God, is this just for us, or for ever?’ ‘For ever,’ he replied.”

Muslim stated that Qutayba related to him, quoting al-Layth – he being Ibn Sa‘d – from Abu al-Zubayr, who quoted Jabir as saying, “We arrived along with the Messenger of God (SAAS), reciting the talbiyya for a hajj alone. ʻAmīsha arrived for an ʻ*umra*. When we were at Saraf she menstruated. Then when we reached (Mecca) we circumambulated the kaʻba, al-Šafā and al-Marwa, and the Messenger of God (SAAS), told those of us who had not brought a hadī to declare our ihrām concluded. ‘To what extent?’ we asked. ‘Totally,’ he replied. And so we had sexual relations with our wives, put on perfume and dressed in clothes. Only four nights remained from that time until (the ceremonies on) ʿArafāt.”

These two aḥādīth state clearly that the Prophet (SAAS) came to Mecca the year of the hijjat al-wadaʿ on the morning of the fourth of Dhū al-Ḥijja. That was a Sunday, when daytime came, at dawn, because the first day of Dhū al-Ḥijja that year was indisputably a Thursday, because the day for (the congregation at) ʿArafāt was Friday, according to the text of the hadīth of ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb that is firmly established in both sahīh collections. As we will show.

When the Messenger of God (SAAS) arrived on Sunday, the fourth of that month, he began, as we have related, with circumambulation of the kaʿba then he made the al-saʿy between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa. When he completed his circumambulation between the two, at al-Marwa, he ordered those who had not brought hadīs with them to declare their ihrām decisively concluded. He required that of them definitely, and they did so. Some of them were regretful that the Messenger of God (SAAS) had not declared his ihrām concluded because he had brought the hadī. They had wanted to conform to his practice and would have found solace in this. When he perceived how they felt, he said to them, “If I had known beforehand what I came to learn, I would not have brought the hadī and would have made it an ‘umra.”

That is, “If I had known that this would upset you, I would have left bringing the hadī until after I had declared my ibram concluded, as you have done.”

From this the evidence might seem clear to you of the superiority of the hijjat al-tamattū, as Imām ʿAbd al-Qadr Ṭabarṣū maintained on the basis of this. He stated, “I do not doubt that the Messenger of God (SAAS), performed the hijjat al-qirān; however, the hijjat al-tamattū is superior, since he (the Prophet (SAAS)) expressed his regret at it.”

The response to this would be as follows: the Prophet (SAAS) did not express regret over the hijjat al-tamattū because of its superiority over the hijjat al-qirān, for those who had brought a hadī. He expressed regret because then he would not have upset his Companions by retaining his ihram state and by telling them to declare their ihram concluded.

Therefore – but God knows best – when Imām ʿAḥmad contemplated this “secret”, he gave the text of another hadīth from the Prophet (SAAS), to the effect that the hijjat al-tamattū is best for those not bringing a hadī, because of the latter’s order to those of his Companions who had not brought hadīs to perform the hijjat al-tamattū, and that the hijjat al-qirān would be preferable for those having brought hadīs, just as God, Almighty and Glorious is He, chose for His Prophet (SAAS), on the hijjat al-wadaʿ and His order to him in that regard, as related above. But God knows best.
The Messenger of God (SAAS), having finished his circumambulation between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā and having ordered those who had not brought hadīs to conclude their pilgrimage, left in the company of those with him and stopped at al-Abṭāḥ, to the east of Mecca. He stayed there for the remainder of that Sunday and the Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, until he had performed the suḥb prayer of Thursday. Throughout all those days he prayed there with his Companions without returning to the ka'ba.

Al-Bukhārī has a chapter entitled, Chapter of those who do not approach the ka'ba and do not circumambulate before going out to ʿArafāt and then return after the first circumambulation.

He went on to state therein that Muḥammad b. Abū Bakr narrated to him, quoting Fuḍayl b. Ṣulaymān, quoting Mūsā b. ʿUqba, as saying, “Kurayb quoted ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAbbās as having said to him, ‘The Prophet (SAAS) came to Mecca, performed seven circumambulations and the saʿy between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā. He did not approach the ka'ba after his circumambulation until he returned from ʿArafāt.’”

Al-Bukhārī is alone in giving this.

During this time, while the Messenger of God (SAAS) was staying at al-ʿAbṭāḥ, outside Mecca, ʿĀlī arrived from Yemen. The Prophet (SAAS) had sent him— as we narrated above— to Yemen as its governor after Khalīd b. al-Walīd, may God be pleased with them both.

When ʿĀlī arrived, he found that his wife Fāṭima, the daughter of the Messenger of God (SAAS), had declared her iḥrām concluded, as had the wives of the latter, who had not brought hadīs. Fāṭima had put on kohl and dressed in colour-dyed clothing. ʿĀlī asked her, “Who told you to do this?” “My father,” she replied.

Somewhat annoyed at her, he then went to the Messenger of God (SAAS), and told him that she had declared her iḥrām concluded, had dressed in colour-dyed clothes and put on kohl. He told him, “And she claims that you told her to do that, Messenger of God.”

He replied, “She spoke the truth.” He repeated this three times.

The Messenger of God (SAAS) then asked him, “With what intent did you recite the talḥiyya when you determined upon the ḥajj?” He replied, “With the same intent as the Messenger of God,” he replied. The Messenger of God (SAAS) then told him, “I have brought the hadī with me, so do not declare your iḥrām concluded.”

The number of hadīs ʿĀlī had brought from Yemen and the Messenger of God (SAAS) had brought with him from Medina and had bought on the way totalled 100 camels. They shared all the hadis between them. All this is related in the sahih of Muslim, may God have mercy upon him, and has been given above.

This report refutes the account related by the hafiz Abu al-Qasim al-Tabarani, may God have mercy upon him, from a hadith of Ikrima, from Ibn Abbás, to the effect that ‘Ali met with the Prophet (SAAS) at al-Juha. But God knows best.

Abū Mūsā was among those who arrived with ‘Ali; however, he himself did not bring a hadj and so the Messenger of God (SAAS) ordered him to declare his ihram concluded after he had circumambulated for the ‘umra and had made the sa’i. He then revoked his hajj into an ‘umra and performed the hajj al-tamattu’. He would use that experience in issuing his legal decision during the caliphate of ‘Omar b. al-Khaṭṭāb. When ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb gave his opinion that the hajj (alone) should be made quite separate from the ‘umra, he (Abū Mūsā) abandoned his legal position out of respect for the Commander of the Believers, ‘Umar, may God be pleased with him and grant him pleasure.

Imām Aḥmad stated that ‘Abd al-Razzāq related to him, quoting Sufyān, from ‘Awn b. Abū Juḥayfa, from his father, who said, “I saw Bilāl make the call to prayer and circulate all around, and turn his face everywhere, his fingers in his ears. The Messenger of God (SAAS) was in a red pavilion he had, made of leather, I believe. Then Bilāl went out ahead of the Messenger of God (SAAS), carrying a short lance. He set it up and the Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the prayer.”

‘Abd al-Razzāq stated, “And I heard him in Mecca say that at al-Batḥā dogs, women and donkeys would pass in front of him. He was dressed in a red hulla, ‘outer garment’, beneath which I thought I could see the sheen of his legs.” He said, “Sufyān, we think it (what he wore) was a ḥibara, ‘a shawl’.”

Aḥmad stated that Waki’ related to him, quoting Sufyān, from ‘Awn b. Abū Juḥayfa, from his father, who said, “I went to the Prophet (SAAS) at al-Abtaḥ while he was in a red pavilion he had. Bilāl came out with the residue of (the water from the ablution) sprinkling it (on those around him).

“Bilāl made the call to prayer and I watched as his mouth moved first here, then there” – meaning to the right and the left. “Then the ‘ṣaḥaṣa, ‘a short lance’, was set up, and the Messenger of God (SAAS) came out, dressed in a red jubba” – or a red hulla – “and I thought I could see the sheen of his legs. He performed the al-ṣuḥr” – or the al-ṣaṣr – “prayer, facing towards the ʿamanṣa. Women, dogs and donkeys passed by without hindrance. He kept on performing prayers of two rakaʿāt until he reached Medina.”

On one occasion, the account quotes the narrator as saying, “He performed the al-ṣuḥr prayer of two rakaʿāt and the al-ṣaṣr of two rakaʿāt.”

In both sahih collections this is given from an account of Sufyān al-Thawrī.

Aḥmad also stated, that Muhammad b. Jaʿfar related to him, quoting Shuʾba and Ḥajjāj, from al-Ḥakam, who quoted Abū Juḥayfa as saying, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) left and went to al-Baṭḥā. He performed the ablution and the al-ṣuḥr prayer with two rakaʿāt with a short lance before him.”
‘Awf made an addition to this, quoting his father as quoting Abū Juḥayfa as saying, “and there were donkeys and women passing behind us”.

Hajjāj stated in the ḥadīth, “Then people began taking hold of his hand and wiping it over their faces. I took his hand and placed it on my face; I found it to be cooler than ice and more sweet-smelling than musk.”

Both authors of the saḥīḥ collections gave it in full from a ḥadīth of Shu‘ba.

Chapter.

The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) remained, as we have stated above, at al-Abtaḥ the Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The people who had not brought ḫadīṣ had declared their ḫārām concluded.

During that period, ‘Alī b. Abū Ta’līb arrived from Yemen with the Muslims accompanying him and the wealth he brought. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) did not return to the kaba after he had circumambulated it.

The morning of Thursday, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) performed the morning prayer, that day being that of al-tarwīyya. It is also called the “Minā day” because (people) go there then.

It has been narrated that the Prophet (ṢAAS) had made an address before that day. The previous day, as I have seen in various commentaries, is known as the yawm al-zaffa, “decoration day”, because on it the sacrificial animals are garlanded with ornaments and similar items. But God knows best.

The Prophet (ṢAAS) then set off on his mount to Minā, before the noon – though some say thereafter. Those who had previously declared their ḫārām for the ḥaǧj concluded, now declared it in effect when they left al-Abtaḥ for Minā. They did this as their mounts set off carrying them there.

‘Abd al-Malik stated, quoting ‘Aṭā‘, from Jābir b. ‘Abd Allāh, who said, “We arrived with the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and declared our ḫilāf in effect. When it was the day of the tarwīyya, and after we had turned our backs to Mecca, we recited the talbiyya for the ḥaǧj.”

Al-Bukhārī made reference to this in a brief note.

Muslim stated that Muḥammad b. Ḥātim related to him, quoting Yaḥyā b. Sa‘d, from Ibn Jurayj, quoting Abū al-Zubayr, who said that Jābir stated, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) ordered us, when we had declared our ḫārām concluded, to again declare it in effect when we moved off to Minā. And we recited the talbiyya from al-Abtaḥ.”
‘Ubayd b. Jurayj stated to Ibn ‘Umar, “I saw that when you were in Mecca and the people recited the talbiyya on seeing the crescent, you did not recite it until the day of al-tarwiyya.” He replied, “I did not see the Prophet (SAAS) recite the talbiyya until his camel set off bearing him.”

Al-Bukhārī narrated it as part of a lengthy ḥadīth.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Ḍā‘ū was asked about how those next to Mina would recite the talbiyya for the ḥajj. He stated, “Ibn ‘Umar would recite the talbiyya the day of al-tarwiyya, after he had performed the al-ẓuhr prayer and settled himself on his mount.”

I note that that was what Ibn ‘Umar would do when he performed the ‘umra; he would declare his ihrām concluded after the ‘umra and then on al-tarwiyya day he would refrain from reciting the talbiyya until his mount set off with him towards Mina. Similarly, the Messenger of God (SAAS) declared his ihrām concluded from Dhū al-Ḥulayfa after having performed the al-ẓuhr prayer and when his mount had set off with him.

However, on the al-tarwiyya day, the Messenger of God (SAAS) did not perform the al-ẓuhr prayer at al-‘Abdāl, but he did perform it that day at Minā. There is no dispute at all over this.

Al-Bukhārī has a section entitled, Chapter on where the Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the ẓuhr prayer on al-tarwiyya day.

He stated that Ḥārūn b. ‘Abbās related to him, quoting Ishaq al-Azraq, quoting Sufyān, from Ḥārūn al-Azīz b. Rufay, who said, “I asked Anas b. Malik, ‘Tell me something you learned from the Messenger of God (SAAS); where was it he performed the al-ẓuhr and the al-ṣaʿr prayers on tarwiyya day?’ He replied, ‘At Minā.’ I asked, ‘And where did he pray the al-ṣaʿr on al-nafrî day?’ He replied, ‘At al-‘Abdāl.’ He then commented, ‘Do as your leaders do!’”

The rest of the community of scholars, except for Ibn Māja, gave this from a variety of lines of transmission, from Ishaq b. Yusuf al-Azraq, from Sufyān al-Thawrī. Imām Aḥmad related it similarly, from Ishaq b. Yusuf al-Azraq.

Al-Tirmidhī stated, “It is ḥasan sahih, though it may be considered gharib, coming from a ḥadīth of al-Azraq, from al-Thawrī.”

Aḥmad stated that Aswād b. ‘Amir related to him, quoting Abū Kudayna, from al-A‘mash, from al-Ḥakam, from Miqsam, from Ibn ‘Abbās (who said that)

113. The day of the departure of the pilgrims from Minā.
the Messenger of God (SAAS) performed five prayers at Minā. And Aḥmad also said that Aswād b. Āmīr related to him, quoting Abū Mahyāt Yahyā b. Yaʿāqib al-Ṭaymi, from al-ʾAmash, from al-Ḥakam, from Miqsam, from Ibn ʿAbbās (who said) that the Prophet (SAAS) performed the al-ṣuḥr prayer on al-ṭarwiyya day at Minā, and he prayed the day time (prayers) on the day (of the assembly) at ʿArafāt.

Abū Daʿūd narrated it from Zuhayr b. Ḥarb, from Aḥwaṣ, from Jawab, from ʿAmmār b. Ruzayq, from Sulaymān b. Mahrān al-ʾAmarsh. His words were, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the al-ṣuḥr prayer on al-ṭarwiyya day and the al-fajr prayer on ʿArafāt day at Minā.”

Al-Tirmidhī gave it from al-ʾAshajj, from ʿAbd Allāh b. al-ʿAjlaḥ, from al-ʾAmarsh, to the same effect. He stated, “This is not among what Shuʿba included in what al-Ḥakam heard from Miqsam.”

Al-Tirmidhī stated that Abū Saʿīd al-ʾAshajj related to him, quoting ʿAbd Allāh b. al-ʿAjlaḥ, from Ismāʿīl b. Muslim, from ʿĀṭir, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) performed with us at Minā the al-ṣuḥr, the al-ṣaḥr, the al-maghrīb, the al-ʾiṣḥāq and the al-fajr prayers. Then in the morning he went to ʿArafāt.” Al-Tirmidhī went on, “There is some controversy over Ismāʿīl b. Muslim.”

In that sub-heading it is also given from ʿAbd Allāh b. al-Zubayr and Anas b. Malīk.

Imām Aḥmad stated, “Someone who saw the Prophet (SAAS) informed me that he went to Minā on al-ṭarwiyya day with Bilāl at his side carrying a pole on which was a piece of cloth with which he was sheltering the Messenger of God (SAAS). (Sheltering him) from the heat, that is.” Aḥmad alone gave this.

Al-Shāfīʿī gave in his text the information that the Messenger of God (SAAS) rode from al-ʿAbṭāb to Minā after noon, but that he only prayed the al-ṣuḥr at Minā. This hadith might be cited (in contradiction) of him. But God knows best.

It is given above in the hadith of Jaʿfar b. Muḥammad, from his father, from Jaʿbir, who said, “All the people declared their iḥrām at an end and clipped (their hair) except for the Prophet (SAAS), and those who had brought hadis with them. And when it was the tarwiyya day, they set off for Minā and recited the talbīyya for the ḥaḍāj. The Messenger of God (SAAS) rode and performed the al-ṣuḥr, the al-ṣaḥr, the al-maghrīb, the al-ʾiṣḥāq and the al-fajr there. Then he stayed a little longer until the sun arose and he called for a pavilion of haircloth he had and it was set up for him at Namira.

“The Messenger of God (SAAS) then proceeded on, while Quraysh had no doubt that he would be staying at al-mashʿar al-ḥarām (at Muzdalifah), as Quraysh used to do in the jāḥiliyya period.

“But he went across to ʿArafāt and found that the pavilion had been set up for him at Namira. There he dismounted. When the sun began to decline, he called for his camel al-Qaṣwāʾ and she was saddled for him. He then went on down to the centre of the wādi and made an address to the people. He said, ‘Your blood and your property are sacrosanct for you, just as this day of yours is holy for you, in this month, in this your land.

‘I declare that everything relating to the jāhiliyya is cast down beneath my two feet. The blood feuds (of the jāhiliyya) are cast down. The first blood feud I dismiss is that relating to the blood of Ibn Rabī‘a b. al-Ḥārith. (He was brought up as a foster-child in Banū Sa‘d and killed by Hudhayl.) Also, the interest charges of the jāhiliyya are abolished. The first interest charge I abolish is that of al-ʿAbbās b. al-Muṭṭalib; it is all abolished.

‘Fear God (in your treatment) of women. You have taken them in God’s trust, and their persons are made permitted to you by God’s word. You may require of them that they not allow anyone you dislike to enter your furnishings; if they should do this, then beat them, but not viciously. They have the right from you to have their sustenance and their clothing, with kindness.

‘I have left for you something wherein, if you keep to it, you will not go astray – God’s Book. You will be questioned about me. What is it you will say?’

‘They responded, ‘We will bear witness that you have fulfilled (your mission), that you gave good advice and did your duty.’

‘He then spoke with his index finger, using it to convey meaning to the people, saying, ‘O God, bear witness! O God, bear witness! O God, bear witness!’ (He said this) three times.’

Abū ʿAbd al-Rahmān al-Nasāʾī stated that he was informed by ʿAlī b. Ḥājr, from Mughītā, from Mūsā b. Ziyād b. Ḥidhaym b. ʿAmr al-Saʿdī, from his father, from his grandfather, who said, “I heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) say in his address on the day (of the assembly at) ‘Arafat, on the ḥijjat al-wadā’, ‘Learn that your blood and your possession and your honour are sacrosanct for you, just as this day, this month and this land are sacrosanct for you.’”

Abī Daʿūd stated, under the heading, The address on the minbar at ‘Arafāt, that Ḥannāḏ related to him, from Ibn Abī Zayyāda, quoting Sufyān b. ʿUyayna, from Zayd b. Aslam, from a man of Banū ʿAmr, from his father or his uncle, who said, “I saw the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) upon the minbar at ‘Arafāt.”

This line of transmission is weak, because there is in it a man who is dubious. Moreover, it is stated above in the long hadith of Jābir, that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) made his address while mounted on his camel al-Qaṣwāʾ.

Abū Dāʿūd then stated that Musaddaq related to him, quoting ʿAbd Allah b. Dāʿūd, from Salama b. Nubayt, from a man from the tribe, from his father Nubayt, (who said) that he saw the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) standing at ‘Arafāt upon a red camel making an address.

This also has a dubious link; however, Jābir’s hadith does testify to it.

Messenger of God (SAAS) making an address to the people on the day of 'Arafát, upon a camel, standing up in the stirrups.'”

Abu Da‘ûd stated, “Ibn al-‘Alî narrated it from Wâlî, as Hannâd had spoken. And ʿAbbâs b. ʿAbd al-ʿAzîm related to me, quoting ʿUthmân b. ʿUmar, quoting ʿAbd al-Majîd Abû ʿAmr, from al-ʿAddâ b. Khâlid to the same effect.”

In both sahih collections, it is given from Ibn ʿAbbâs, who is quoted as saying, “I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) make an address at ‘Arafât and say, ‘Those without sandals shall wear leather socks; those without a waist-wrapper shall wear (instead) trousers for the pilgrim (in the state of ihram).’”

Muhammad b. Ishaq stated that Yahyâ b. ʿAbbâd b. ʿAbd Allâh b. al-Zubayr quoted his father ʿAbbâd as saying, “The man who used to make announcements to the people relating to the pronouncements of the Messenger of God (SAAS), when he was on ‘Arafât, was Rabî’a b. Umayyâ b. Khalaf. The Messenger of God (SAAS) said (to him), ‘Say: ‘O people, the Messenger of God says, ‘Do you know what month this is?’ They will say, ‘The holy months.’ Then say to them, ‘God has made your blood and your possessions sacrosanct for you, just as is this month of yours.’ Then say, ‘O people, the Messenger of God asks you, ‘Do you know what land this is?’’” And he went on to complete the hadîth as above.

Muhammad b. Ishaq proceeded to state that Layth b. Abû Sulaym related to him, from Shahr b. Hawshab, from ʿAmr b. Khârija, who said, “ʿAttab b. Usayd sent me to the Messenger of God (SAAS), for a purpose while he was standing upon ‘Arafât. I gave him the message, then stood below his camel. (I was so close that) its saliva was dripping upon my head. I heard him say, ‘O people, God has assigned to each person his portion. It is not permissible to make a bequest to an heir. The child relates to the bed.’” And stoning is for fornicators. Anyone claiming as his father someone who is not, or a freed-man claiming as his master someone who is not, the curse of God, the angels and all men is upon them. God will not accept for him any penance, nor any requital.”

I note it has some variance from the hadîth of Qatâda. But God knows best.

We will also refer hereafter to the address made by the Messenger of God (SAAS), following this one, on the day of the sacrifice, giving judgement, exhortations, details and prophetic ethics it expresses, if God so wills it.

Al-Bukhâri has a section entitled, Chapter: the talbiyya and the takbir made when the Messenger of God (SAAS), when he departed in the morning from Minâ to ‘Arafât.

114. During the performance of the rites, the pilgrim is dressed in the iḥrām, which consists of two pieces of cloth which act as his upper and lower garments. His shoes, furthermore, should not cover his heels or ankles.
115. To its mother, that is.
In it he stated that ‘Abd Allah b. Yūsuf related to him, quoting Mālik, from Mūhammad b. Ābu Bakr al-Thaqaftī (who said) that he asked Anas b. Mālik, while they were both travelling in the morning from Mīnā to ‘Arafāt, “How did you act this same day with the Messenger of God (ṣallā Allāhu ‘alaihi wa sallam)?” He replied, “He did not rebuke those of us who recited the talbiyya, nor did he rebuke those of us who spoke the takbir.”

Muslim gave it from a hadīth of Mālik and Musa b. ‘Uqba, both of whom quoted from Mūhammad b. Ābu Bakr b. Āwfi al-Thaqaftī al-Iṣṣāṣī, from Anas.

Al-Bukhārī stated that ‘Abd Allah b. Maslama related to him, quoting Mālik, from Ibn Shihāb, from Sālim b. ‘Abd Allah (who said) “‘Abd al-Mālik b. Marwān wrote to al-Hajjāj b. Yūsuf to the effect that he suggest to ‘Abd Allah b. Īmār that he make the hajj. When it was the day for ‘Arafāt, Ibn Īmar – along with myself – when the sun had begun to incline – or the narrator’s words were “when the sun had set” – “and we were near al-Hajjāj’s tent, Ibn Īmar shouted out, ‘Well, where is he?’ Al-Hajjāj emerged. Ibn Īmar told him, ‘Time to leave!’ ‘Right now?’ al-Hajjāj asked. ‘Yes,’ Ibn Īmar replied. Al-Hajjāj asked, ‘Wait while I pour water over myself.’ Ibn Īmar dismounted and walked about (impatiently) between myself and my father. I said to al-Hajjāj, ‘If you want to act precisely in accord with the sunna today, then you should make the address short and proceed quickly to the stay (on ‘Arafāt).’ Ibn Īmar commented, ‘He spoke the truth.’”

Al-Bukhārī also narrated it from al-Qabīnī, from Mālik. Al-Nāṣirī promulgated it from a hadīth of Ashhab and Ibn Wahb, from Mālik.

Al-Bukhārī went on, after narrating this hadīth, to quote al-Layth as stating that ‘Aqiq related to him, from Ibn Shihāb, who quoted Sālim as saying, “In the year when al-Hajjāj attacked Ibn al-Zubayr, the former asked ‘Abd Allah (Ibn ‘Umar), ‘What do you do at this station, at ‘Arafāt?’ I replied, ‘If you want to act in accord with the sunna, then offer the prayer just after midday on the day at ‘Arafāt.’ Ibn ‘Umar commented, ‘He spoke the truth. According to the sunna, they (the Companions of the Prophet (ṣallā Allāhu ‘alaihi wa sallam)), would perform the al-zuhr and the al-‘aṣr together.’ I asked Sālim, ‘Did the Messenger of God (ṣallā Allāhu ‘alaihi wa sallam) do that?’ Sālim responded, ‘In doing that would you (people) act in any other way than in accord with the sunna.’”

Abū Da‘ūd stated that Āḥmad b. Ḥanbal related to him, quoting Ya‘qūb, quoting Abū ‘Awf, from Ibn Iṣḥāq, from Nāfi‘, from Ibn ‘Umar, (who said) that the Messenger of God (ṣallā Allāhu ‘alaihi wa sallam) left Mīnā early, having performed the al-zuhr prayer, on the morning of the day for (the assembly on) Mt. ‘Arafāt. He stopped at Namira, at the station of the imām, where the latter would stay at ‘Arafāt, until, at the time of the al-zuhr prayer, he left as a muhajir and he combined together the al-zuhr and the al-‘aṣr prayers.

Jābīr related this similarly in his hadīth after he gave the address quoted above. He went on, “Bilāl then made the call to prayer followed by the iqāma.”
Thereupon he (the Prophet (SAAS)) arose and performed the al-zuhr prayer, and after that arose again and performed the al- ̧ asr, and he did not combine any other prayer between these two."

This hadith requires that the Messenger of God (SAAS) first gave the address and then the prayer was held, without him having engaged in the second address.

Al-Shafi'i stated that Ibrahim b. Muhammad and others informed him, from Ja'far b. Muhammad, from his father and from Jabir, concerning the hijjat al-wadā' as follows, "The Messenger of God (SAAS) went to the station on ‘Arafat and made the first address to the people. Bilal made the call to prayer and thereafter the Prophet (SAAS) proceeded to deliver the second address. He finished the address, as did Bilal the prayer call. Bilal then made the iqāma and he (the Prophet) arose and performed the al-zuhr and then again the al- ̧ asr."

Al-Bayhaqi stated that Ibrahim b. Muhammad b. Abu Ya'ya is alone in giving this.

Muslim stated, quoting Jabir, "Then the Messenger of God (SAAS) rode off to the station, where he positioned the belly of his camel al-Qaṣwā' to the rocks, placing himself so that Mt. al-Mashā' was ahead of him and he faced the qibla."

Al-Bukhari stated that Yahya b. Sulayman related to him, from Ibn Wahb, quoting 'Amr b. al- ̧ Harith b. Bukayr, from Kurayb, from Maymūna, (who said), "The people were uncertain about whether the Prophet (SAAS) was fasting, so I sent a container of milk to him while he was standing at the station. He drank from it while everyone looked on."

Muslim included it from Ḥarun b. Sa'd al-Abll, from Ibn Wahb.

Al-Bukhari stated that 'Abd Allah b. Yusuf informed him, quoting Malik, from Abū al-Naḍr, the freed-man of 'Umar b. 'Abd Allah, from 'Umayr, freed-man of Ibn 'Abbās, from Umm al-Fadl, daughter of al- ̧ Harith, (who said), "People disputed in my presence on ‘Arafāt day concerning the fast of the Prophet (SAAS). Some people said, ‘He is fasting.’ Others said, ‘He is not fasting.' So I sent a vessel of milk to him while he was standing up on his camel, and he drank it."

Muslim narrated it from a hadith of Malik also. They both gave it from other lines of transmission, from Abū al-NAḍr.

I note that Umm al-Fadl was the sister of Maymūna, daughter of al- ̧ Harith, mother of the Believers; the story of both is one and the same. But God knows best. The line of transmission to her is authentic, because it comes directly from her, unless, that is, it be after that or there were several lines of transmission from the one and the other woman. But God knows best.

Imam Aḥmad stated that Ismā'īl related to him, quoting Ayyūb, who said, "I don’t know whether I heard it from Sa'id b. Jubayr or from his sons who quoted him, as saying as follows, ‘I went to Ibn ‘Abbās while he was standing upon ‘Arafāt eating a pomegranate. He said, ‘The Messenger of God (SAAS) broke his fast on ‘Arafāt and Umm al-Fadl sent milk to him which he drank.'"
Aḥmad stated that Wakiʿ related to him, quoting Ibn ʿAbū Dhiʿb, from Ṣāliḥ, the freed-man of al-Tawʿama, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said that they disputed over the fast of the Prophet (ṢAAS), on ʿArafaṭ day, and that Umm al-Fiḍl sent milk to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and that he drank it.

Imām Aḥmad stated that ʿAbd al-Razzāq and Ābu Bakr both said that Ibn Jurayj informed him that ʿAṭāʾ stated, “ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAbbās invited al-Fiḍl b. ʿAbbās to eat on ʿArafaṭ day. He said, ‘Don’t fast. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was brought a vessel containing milk on ʿArafaṭ day and he drank from it. So do not fast. The people are waiting for you.’”

Ibn Bukayr and Rawḥ quoted the words as “The people await you.”

Al-Bukhārī stated that Sulaymān b. Ḥarb related to him, quoting Ḥammād b. Zayd, from Ayyūb, from Saʿīd b. Jubayr, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “A man standing with the Prophet (ṢAAS) at ʿArafaṭ fell off his camel and broke his neck” – or his words were, “and it broke his neck.” “The Prophet (ṢAAS) said, ‘Wash him with water boiled with wood of the lote tree, wrap him in a double shroud. Do not perfume him, cover his head or embalm him. God will resurrect him on Judgement Day, (and he will be) mulabbiyyan, ‘expressing his readiness to serve God’.”

Muslim narrated it from Abū al-Raḥf al-Zahrānī, from Ḥammād b. Zayd. Al-Nasāʿī stated that Iṣḥāq b. Ibrāhīm – he being Ibn Rāhawayh – informed him, quoting Wakiʿ, quoting Sufyān al-Thawrī, from Bukayr b. ʿAṭāʾ, from ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Yaʿmur al-Dhīḥ, who said, “I witnessed the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), at ʿArafaṭ. People from Najd came to him and asked him about the ḥajj. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, ‘The ḥajj is ʿArafaṭ; those who are there in the night at ʿArafaṭ, before dawn on the night of the assemblage, will have concluded their ḥajj.’”

The rest of the scholars of the al-sunan narrated it from a hadith of Sufyān al-Thawrī. Al-Nasāʿī and Shuʿba added to it Bukayr b. ʿAṭāʾ.

Al-Nasāʿī stated that Qutayba informed him, quoting Sufyān, from ʿAmr b. Dinār, quoting ʿAmr b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Ṣafwān, who quoted Yazīd b. Shaybān as saying, “We were positioned at ʿArafaṭ in a place far removed from the station. Ibn Mīrbaʿ al-Anṣārī came over to us and said, ‘I am sent to you by the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). He tells you, ‘(You should) be at your shrines; you have a heritage, a heritage from your father, Abraham.’’”

Abū Dāʿūd, al-Tirmidhī and Ibn Mājā narrated it from a hadith of Sufyān b. ʿUyayna. Al-Tirmidhī stated, “This hadith is ḥasan, ‘good’; we know it only from a hadith of Ibn ʿUyayna from ʿAmr b. Dinār.”

The Ibn Mīrbaʿ referred to above was named in full Zayd b. Mīrbaʿ al-Anṣārī; only this one hadith is attributed to him.

And on this subject there are aḥādīth from ʿAlī, ʿAʾisha, Jubayr b. Muṭʿīm and al-Shārid b. Suwayd. And it has been given above, from the account of Muslim, from Jaʿfār b. Muḥammad, from his father, from Jaʿbīr, that the Messenger of God (SAAS), stated, “I have stood here, and all ‘Arafāt is a station.” Mālik added in his work al-Muwattaʾ the words, “And spread out, therefore, from the valley of ‘Arafāt”.

Chapter: Those parts of the prayers delivered by the Messenger of God (SAAS), while he stood upon Mt. ‘Arafāt that are recorded.

It has been narrated above that the Messenger of God (SAAS) broke his fast on the day at ‘Arafāt; this shows that breaking fast there is preferable to fasting because of the added strength that provides for the prayers, since they are the more important objective there.

This is why the Messenger of God (SAAS) remained mounted upon his camel (at ‘Arafāt) from noon to sunset.

Abū Dāʿud al-Ṭayālisi related in the musnad compendium, from Ḥawshab b. ʿAqīl, from Māhdī al-Ḥajāri, from Ikrima, from Abū Hurayra, from the Messenger of God (SAAS), to the effect that at ‘Arafāt, he forbade fasting on the day (of the assembly) at ‘Arafāt.

Imām Aḥmad stated that ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Māhdī related to us, quoting Ḥawshab b. ʿAqīl, quoting Māhdī al-Muḥāribi, quoting Ikrima, the freed-man of Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “I went to Abū Hurayra in his home and asked him about fasting on Mt. ‘Arafāt the day (of the assembly) there. He replied, ‘The Messenger of God (SAAS) forbade fasting on ‘Arafāt for (the assembly) there.’”

On one occasion, ʿAbd al-Raḥmān gave the transmission of the ḥadīth from Māhdī al-ʿAbdī.

Aḥmad narrated it similarly from Wākiʾ, from Ḥawshab, from Māhdī al-ʿAbdī. Abū Dāʿud narrated it similarly from Sulaymān b. Ḥarib, from Ḥawshab. Al-Naṣāʾī gave it from Sulaymān b. Maʿbad, from Sulaymān b. Ḥarib, as well as from al-Fallās, from Ibn Māhdī. Ibn Māja gave it from Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba and ʿAlī b. Mūḥammad, both of whom quoted from Wākiʾ, from Ḥawshab.

The hāfīz al-Bayhaqī stated that Abū ʿAbd Allāh al-Ḥāfīz and Abū Saʿīd b. Abū ʿAmr informed him that it was related to them both by Abū al-ʿAbbās Mūḥammad b. Yaʿqūb, quoting Abū Usāma al-Kalbi, quoting Ḥasan b. al-Rabīʿ, quoting al-Ḥārith b. Ubayd, from Ḥawshab b. ʿUqayl, from Māhdī al-Ḥajāri, from Ikrima, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “At ‘Arafāt, the Messenger of God (SAAS) forbade fasting on the day (of the assembly) at ‘Arafāt.”

Al-Bayhaqī stated that al-Ḥārith b. Ubayd spoke it similarly. The correct line is from Ikrima, from Abū Hurayra.

Abū Ḥātim Mūḥammad b. Hibbān al-Bustī narrated, in his sahiḥ collection from ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAmr, that he was questioned about fasting on the day on ‘Arafāt. He replied, “I made the pilgrimage with the Messenger of God (SAAS), and he did not fast it. And also with Abū Bakr, and he did not fast it. And also with ʿUmar, and he did not fast it. As for myself, I do not fast it, nor do I order it to be fasted, nor do I forbid it.”
Imām Aḥmad and al-Tirmidhī narrated, from a ḥadīth of ‘Amr b. Shu‘ayb, from his father, from his grandfather, who said, “Most of the prayer of the Prophet (ṢAAS), at the day of ‘Arafāt was, ‘There is no god but God alone; He has no associate. Power is His, and praise. He has control over everything.’”

Imām Aḥmad also gives the following ḥadīth from ‘Amr b. Shu‘ayb, from his father, from his grandfather, who said, “I heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) recite this verse while he was at ‘Arafāt: ‘God bears testimony, as do the angels and those with knowledge, that there is no god but He, the upholder of righteousness. There is no god but He, the Powerful, the Wise’ (ṣūrat Al-‘Īmran; III, v.18). And I, O God, am of those who testify to that.”

The ḥāфиз Abū al-Qāsim al-Ṭabrānī stated in his work al-Manāṣik that al-Ḥasan b. Muthannā b. Mu‘ādh b. ‘Anbarī stated, quoting ‘Affān b. Muslim, quoting Qays b. al-Rabi‘ī, from al-Aghār b. al-Ṣabīl, from Khalifa b. Busayn, from ‘Ali who stated, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, ‘The best statement I or the prophets before me ever made was on the evening of the assembly) at ‘Arafāt: ‘There is no god but God alone. He has no associate. Power is His, and praise. He has control over everything.’”

Abū ʿAbd Allāh b. Manda stated that Aḥmad b. Iṣḥāq b. Ayyūb al-Nisābūrī, quoting Aḥmad b. Dā‘ūd b. Jābir al-Aḥmāsī, quoting Aḥmad b. Ibrāhīm al-Mawṣīlī, quoting Faraj b. Faḍlā, from Yaḥyā b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAbd Allāh, from Nāfī, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) stated, ‘My prayer and that of the prophets before me on the evening of (the assembly) at ‘Arafāt was, ‘There is no god but God alone; He has no associate. Power is His, and praise. He has control over everything.’”

Imām Aḥmad stated that Yazīd – meaning Ibn ʿAbd Rabbihi al-Jurāḥ – related to us, quoting Baqīyya b. al-Walīd, quoting Jubayr b. ʿAmr al-Qurashi, from Abū ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAbd ʿAbbās, from Abū Yaḥyā, the freed-man of the family of al-Zubayr b. al-ʿAwwām, from al-Zubayr b. al-ʿAwwām, may God be pleased with him, who said, “I heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) recite this verse while he was at ‘Arafāt: ‘God bears testimony, as do the angels and those with knowledge, that there is no god but He, the upholder of righteousness. There is no god but He, the Powerful, the Wise’ (ṣūrat Al-‘Īmran; III, v.18). And I, O God, am of those who testify to that.”
from ‘Ali, may God be pleased with him, who said, “The most part of what the Messenger of God (SAAS) prayed on the day at ‘Arafat, at the station, was ‘O God, praise is Yours, such as that we speak, and better than we speak. O God, my prayer goes to You, along with my devotion. And my living and my dying are yours, Lord of my heritage. I seek refuge with You from the agony of the grave, the whisperings of the breast and conflicting matters. O God, I take refuge with You from the evil of what the wind may bring.”

Al-Tirmidhi then stated, “It is gharib from this line. Its line of transmission is not strong.”

The ḥāfīz al-Bayhaqi narrated it through Mūsā b. Ubayda, from his brother ʿAbd Allāh b. Ubayda, from ‘Ali, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) stated, ‘The greater part of the prayer of those before me and of my prayer at ‘Arafat, is my saying, ‘There is no god but God alone. He has no associate. Power is His, and praise. He has control over everything. O God, place a light in my seeing, a light in my hearing and a light in my heart. O God, give comfort to my breast and ease my affairs. O God, I seek refuge with you from the whisperings of the breast, and conflicting matters, the evil of the trials of the grave, the evil of what comes in by night, the evil of what comes by day, the evil of what the winds bring in and the evil of fate’s calamities.’’”

Al-Tirmidhi then stated, “Mūsā b. Ubayda is alone in giving this. He is a weak source, and his brother ʿAbd Allāh was not a contemporary of ‘Ali.”

Al-Ṭabarānī stated in his work al-Manāsik that Yaḥyā b. Uthmān al-Naṣīrī related to us, quoting Yahyā b. Bukayr, quoting Yahyā b. Ṣalīḥ al-Ayli, from ʿĪsā b. Umayya, from ʿAṭāʾ b. Abū Rabāḥ, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “Among what the Messenger of God (SAAS) prayed for on the ḥijjat al-wadāʾ was, ‘O God, You hear my words, see my whereabouts and know of me what is secret and what is plain; nothing about me is hidden from You. I, the miserable, the poor, the seeker for help and protection, the concerned, the sympathetic, the consoler, the penitent, I petition You as do the poor, I plead with You in humility as do the humble, I pray to You as does one who is fearful and in distress, as one who submits his neck to You, and sheds his tears before You, bending low his body before You, humiliating himself before You. O God, do not render me, O God, wretched in my prayer to You; be compassionate and merciful with me, O Best of all who receive requests, and Best of all who give.’”

Imām ʿAbd Allāh stated that Hushaym related to him, quoting ʿAbd al-Malik, quoting ʿAṭāʾ, who said, “Usāma b. Zayd stated, ‘I was mounted behind the Prophet (SAAS) at ‘Arafat. He raised his hands praying. His camel bent forward and its halter fell. He picked up the halter with one of his hands while he raised up his other.’”

Al-Naṣīrī narrated it similarly from Yaʿqūb b. Ibrahim, from Hushaym.

al-Ḥāshimi, from Ḳrima, from Ibn Ṭabāṣ, who said, “I saw the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), praying at ʿArafāt with his hands placed upon his chest like a poor man pleading for food.”

Abū Dāʿūd al-Ṭayalisi stated in his musnad collection, that ʿAbd al-Qāhir b. al-Sarri related to him, quoting a son of Kināna b. al-ʿAbbās b. Mirdas, from his father, from his grandfather ʿAbbās b. Mirdas (who said) that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) prayed on the evening at ʿArafāt for forgiveness and mercy for his nation, and that his prayer was lengthy. He (ʿAbbās) stated that God revealed to him, “I have forgiven (all), except the oppression of one another. As for their sins that are between Myself and them, those I have forgiven.” (ʿAbbás went on,) “The Prophet (ṢAAS) said, ‘O God, You have power to reward with good this unfortunate for his wrongs done to him, and to forgive this wrong-doer.’ But He did not respond to him that evening.

“When morning for (the passage to) Muzdalifa came, he repeated his supplication. God Almighty responded to him, ‘I have forgiven them.’ And so the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) smiled and one of his Companions asked him, ‘Messenger of God, why are you smiling at a time when you used not to smile?’ He replied, ‘I am smiling at that enemy of God, Satan. When he learned that God, the Almighty and Glorious, had responded to me about my nation, he fell down praying in distress and lamenting loudly, pouring dirt over his head.’”

Abū Dāʿūd al-Sijistani narrated it in his al-Sunan from ʿĪsā b. Ibrāhīm al-Burākī and Abū al-Walīd al-Ṭayalisi, both of whom quoted from ʿAbd al-Qāhir b. al-Sarri, from Ibn Kināna b. ʿAbbās b. Mirdas, from his father, from his grandfather. (That account is) abbreviated.

Ibn Maja narrated it from Ayyūb b. Muḥammad al-Ḥāshimi b. ʿAbd al-Qāhir b. al-Sarri, from Abū Allāh b. Kināna b. ʿAbbās, from his father, from his grandfather. (That account is) extended.

Ibn Jarir narrated it in his Taftir (Exegesis) from Ismāʿīl b. Sayf al-ʿIjlī, from Abū al-Qāhir b. al-Sarri, from a son of Kināna, whose name was Abū Lubāba, from his father, from his grandfather al-ʿAbbās b. Mirdas.

The ḫāṭiṣ Abū al-Qāsim al-Ṭabrāni stated that Īshāq b. Ibrāhīm al-Dabari, quoting ʿAbd al-Razzāq, quoting Maʿmar, from someone who heard Qatāda state, “Jūlās b. ʿAmr related to us, from ʿUbadā b. al-Ṣamit, who said, ‘The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said on the day of ʿArafāt, “O people, God this day has granted you more time. He has granted you forgiveness, except for your (blameworthy) interactions with one another. He has replaced your misdeeds with good and given to those of you who do good what they request. Go forth, in the name of God.”

“When they were assembled, he said, “God has forgiven those of you who are good and has welcomed the intercession of your good men for those of you who have done evil. Mercy descends and includes them all. And then mercy is dispersed over the land and falls upon all repentants who have guarded their tongues and hands. Satan and his troops are upon the mountains of ‘Arafât watching what God is doing with them. And when mercy comes down, Satan and his troops pray in distress and lament loudly. I would egg them on for a long time at fear of forgiveness, and it encompassed them (the Muslims) And so they (the devils) are dispersing, praying in distress and lamenting.”"

An Account of the sublime revelation at that honoured station.

Imâm Ahmad stated that Ja’far b. ‘Awîn related to him, quoting Abû al-’Umayûs, from Qays b. Muslim, from Ṭâriq b. Shihâb, who stated, “A Jew came to Umar b. al-Khaṭṭâb and said, ‘Commander of the Believers, you recite a certain verse in your Book; had it come down upon us Jews, we would have adopted that day as an ‘id, “a festival day”.’ ‘What verse is that?’ he asked. He replied, ‘The words of the Almighty, “Today I have fulfilled for you your religion. I have fulfilled of you my grace, and I have honoured you with Islam as a religion”’ (sûrat al-Mi’râda; V, v.3).

‘Umar commented, ‘I swear by God, I well know the day when it was revealed to the Messenger of God (Ṣâîs), and the hour too – in the evening at ‘Arafât, on the Friday.’”

Al-Bukhârî narrated it from al-’Ilâsîn b. al-$âbîl, from Ja’far b. ‘Awîn. He also gave it, as did Muslim, al-Tirmîdî and al-Nâsâ’î, through several lines from Qays b. Muslim.

Accounts of the passage of the Messenger of God (ṣâîs), from ‘Arafât to the mash‘ar al-ḥârâm.

Jâbir stated in his long ḥadîth, “He remained standing there until the sun set. The yellow of the sky dissipated somewhat, until the sun-disk had gone. Usâmâ b. Zayd then mounted behind him and the Messenger of God (Ṣâîs) moved away; he had so tightened al-Qu’aswâ’s bridle that her head almost touched the front of his saddle. With his right hand, he was making a gesture that said, ‘People! Go easy! Go easy!’ Whenever he came to a hill, he loosened his grip somewhat until she had climbed up.

“When he came to al-Muzdalîfâ he prayed the al-‘îshâ, with an ‘âdân and two iqâmas; between these two prayer times he did not speak prayers.”

Muslim narrated this.

Al-Bukhârî stated, in his chapter His journey when he left ‘Arafât, that ‘Abd Allâh b. Yusûf related to him, quoting Mâlik, from Hishâm b. Qurwâ, from his father, who said, “Usâmâ was asked, while I was seated, ‘How did the Messenger of God (Ṣâîs) travel on the hijjat al-wadâ when he set off?’ He replied, ‘He would travel at the al-šanaq, “canter”, pace; if he found open space, he would speed up even more to the al-nasš “galllop”, pace.”

Hishām stated, “The al-nasš pace is faster than that of al-šanaq.”

Imām Āḥmad and the other major scholars, except for al-Tirmidhī, gave this through several lines, from Hishām b. Urwa, from his father, from Usāma b. Zayd.

Imām Āḥmad stated that Ya’qūb related to him, quoting his father, from Ibīn Iṣḥāq, from Hishām b. Urwa, from his father, from Usāma b. Zayd, who said, “I was mounted behind the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), the evening at ʿArafāt. When the sun set, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) set out. When he heard the hurried jostling of the people behind him, he called, ‘Take it easy, everyone! May al-sakīna, “(God’s) tranquillity”, be upon you! Piety is not (measured) by speed!’”

Usāma went on, “When the people crowded around him, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) would move off at the al-šanaq pace and if he found an opening ahead, he would increase to the al-nasš speed. When he reached al-Muzdalifa, he combined both prayers, the al-maghrib and the al-ʿishāʾ.”

Imām Āḥmad then narrated it similarly through Muḥammad b. Iṣḥāq, quoting Ibrahim b. Uqba, from Kurayb, from Usāma b. Zayd. Imām Āḥmad stated that Abū Kāmil related to him, quoting Ḥammād, from Qays b. Saʿd, from ʿAtaʾ, from Ibīn ʿAbbās, from Usāma b. Zayd, who said, “When the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) set forth from ʿArafāt, I was mounted behind him. He began to rein in his camel to the point that the prominent bone behind its ear almost touched against the front of his saddle. He would say, ‘People, go easy, and with dignity! Piety is not (measured) by a camel’s speed.’”

He narrated it similarly from ʿAffān, from ʿAbd al-Malik b. Abū Sulaymān, from ʿAtaʾ, from Ibīn ʿAbbās, from Usāma similarly. He stated, “Usāma said, ‘And he proceeded forward in the same manner until he came to Jamʿ.’”

Imām Āḥmad stated that Aḥmad b. al-Ḥajjāj related to him, quoting Ibn Abū Ṣulayk, from Ibīn Abū Dhīḥab, from Shuʿba, from Ibīn ʿAbbās, from Usāma b. Zayd (who said) that he was mounted behind the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), on the day of ʿArafāt until the latter entered the defile. He then poured water out and performed the ablution. After that he rode away, without performing the prayer.

Imām Āḥmad stated that ʿAbd al-Ṣamad related to him, quoting Ḥammām, from Qatāda, from Urwa, from al-Shaḥī, from Usāma b. Zayd, who related, “I was mounted behind the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), when he rode off at a modest pace from ʿArafāt. His camel did not raise its legs (in fast motion) before he reached Jamʿ.”
Imām Āḥmad stated that Sufyān related to him, from Ibrāhīm b. ʿUqba, from Kurayb, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who quoted Usāma b. Zayd as telling him that the Prophet (ṢAAS) mounted him behind himself from ‘Arafāt and that when the former reached the defile, he dismounted and urinated. He did not mention his pouring water, but stated, “I poured water on him and he performed a light ablution. I asked, ‘(For) the prayer?’ He replied, ‘Prayer is ahead of you.’”

Usāma went on, “He then reached al-Muzdalīfa and performed the al-maghrīb prayer. People untied their saddles and I helped him. After that he performed the al-ʿishāʾ prayer.”

Imām Āḥmad narrated it thus from Kurayb, from Ibn ʿAbbās, from Usāma b. Zayd. Al-Nasāʾī narrated it from al-Ḥusayn b. Ḥurayth, from Sufyān b. ʿUyayna, from Ibrāhīm b. ʿUqba and Muḥammad b. ʿAbd ʿArīm b. Ḥarmala, both of whom quoted from Kurayb, from Ibn ʿAbbās, from Usāma.

My teacher Sheikh Abī al-Ḥajjāj al-Mızzi stated in this work al-Aṭrāf, “The correct (line of transmission) is from Kurayb, from Usāma.”

Al-Bukhārī stated that ʿAbd Allāh b. Yūsuf related to him, quoting Mālik, from Mūsā b. ʿUqba, from Kurayb, who quoted Usāma b. Zayd as saying, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) set forth from ‘Arafāt and dismounted at the defile. He urinated and performed the ablution, but not fully. I asked him, ‘Prayer?’ He replied, ‘Prayer is ahead of you.’ He rode on to al-Muzdalīfa and performed a complete ritual ablution. Prayer was held and he performed the al-maghrīb. After that everyone made their camels kneel at his dwelling. Prayer was again held and he performed the al-ʿishāʾ. Between the two he did not say any prayers.”

Al-Bukhārī also narrated it thus from al-Qānabī. Muslim did so from Yaḥyā b. Yaḥyā. Al-Nasāʾī narrated it from Qutayba, from Mālik, from Mūsā b. ʿUqba. Both scholars gave it from a ḥadīth of Yaḥyā b. Saʿd al-Anṣārī, also from Mūsā b. ʿUqba.

Muslim also gave it from a ḥadīth of Ibrāhīm b. ʿUqba and Muḥammad b. ʿUqba, from Kurayb; their account is similar to that of their brother, Mūsā b. ʿUqba.

Al-Bukhārī also stated that Qutayba related to him, quoting Ismāʿīl b. Jaʿfar, from Muḥammad b. ʿAbd ʿArīm b. Ḥarmala, from Kurayb, who quoted Usāma b. Zayd, as saying, “I was mounted behind the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). When he reached the defile on the left, which is below al-Muzdalīfa, he made his camel kneel and urinated. He then came over and I poured water over him and he performed a light ablution. I asked, ‘Prayer, Messenger of God?’ He replied, ‘Prayer is before you.’ He then rode off to al-Muzdalīfa. He performed the prayer and thereafter al-Fadl was mounted behind him on the morning of the assembly (at ‘Arafāt).” Kurayb stated, “ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAbdās told me from al-Fadl that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) kept on reciting the talbiyya until he reached al-Jamra.”

Muslim narrated it from Qutayba, Yaḥyā b. Yaḥyā, Yaḥyā b. Ayyūb and ʿAlī b. Ḥījr. All four of them quoted from Ismāʿīl b. Jaʿfar.
Imám Aḥmad stated that Wāqī related to him, quoting ʿUmar b. Dharr, from Mujāhid, from Usāma b. Zayd, who stated that the Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa) mounted him behind himself from ʿArafat. Usāma went on, “The people said, ‘Our friend will report to us what he (the Prophet) does.’ Usāma said, ‘When he set forth from ʿArafat he pulled back the head of his camel until it touched or almost did, against the centre of the saddle. He gestured to the people, (calling) “Go easy!” three times until he reached Jamʿ. He then mounted al-Fadl b. Abbas behind himself. People said, “Our friend will report to us what he does.” Al-Fadl said, “He kept on at the same modest pace as the day before until he came to an open wādī and he raced off down it until the land levelled out.””

Al-Bukhārī stated that Saʿīd b. Abū Maryam related to him, quoting ʿĪbrahīm b. Suwāy, quoting ʿAbd al-ʿUmar, the freed-man of al-Muṭṭalib, quoting Saʿīd b. Jubayr, the freed-man of Wāliba al-Kūfī, quoting Ibn ʿAbbās as saying that when the Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa) had set off on the day of the assembly (at ʿArafat) he heard a great turmoil behind him with camels being slapped. He gestured towards them with his whip and said, “People, go easy! Piety is not (measured) by speed!”

Al-Bukhārī is alone in giving this from this line of transmission. Given above are the accounts of Imam Aḥmad, Muslim and al-Nasaʾī through ʿĀlī b. Abu Rabīʿ, from Ibn ʿAbbās, from Usāma b. Zayd. But God knows best.

Imám Aḥmad stated that Ismāʿīl b. ʿUmar related to him, quoting al-Masʿūdī, from al-Ḥakam, from Miqsam, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “When the Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa) set off from ʿArafat, the people hurried after him. He ordered a crier to call out, ‘People! Piety is not (measured) by the speed of a horse or a camel!’ And I saw no camel lifting its legs (in fast motion) until he had dismounted at Jamʿ.”

Imám Aḥmad stated that Ḥusayn and Abu Nuʿaym related to him, quoting ʿIsrāʾīl, from ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz b. Ṣafāy, who said, “Someone who heard Ibn ʿAbbās say the following related it to me, ‘The Messenger of God (Ṣaḥḥa) did not dismount from ʿArafat and Jamʿ unless it was for urination.’”

Imám Aḥmad stated that Yazīd b. Ḥarīn related to him, quoting ʿAbd al-Malik, from Anas b. Ṣirīn, who said, “I was with Ibn ʿUmar at ʿArafat. When it was time for him to leave, I went along with him to the ʾimām. He prayed with him the first (prayer) and the al-ʿasr. He then (entered into the ʾumūf) rite, as did I and my companions, until the Imám set off and we did so with him. Eventually we arrived at the pass below al-Maʾzimin, where he made his camel kneel, as did we ours. We thought that he intended to pray, but his servant informed us that when the Prophet (Ṣaḥḥa) had reached that spot, he had urinated, and that he wished to do the same.”

Al-Bukhārī stated that Mūsā related to him, quoting Juwayriyya who quoted ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar as saying, “ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar used to combine the al-maghrīb

116. The Arabic word afiida used in this context means “to proceed forth amidst a throng of pilgrims”.
and the al-
'ishā' prayers at Jam'. However, he would pass through by the defile through which the Messenger of God (SAAS) had passed. He would enter it, relieve himself, perform an ablution and would not pray until he reached Jam'."

Al-Bukhārī, may God have mercy upon him, was alone in giving this from this line.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Ādām b. Abū Dhī'āb related to him from al-Zuhri, from Sālim b. ʿAbd Allāh, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said, "The Messenger of God (SAAS) combined the al-maghrib and the al'ishā', prayers at al-Jam', each one of them with an iqāma. He did not speak any other (supererogatory) prayers between them, nor following either of them."

Muslim narrated it from Yāḥyā b. Yāḥyā, from Mālik, from al-Zuhri, from Sālim, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said that the Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the al-maghrib and al-
'ishā' prayers combined together at al-Muzdalīfa.

Muslim went on to state that Ḥarmala related to him, quoting Ibn Wahb, quoting Yūnus, from Ibn Shihāb (who said) that ʿUbayd Allāh b. ʿAbd Allāh b.
ʿUmar told him that his father said, "The Messenger of God (SAAS) combined the al-maghrib and the al'ishā' prayers together at Jam' without (him making) any prayer prostrations between them both. He performed the al-maghrib with three rakahs and the al-
'ishā' with two rakahs. ʿAbd Allah used to pray at Jam' the same way until he died."

Muslim then narrated it from a hadith of Shu'ba, from al-Ḥakam, and Salama
b. Kuhayl, from Saʿīd b. Jubayar, to the effect that he (the Prophet (SAAS)) performed the al-maghrib and the al'ishā' prayers at one (and the same) service at Jam'. He then related a hadith back to Ibn ʿUmar to the effect that he (Ibn ʿUmar) performed prayers like that. And Ibn ʿUmar related that the Messenger of God (SAAS) acted thus.

He then narrated it through al-Thawri, from Salama, from Saʿīd b. Jubayar, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said that the Messenger of God (SAAS) combined the al-maghrib and the al-
'ishā' at Jam', performing three rakahs for the maghrib and and two rakahs for the al-
'ishā' at one service with a single iqāma.

Muslim then stated that Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba related to him, quoting ʿAbd Allāh b. Jubayar, quoting Ismāʿīl b. Abū Khālid, from Abū ʿIshāq, who said,
"Saʿīd b. Jubayar stated, 'We departed (from ʿArafāt) as pilgrims with Ibn ʿUmar.
When we reached Jam', he performed the al-maghrib and al'ishā' prayers at one service, and then he completed (the prayer). He said, "That is how the Messenger of God (SAAS) prayed with us at this place.'"

Al-Bukhārī stated that Khālid b. Makhład related to him, quoting Sulaymān Yazīd al-Khaṭāmt, quoting Abū Yazīd al-ʿAnṣārī (who said) that the Messenger of God (SAAS) combined the al-maghrib and the al-
'ishā' prayers at Muzdalīfa on the ḥijjat al-wadāʾ.
Al-Bukhārī also narrated it in the al-Maghāzī from al-Qa‘nabī, from Mālik, and Muslim from a ḥadīth of Sulaymān b. Bilāl, and al-Layth b. Saʿd, all three of them quoting from Yaḥyā b. Saʿd al-Anṣārī, from ‘Adī b. Thābit.

Al-Nasāʾī narrated it also, from al-Fallas, from Yaḥyā al-Qaṭṭān, from Shuʿba, from ‘Adī b. Thābit.

Al-Bukhārī then gives a section entitled, Section on those who announced the adhān and the iqāma for each of these two (prayers).

He went on to state that ‘Amr b. Khalīd related to him, quoting Zuhayr b. Ḥarb, quoting Abū ʿIṣḥāq (who said), “I heard ‘Abd al-Raḥmān b. Yazīd say, “Abd Allāh went on the pilgrimage and when we came to al-Muzdalīfah at the time for the adhān, at dusk or close thereto, he gave orders to a man and the latter announced the adhān and the iqāma. He then performed the al-maghrib prayer and two rakaʿāt thereafter. Then he called for his supper and dined. After that he ordered someone — a man, I think — and the latter announced the adhān and the iqāma.”’

‘Amr commented, ‘I know of no one but Zuhayr who expresses such doubt.’

(The ḥadīth continues) “He then performed the al-‘ishā’ prayer with two rakaʿāt, and when the sun came up, he said, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) used to perform at this hour only this prayer in this place, on this day.” ‘Abd Allāh stated, “These were two prayers that were transferred from their (usual) times – the al-maghrib after the people arrive at al-Muzdalīfah, and the al-fajr, when the dawn rises.” He stated, “I saw the Prophet (ṢAAS) do this.”

This wording, his statement, “and the al-fajr, when the dawn rises” is more clear and precise than the other ḥadīth narrated by al-Bukhārī from Ḥāfs b. ʿUmar b. Ghiyāth, from his father, from al-Aʿmash, from ʿAmara, from ‘Abd al-Raḥmān, from ‘Abd Allāh b. Masʿūd, who said, “I only ever saw the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) perform two prayers at other than their usual times: he combined the al-maghrib with the al-‘ishā’, and the al-fajr before its time.”

Muslim narrated it from a ḥadīth of Abū Muḥāwīya and Jarīr, from al-Aʿmash. Jābir stated in his ḥadīth, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) went to bed until dawn arrived. He performed the al-fajr prayer when the morning was visible, with an adhān and an iqāma.”

ʿUrwa b. Muḍarrīs b. Aws b. Ḥāritha b. Laḥm al-Ṭāʾī witnessed this prayer along with Jābir.

Imām ʿAbd al-Fādil ʿIsāḥ b. Kāthīr stated that Hūshaym related to him, quoting Ibn Abī Khalīd and Zakariyyāʾ, from al-Shaḥībī, quoting ʿUrwa b. Muḍarrīs, who said, “I went to the Prophet (ṢAAS), when he was at Jamʿ and said, ‘Messenger of God, I have come to you from the two mountains of Ṭāʾī. I have worn myself out and exhausted my camel and, by God, I did not leave out any mountain without standing on it. Does this count for me as a ḥajj?’ He replied, ‘Whoever has witnessed this prayer with us’ – meaning the al-fajr prayer – ‘at Jam’ and stood with us, then proceeded on from there, having previously proceeded from ‘Arafat, whether by day or night, such a person will have completed his hajj and accomplished the rites.”

Imām Aḥmad also narrated this, as did the ahl al-sunan, from various lines, from al-Sha’bī, from Urwa b. Muḍarris. Al-Tirmidhī categorized this as hasan ṣaḥīh.

DIVISION

The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) used to send on ahead of himself a group of his family during the night before the departure of the people from al-Muzdalīfah to Minā.

Al-Bukhārī gives a section entitled, Chapter on those who send on ahead their family during the night; they stand at al-Muzdalīfah and pray and advance ahead after the moon has set.

He went on to state that Yahyā b. Bukayr related to him, quoting al-Layth, from Yūnus, from Ibn Shiḥāb, who said, “Salīm stated, ‘Abd Allāh b. ʿUmar used to send on ahead the weak members of his family. They would stand at the mashʿar al-ḥaram at night, speaking the name of God for as long as they wished. Then they would leave before the Imām would stand there and before he proceeded ahead. Some of them would go to Minā for the al-fajr prayer, while some would proceed thereafter. When they arrived, they would cast stones at the al-jamra,” the mound”. Ibn ʿUmar used to say, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) gave them permission.”

(Al-Bukhārī went on) Sulaymān b. Ḥarb related to us, quoting Ḥammād b. Zayd, from Ayyūb, from Ḥkrīmā, from Ibn Ṭābābās, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) dispatched me from Jamʿ by night.”

Al-Bukhārī stated that ʿAlī b. ʿAbd Allāh related to him, quoting Sufyān, quoting ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAbd Yazīd, who quoted Ibn ʿAbbās as telling him, “I was one of those whom the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) sent on ahead on the night (of the assembly) at al-Muzdalīfah among the weak members of his family.”

Muslim narrated, from a ḥadīth of Ibn Jurayj, quoting ʿAtā, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) sent me from Jamʿ at daybreak with the slow-movers.”

Imām Aḥmad stated that Rawḥ related to him, quoting Sufyān al-Thawrī, quoting Salama b. Kuhayl, from al-Ḥasan al-Urānī, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) sent us on ahead, along with the suckling women of Banū ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalīb, in charge of our people who were tired. He set about slapping our thighs with his hand and saying, ‘Now, kinfolk, do not cast stones until the sun rises!'" Ibn ‘Abbās went on, "I don’t imagine that anyone cast stones at the pillar until the sun rose."

Aḥmād stated that Yahyā b. Ādām related to him, quoting Abū al-ʿAḥwāṣ, from al-ʿAʾmash, from al-Ḥakam b. ʿUyaynā, from Mīqṣam, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) passed by us on the night of the sacrifice and it was already very dark. He set about slapping our thighs and saying, ‘Now, kinsfolk, proceed forth, but don’t cast stones at the pillar until the sun rises.’"

Imām Aḥmād then narrated it from a ḥadīth of al-Masʿūdī from al-Ḥakam, from Mīqṣam, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) sent on ahead the weak members of his family from al-Muzdalīfah at night. He proceeded to advise them not to cast stones at the pillar at al-ʿAqāba until the sun rose."

Abū Dā‘ūd stated that Uthmān b. Abū Shayba related to him, quoting al-ʿUqba, quoting Ḥamza al-Zayyāt b. Ḥabīb, from ʿAṭā’, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) would send on ahead the weaker members of his family late at night and order them” — meaning that they did not cast stones at the pillar until the sun rose.

Al-Nasāḥi narrated it thus from Māḥmūd b. Ghaylān, from Bishr b. al-Sarīr, from Sufyān, from Ḥabīb – al-Ṭabrānī stated him to be Ibn Abū Thabit – from ʿAṭā’, from Ibn ʿAbbās. Ḥamza al-Zayyāt thus moved out of his customary place (in the line of transmission). With regards to the line of transmission for the ḥadīth, it is excellent. But God knows best.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Musaddad related to him, from Yahyā, from Ibn Jurayj, quoting ʿAbd Allāh, the freed-man of Asmā’, who said that Asmā’ stayed on the night (of the assembly) at Muzdalīfah and proceeded to pray and did so for an hour. ʿAbd Allāh went on, "She then asked, ‘My son, has the moon disappeared?’ I replied, ‘No,’ and so she prayed for (another) hour. Then she asked, ‘My son, has the moon disappeared?’ ‘Yes,’ I replied. ‘Then set out,’ she said. So we did and continued on until she had cast stones at the pillar. She then returned and performed the al-ṣubh prayer in her dwelling. I asked her, ‘Hantah, I believe we’re still in dark of night.’ She replied, ‘Son, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) gave permission (for this prayer at this time) to women borne in litters.’"

Muslim narrated it from a ḥadīth of Ibn Jurayj.

If the account of Asmā’, daughter of (Abū Bakr) “the trusting”, casting stones before the rising of the sun, as is told here, based on established textual authority, then her account is to be preferred over that of Ibn ʿAbbās, because the line of transmission of her hadith is more authentic than that of his. It may, however, be said that the young men are quicker and more active than the women, and so he (the Prophet (SAAS)) ordered the former not to cast before sunrise and permitted the litter-borne women to cast before sunrise, since the latter were less agile and it was more appropriate for them to be unseen. But God knows best.

If Asmā' did not do it in accord with established textual authority, then the hadith of Ibn ʿAbbās is to be preferred over what she did.

However, the former is substantiated further by the statement of Abū Daʿūd who said that Muḥammad b. Khallād al-Bāhili related to him, quoting Yahyā b. Jurayj, quoting ʿĀṭir, quoting Mukhbir, from Asmā', who said that she cast the stones at night. (Mukhbir stated) “I told her, ‘We have cast the stones at night’ She stated, ‘We used to do that in the time of the Prophet (SAAS).’”

Al-Bukhārī stated that Abū Nuʿaym related to him, quoting Aflāḥ b. Ḥumayd, from al-Qāsim, from Muḥammad, from ʿAʿisha, who said, “We stopped at al-Muzdalifa and Sawdā' asked permission from the Prophet (SAAS), to move on prior to the departure of the rest of the people. She was a woman slow of movement. He did give her permission and she left before the rest. We remained until next morning and moved out along with him. For me to have asked his permission as Sawdā' had done would in fact have been far dearer to me than any other happiness.”

Muslim gave it from al-Qaṣābī, from Aflāḥ b. Ḥumayd. Both (compilers of the sahih collections) gave it from a hadith of Sufyān al-Thawrī, from ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. al-Qāsim, from his father, from ʿAʿisha.

Abū Daʿūd stated that Hārūn b. ʿAbd Allāh related to him, quoting Ibn Abū Fudayk, from al-Ḍāḥḥāk — meaning Uthmān’s son — from Hishām b. ʿUrwa, from his father, from ʿAʿisha, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) dispatched Umm Salama the night of the sacrifice and she cast the stones before dawn. She then left and proceeded onwards. And that was the day that would be for the Messenger of God (SAAS),” — to be with her, Abū Daʿūd added.

Abū Daʿūd is alone in giving this; its line of transmission is excellent and strong and its narrators men considered fully trustworthy.

An Account of the recitation by the Messenger of God (SAAS), of the talbiyya at al-Muzdalifā.

Muslim stated that Abū Bakr b. Abū Shaybā related to him, quoting Abū al-ʿĀwāṣ, from ʿĪṣābāy, from Kathīr b. Mudriḵ, from ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. Yazīd, who said, “Abū Allāh said, while we were at Jamʿ, ‘I heard him to whom the surāt al-Baqara was revealed say at this station, ‘Labbayka, Allāhumma, Labbayk! ‘At Your service, O God, at Your service.’’”
Chapter: On the \textit{wuqaf} (station) of the Messenger of God (SAAS), at the mash'\textit{ar} al-\textit{harâm}, his daf (departure) from al-Muzdalifâ before sunrise and his iy\textit{âf} (passage forth) into Wadi Mulazzis.\textsuperscript{119}

Jâbîr stated in his \textit{hadith}, “He performed the \textit{al-fajr} prayer at dawn with an \textit{adhan} and an \textit{iqâma}. He then mounted \textit{al-Mqâj} and proceeded to the al-mash‘ar al-\textit{harâm}. He went to the \textit{qibla}, spoke a prayer, praised and glorified God and asserted His oneness. He remained standing until the dawn light was strong. He proceeded onward before the sun rose, mounting \textit{al-Fadl} behind himself.”

Al-Bukhârî stated that Ḥâjjâj b. Minhâj related to him, quoting Shu‘a‘b, from Ibn Iṣḥâq, who said, “I heard ‘Amr b. Maymûn say, ‘I witnessed ‘Umar perform the \textit{al-$ubh} prayer at Jam‘. He then stood up and said, ‘The unbelievers used not to proceed forth until the sun rose and they would call out, ‘Ashriq Thâblr! Look down upon (Mt.) Thâblr!’ The Messenger of God (SAAS) proceeded forth before the sun rose.”

Al-Bukhârî stated that ‘Abd Allâh b. Raja‘ related to him, quoting Isrâ‘îl, from Abû Iṣḥâq, from ‘Abd al-Rahmân b. Yazd, who said, “I left for Mecca with ‘Abd Allâh. When we reached Jam‘, he performed two prayers, an \textit{adhan} and an \textit{iqâma} accompanying each of these. Between these two prayers, he took his supper. He then performed the \textit{al-fajr} prayer when the dawn rose.” (Some narrators say “when the dawn rose” and others say, “the dawn had not risen”)

“‘Abd Allâh went on, ‘The Messenger of God (SAAS) said, “These two prayers have had their times changed in this place – the people (should) not arrive at Jam‘ until they perform (the \textit{$ihâd} prayer), and the \textit{al-fajr} prayer is at this hour.”

“He” (‘Abd Allâh) “stood there until it became light and then he stated, ‘If the Commander of the Believers were to proceed forth now, he would act in proper accord with the \textit{sunna}.’ And I don’t know whether it was his comment or the departure of ‘Uthmân that came first. And he continued to recite the \textit{talbiyya} until he cast the stones at the day of sacrifice.”

\textsuperscript{119} The words \textit{wuqaf}, \textit{daf} and \textit{iyâf} represented in this title by “station”, “departure” and “passage forth” are technical terms associated with the rites of the pilgrimage for which there are no effective English equivalents. upon their heads. Our procedure is different from theirs. They would go on from al-mash'ar al-haram when the sun rose over the mountain tops like mens’ turbans upon their heads. Our procedure is different from theirs.’”

He (al-Bayhaqi) went on, “Abd Allah b. Idris related it from Ibn Jurayj, from Muhammed b. Qays b. Makrama as being mursal.”

Imam Ahmad stated that Abu Khaliid Sulayman b. Hayyan related to him, quoting al-'Amash, from al-Hakam, from Miqsam, from Ibn 'Abbâs (who said) that the Messenger of God (SAAS) proceeded forth from al-Muzdalifa before the sun rose.

Al-Bukharî stated that Zuhayr b. Harb related to him, quoting Wahb b. Jarir, quoting his father, from Yûnus al-Ayli, from al-Zuhri, from Ubayd Allah b. Abû Allah b. 'Abbâs, (who said) that Usâma was mounted behind the Prophet (SAAS), from 'Arafat to al-Muzdalifa. He then mounted al-Fadl behind himself from al-Muzdalifa to Mina. Each of these men said, “The Prophet (SAAS) went on reciting the talbiyya until he cast stones at al-'Aqaba.”

Ibn Jurayj related it from 'Aqil, from Ibn 'Abbâs.

Muslim related from a hadith of al-Layth b. Sa'd, from Abû al-Zubayr, from Abû Mu'âbad, from Ibn 'Abbâs, from al-Fadl b. 'Abbâs, who had been mounted behind the Messenger of God (SAAS), that the latter said on the evening of the (assembly) at 'Arafat and on the morning (of the assembly) at Jam' when they proceeded on their way, “Proceed with tranquillity.” He restrained his camel until he entered Muhammed while on his way from Mina. He said, “Gather the pebbles that will be used for casting at the jamara.”

Al-Fadl went on, “And the Messenger of God (SAAS) went on reciting the talbiyya until he had cast (stones) at the pillar.”

The hafl al-Bayhaqi gives the following in a section entitled, Proceeding on into Wâdi Mu'Neill.

Muslim narrated it in his saḫl collection, from Abû Bakr b. Shayba.

Al-Bayhaqi went on to narrate from a hadith of Sufyân al-Thawrî, from Abû al-Zubayr, from Jâbir, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) proceeded on in a state of al-sakina, ‘(God’s) tranquillity’. And he ordered them to proceed with tranquillity. He went on into Wâdi Mu'Neill. He ordered them to cast stones that were like pebbles for sling shots. And he said, ‘Adopt your rites from me; I may not see you after this year.’”

120. The pebbles that the pilgrim uses in the rite of the rami (the stoning of Satan) are gathered at Muzdalifa.
Al-Bayhaqi then narrated from a hadith of al-Thawri, from 'Abd al-Rahman b. al-Harith, from Zayd b. 'Ali, from his father, from Ubayd Allah b. Abū Raśīd, from 'Ali (who said) that the Messenger of God (SAAS) proceeded forth from Jam' and reached Muhassir. He slapped his camel until he crossed the wādī, then he stopped. Later he mounted al-Fadl behind himself and went on to the pillar (at Minā) and cast stones at it.

He related it thus, in abbreviated form.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Abū ʿAlī Muhammad b. ʿAbd Allah al-Zubayrī related to him, quoting Sufyān b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. al-Harith b. ʿAyyāsh b. Abū Raʿīs, from Zayd b. ʿAli, from his father, from Ubayd Allah b. Abū Raśīd, from ʿAli, who said, "The Messenger of God (SAAS) stood at ʿArafāt and said, 'This is the station; and all ʿArafāt is a station.' He proceeded forth when the sun set and mounted Usāma behind himself. He began forcefully urging on his camel, while the people were jostling at his right and left. He did not turn towards them. He was saying, 'Go easy, people!'

"He then reached Jam'. There he performed both prayers with them, the al-maghrib and the al-ʾisha. He spent the night there and next morning went to Mt. Quzaḥ. He stood there and said, 'This station and all Jam' is a station.' He then proceeded on until he reached Muhassir. He stood there, then urged his camel ahead until he had crossed the wādī, whereupon he restrained it. Thereafter he mounted al-Fadl behind himself and travelled on to the pillar, at which he cast stones. He then went on to the sacrifice site and said, 'This is a sacrifice site; all Minā is a site for sacrifice.' A young girl of (Banū) Khathām then asked him to make a ruling, saying, 'My father is an old man who is mentally senile. It is time for him to fulfil God's requirement of making the ḥajj. Will he be rewarded if I accomplish it on his behalf?' 'Yes; perform it for your father,' he replied."

(The narrator) stated further, "He (the Prophet (SAAS)) turned the head of al-Fadl aside. ʿAlī ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAbd Allāh al-Muṭṭalibī asked him, 'Messenger of God, why did you turn aside the head of your cousin?' He replied, 'I saw a young man and a young woman, and I could not trust Satan with them.'

"A man then came up to him and asked, 'Messenger of God, I have shaved (my head) before making sacrifice.' He replied, 'Make sacrifice, despite the prohibition.' Then another man came and asked, 'Messenger of God, I have performed the circumambulation of the ḥajj before I shaved (my head).' He replied, 'Shave or cut it short; it's no problem.'

"After that he went to the kāʾba, made the circumambulation (of the ḥajj) and proceeded on to zamzam. He then said, 'Banū ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalib; were it not that people would have overwhelmed you (in their wanting to emulate me) I would surely have drawn water with you.'"

Al-Tirmidhî stated, "It is ḥasan saḥîh. We know it as a hadîth of ‘Allî only through this line."

I note that there are testimonies to it from authentic lines of transmission that are given in the saḥîh collections and elsewhere. These include the story of the Khath‘amî woman; it is given in both saḥîh collections through al-Fâqîl. Reference is made to her above, in the hadîth of Jâbir. We will relate further a portion of it.

Al-Bayhaqî related it, with its (full) lines of transmission from Ibn ‘Abbâs, to the effect that the latter denied that there was movement at speed in Wâdi Muḥâassis. He said, "That was only on the part of the bedouin." And he went on, “And affirmation is to be preferred over denial.”

I note that his assertion of affirmation over it is controversial. But God knows best.

That is made authentic according to (reports) of a group of the Companions referring to (the practice of) the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). It is also authenticated by the actions of the two sheikhs Abû Bakr and ‘Umar, who are referred to as having done that. Al-Bayhaqî related from al-Ḥâkim, from al-Najjâd and others, from Abû Ṭâlî, Muḥâammad b. Mu‘âṣîd b. al-Mustahîl, known as Durrân, from al-Qa‘înabî, from his father, from Hîshâm b. ‘Urwa, from his father, from al-Miswâr b. Makhrama, that as ‘Umar urged on his mount, he would recite the verse,

“My camel races towards You (O God), her bridle loose-fitting, her faith different from that of the Christians.”

Accounts of the casting by the Prophet (ṢAAS), of stones only at the pillar at al-‘Aqâba on the day of the sacrifice. How he cast them and when. And from what position he cast them, and how many they were. Also, his cessation of recitation of the talbiyya when he cast them.

It has been stated above from a hadîth of Usâma, al-Fâqîl and other of the Companions, may God be pleased with them all, that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) went on reciting the talbiyya until he cast (stones) at the jamra at al-‘Aqâba.

Al-Bayhaqî stated that Imâm Abû ‘Uthmân informed him, quoting Abû Ṭâhir b. Khûzayma, quoting his grandfather – the Imâm par excellence, Muḥâammad b. Ishâq b. Khûzayma, that is – quoting Ṭâlî b. Ḥajr, quoting Sharîk, from ʿAmîr b. Shaqîq, from Abû Wâîl from ʿAbd Allâh who said, “I closely watched the Prophet (ṢAAS), and he went on reciting the talbiyya until he cast the first stone at the pillar of al-‘Aqâba.”

121. The discussion relates to the movement at a fast pace through the Muḥâassis valley.
122. The camel is emaciated due to the distance and the speed of its long journey.
He (al-Bayhaqī) also stated that Ibn Khuzayma related to him, quoting `Umar b. Ḥafṣ al-Shaybānī, quoting Ḥafṣ b. Ghiyāth, quoting Jaʿfar b. Mūhammad, from his father, from `Ali b. al-Ḥusayn, from Ibn ʿAbbās, from al-ʿAḍr, who said, “I proceeded on with the Messenger of God (ṣaṣ) from ʿArafāt and he continued reciting the talbiyya until he cast stones at the pillar at al-ʿAqaba, saying Allāhu Akbar ‘God is most Great’ with each stone. He then broke off the recitation of the talbiyya with the final stone.”

Al-Bayhaqī stated, “This addition is strange and it is not present in the well-known accounts attributed to Ibn ʿAbbās, quoting al-ʿAḍr, even though Ibn Khuzayma did select it.”

Mūhammad b. Iṣḥāq related that Abān b. Sāliḥ related to him, from ʿIkrima, who said, “I proceeded on with ʿAlī b. (from ʿArafāt). I can still hear him reciting the talbiyya up until he cast the stone at al-ʿAqaba. When he cast it, he ceased (the recitation). I asked, ‘Why is this?’ He replied, ‘I saw my father ʿAlī b. Abū Ṭālīb recite the talbiyya until he cast stones at the pillar at al-ʿAqaba. And he told me that the Messenger of God (ṣaṣ) used to do that.’”

It is narrated above from a ḥadīth of al-Layth from Abū al-Zubayr, from Abū Mas巴d, from Ibn ʿAbbās, from his brother al-ʿAḍr, to the effect that the Prophet (ṣaṣ) ordered the people in Wādī Muḥassir to throw pebbles such as are used in sling shots in casting at the pillar.

Muslim related this.

Abū al-ʿAlīyya stated, from Ibn ʿAbbās, that al-ʿAḍr related to him, saying, “The Messenger of God (ṣaṣ) said to me on the morning of the day for sacrifice, ‘Choose me some pebbles.’ So I chose him some like those used in slings. He put them in his hand and said, ‘With the like of these! With the like of these! Beware of excess; it was excess in religion that destroyed those before you.’”

Al-Bayhaqī related this.

Jābir stated in his ḥadīth, “When he reached Wādī Muḥassir, he spurred on his mount a little, then followed the middle trail that emerges at al-jamrat al-kubrā (at Minā), ‘the greater pillar’, and then he went on to the pillar and cast seven pebbles at it, glorifying God with each pebble; each pebble was small and he threw them from the centre of the wādī.”

Muslim related it thus.

Al-Bukhārī stated, that Jābir, may God be pleased with him, said, “The Prophet (ṣaṣ) cast stones on the morning of the day for sacrifice. And thereafter he cast them after the sun began to decline.”

This ḥadīth that al-Bukhārī recorded is given by Muslim from a ḥadīth of Ibn Jurayj, who stated that Abū al-Zubayr informed him that he heard Jābir state, “The Messenger of God (ṣaṣ) cast stones at the pillar on the morning of the day for the sacrifice, and thereafter, when the sun began to decline.”

In both sahih collections it is given in a ḥadīth of al-ʾAṭmash, from ʿIbrāhīm, from ʿAbd al-ʿRaḥmān b. Zayd, who said, “ʿAbd Allāh cast from the centre of the and I commented, ‘Abd al-Rahmān, people cast stones at it from above it.’ He replied, ‘By Him other than Whom there is no God, this is the station about which revelation came in surat al-Baqara.’”

This is the wording of al-Bukhārī.

In one version he quotes, from a hadith of Shuʿba, from al-Ḥakam, from Ibrāhīm, from ʿAbd al-Rahmān, who said the following about ʿAbd Allāh b. Masʿūd: “He came to al-jamarat al-kubrā and placed himself with the kaʿba to his left and Mīnā to his right. He cast seven (stones) and said, “This is how he to whom surat al-Baqara was revealed cast.”

Al-Bukhārī then has a section entitled, Section on those who cast seven (stones) at the mound, glorifying God with each pebble; Ibn ʿUmar stated this about the Prophet (ṢAAS).

This is only known in the hadith of Jābir, through Jaʿfar b. Muḥammad, quoting his father about Jābir, (to the effect that) when the latter arrived, he would approach the pillar and cast seven pebbles, stating Allāhu Akbar! “God is most Great”, with each pebble that were of the size shot in slings.

In this section, al-Bukhārī narrated this from a hadith of al-ʿAʾmash, from Ibrāhīm, from ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. Yazīd, about ʿAbd Allāh b. Masʿūd (to the effect that the latter) cast seven pebbles at the pillar from the middle of the wādī, saying God is most Great! with each pebble. He then said, “It is here, by Him other than Whom there is no God, that he to whom surat al-Baqara was revealed stood.”

Muslim related it from a hadith of Ibn Jurayj, who quoted Abū al-Zubayr as stating that he heard Jābir b. ʿAbd Allāh say, “I saw the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) cast at the mound seven pebbles like those shot in slings.”

Ibn ʿAṣim related it to him, quoting ʿAbd Allāh b. Masʿūd, meaning Miqsam – from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said that the Prophet (ṢAAS) cast at the mound at al-ʿAqaba on the day of the sacrifice while mounted.

Al-Tirmidhī related it to him, from Abū Zaid, who said, “It is ḥasan”. Ibn Māja gave it, from Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba, from Abū Khālid al-ʿAḥmar, from al-Ḥajjāj b. Artāt.

Abū Ṭālib related it from Abū Hind b. Manṣūr, from Abū Ṭālib b. Abū Zaid, who said, “It is ḥasan”.

Ibn ʿUmar related it from Abū Bakr, from Abū Muḥammad b. Abū ʿUmar b. Abū Zaid, who said, “This is the phraseology of Abū Daʿūd.”
In one account he gave, she said, “I saw him at the pillar at al-‘Aqaba mounted. And between his fingers I saw stones, and he cast (them). The people also cast (stones). He did not stand at it.”

According to Ibn Maja, she said, “I saw the Messenger of God (SAAS) on the day of the sacrifice at the pillar at al-‘Aqaba. He was mounted on his mule.” He went on to complete the hadith.

The reference here to the mule is very strange.

Muslim narrated in his sahih collection from a hadith of Ibn Jurayj, quoting Abū al-Zubayr, quoting Jābir b. ‘Abd Allah, who said, “I saw the Messenger of God (SAAS) cast at the mound while mounted on his camel on the day of the sacrifice. And he was saying, ‘You should take your rites (from me) for, I do not know, perhaps I will not make the pilgrimage after this hajja of mine.’”

Muslim also related (it) from a hadith of Zayd b. Abu Unaysa, from Yaḥyā b. al-Ḥusayn, from his grandmother Umm al-Ḥusayn. Yaḥyā related that he heard her say, “I performed the hajja al-wadā’ with the Messenger of God (SAAS). I saw him when he cast at the pillar at al-‘Aqaba and (when) he left mounted on his camel on the day of sacrifice, as he said, ‘You should take your rites (from me), for I do not know, perhaps I will not make the pilgrimage after this hajja of mine.’”

In one account, she stated, “I went on the hajja al-wadā’ with the Messenger of God (SAAS). I saw Usāma and Bilal; one of them was taking hold of the halter of the camel of the Prophet (SAAS), while the other man was raising his gown to shield him from the heat, until he cast at the pillar at al-‘Aqaba.”

Imām Ahmad stated that Abū Ahmad Muhammad b. ‘Abd Allah al-Zubayr related to him, quoting Ayman b. Nābil, quoting Qudāma b. ‘Abd Allah al-Kilabī, (who said) that he saw the Messenger of God (SAAS), cast at the mound at al-‘Aqaba from the middle of the wādi on the day of the sacrifice mounted upon a reddish-hued camel he owned. And there was no striking, no pushing away and no saying, “Keep away! Keep away!”

Ahmad also narrated it from Waki’, Muṭ’amir b. Sulaymān and Abū Qurra Mūsā b. Ṭāriq al-Zubaydī, all three of whom quoted Ayman b. Nābil. He also narrated it from Abū Qurra, from Sufyān al-Thawrī, from Ayman.

Al-Nasa’ī and Ibn Maja gave it from a hadith of Waki’. Al-Tirmidhī narrated it from ‘Abd Allāh b. Mānī‘, from Marwān b. Mu‘āwiya, from Ayman b. Nābil. He stated, “This hadith is ḥasan sahīh.”

Imām Ahmad stated that Nūḥ b. Maymūn related to him, quoting ‘Abd Allāh – meaning al-‘Umari – from Nāfis, who said, “Ibn Umar would cast at the pillar at al-‘Aqaba while mounted on his camel on the day of the sacrifice. And he did not go to any of the others thereafter unless on foot. He claimed that the Prophet (SAAS) used not to go to them unless on foot, whether going or returning.”

Abū Dā‘ūd related it from al-Qa‘nabī, from ‘Abd Allāh al-‘Umari.
Jabir stated, “Then he left for the sacrifice site, where he sacrificed 63 camels by his own hand. He allowed ‘Ali to sacrifice those that remained and had him share in his own hādī. He ordered that a piece of meat of each animal be cut out and placed in a pot, where it was all cooked. Both men ate from that meat and drank the gravy.”

We will discuss this hadīth.

Imām Ahmad b. Hanbal stated that ‘Abd al-Razzāq related to him, quoting Ma‘mar, from Ḥumayd al-‘Araj, from Muḥammad b. Ibrāhīm al-Taymī, from ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. Mu‘ādh, from one of the men who was one of the Companions of the Prophet (SAAS). The man stated, “The Prophet (SAAS) made an address at Minā and directed them to their places. He said, ‘Let the muḥājirūn stay there.’ And he gestured towards the right side of the qibla. ‘And the ansār over here.’ And he gestured towards the left side of the qibla. ‘And let the other people stay round about them.’”

He went on, “He then instructed them in their rites. The hearing of those at Minā was accentuated so that they could hear him at their places. And I heard him say, ‘Cast at the pillar (small) pebbles like those shot from slings.’”

Abū Da‘ūd narrated it thus from Ahmad b. Hanbal, as far as the words, “And let the (other) people stay around them”.

Imām Ahmad narrated it from ‘Abd al-Ṣamad b. ‘Abd al-Wārith from his father. And Abū Da‘ūd did so from Musaddad, from ‘Abd al-Wārith. Ibnu Majā gave it from the hadīth of Ibn al-Mubāرك, from ‘Abd al-Wārith, from Ḥumayd b. Qays al-‘Araj, from Muḥammad b. Ibrāhīm al-Taymī, from ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. Mu‘ādh al-Taymī, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) made an address to us while we were at Minā. Our hearing was so accentuated that we could hear what he was saying.”

The remainder of the hadīth was then given.

Jabir b. ‘Abd Allāh narrated that the Messenger of God (SAAS) shared the hādī with ‘Alī b. Abū Ṭalīb, and that the sacrificial animals brought by ‘Alī from Yemen and those brought with him by the Messenger of God (SAAS) totalled 100 camels, and that the latter sacrificed 63 animals by his own hand.

Ibn Ḥibān and others stated, “And that (figure) corresponded with his age, for he was (at the time) 63 years old!”

Imām Ahmad stated that Yahyā b. ʿAdam related to him, quoting Zuhayr, quoting Muḥammad b. ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. Abū Laylā, from al-Ḥakam, from Miqṣam, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) made sacrifice on the ḥajj of 100 animals of which he sacrificed 60 by his own hand. He ordered that the remainder be brought and they were sacrificed. A piece of each one was taken and placed in a pot. He ate from it and drank its gravy.”
“On the day at al-Ḥudaybiyya, he sacrificed 70 animals, including the camel of Abū Jahl. When they were blocked from the ka‘ba, they (the camels) expressed their anguish, as though yearning for their young.”

Ibn Māja narrated part of it from Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba. ʿAlī b. Muḥammad did so from Wākī, quoting Sufyān al-Thawrī, from Ibn Abū Laylā.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Ya’qūb related to him, quoting his father, from Muḥammad b. Ishaq, quoting a man, from ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Najīth, from Muḥājīd b. Jābr, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) brought with him 100 animals. Of these he sacrificed 30 by his own hand, and then he ordered ʿAlī who sacrificed the remainder. He said, ‘Divide up their meat, skins and pack-saddles among the people. Do not give the butcher any of it (as payment). Take a piece of meat from each camel, place them in a single pot so that we may eat from their flesh and drink from their gravy.’ And he did so.”

It is established in both saḥiḥ collections from a ḥadīth of Muḥājīd, from Ibn Abū Laylā, from ʿAlī, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) ordered me to go over to his sacrificial camels and to give away their meat, skins and pack-saddles, and told me not to give any of them to the butcher. He said, ‘We will give him some of our own.’”

Abū Dā’ūd stated that Muḥammad b. Ḥātim related to him, quoting ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. Mahdī, quoting ʿAbd Allāh b. al-Mubārak, from Ḥarmalā b. Ḥimrān, from ʿAbd Allāh b. al-Ḥarīth al-Azūdī, who quoted ʿArafa b. al-Ḥarīth as saying, “I witnessed the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) being brought the sacrificial animals. He said, ‘Summon Abū Ḥasan to me.’ And ʿAlī was summoned to him. He then said, ‘Take hold of the lower part of the spear.’ The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) took hold of its upper part. They then used it to stab the camels. When he had finished, he mounted his mule, seating ʿAlī behind himself.”

Abū Dā’ūd is alone in giving this. There is some strangeness in both its line of transmission and its content. But God knows best.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Ahmad b. al-Ḥajjāj related to him, quoting ʿAbd Allāh, quoting al-Ḥajjāj b. Arṭā, from al-Ḥakam, from Abū al-Qāsim – meaning Miqṣam – from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) cast stones at the pillar at al-ʿAqaba. He then made sacrifice and shaved (his head).”

Ibn Ḥazm claimed that he sacrificed cattle for his wives and sacrificed a cow at Minā. He sacrificed two fine rams for himself.

DESCRIPTIONS OF THE PROPHET (ṢAAS) SHAVING HIS HEAD.

Imām Aḥmad stated that ʿAbd al-Razzāq related to him, quoting Maʿmar, from al-Zuhrī, from Sālim, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), shaved his head on this hijja.

Al-Nasṣāḥ narrated it from Ishaq b. Ibrahīm – he being Ibn Rahawayh – from ʿAbd al-Razzāq.
Al-Bukhari stated that Abū al-Yamān related to him, quoting Shu'ayb, who said, "Nafiʾ stated, 'Abd Allah b. ʿUmar used to say, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) shaved (his head) on his ʿijja."'" Muslim related it from a hadith of Mūsā b. ʿUqba, from Nāfiʾ.

Al-Bukhari stated that ʿAbd Allah b. Muḥammad b. Asmaʾ related to him, quoting Juwayriyya son of Asmaʾ, from Nāfiʾ, who quoted ʿAbd Allah b. ʿUmar as saying, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) shaved (his head) as did a number of his Companions; some of them cut (their hair) short."

Muslim narrated it from a hadith of Muḥammad b. ʿUqba, from Nāfiʾ. He added, "ʿAbd Allah quoted the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) as saying, 'May God have mercy on those who shaved (their heads).' He said this once or twice. People asked, 'Messenger of God, does that apply to those who cut (their hair) short?' He replied, 'And those who cut short as well.'"

Muslim stated that Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba related to him, quoting Wāqīʾ and Abū Daʾūd al-Ṭayalīsī, from Yahyā b. al-Ḥusayn, from his grandmother, who said that she heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) on the ʿihjat al-wadaʾ speak a prayer three times for those who shaved (their heads) and a prayer once for those who cut (their hair) short. Wāqīʾ did not include the words, "on the ʿihjat al-wadaʾ".

Muslim narrated this hadith thus from a hadith of Mālik. ʿUbayd Allah gave it from Nāfiʾ, from Ibn ʿUmar. ʿUmāra gave it from Abū Zurʿa, from Abū Hurayra. Al-Qāʾīb b. ʿAbd al-Rāḥmān related it from his father, from Abū Hurayra.

Muslim stated that Yahyā b. Yahyā related to him, quoting ʿHaṣā b. Ghiyāṭh, from Hishām, from Ibn Sirin, from Anas b. Malik who said that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) went to Mt. Minā, proceeded to the pillar, cast at it, went to his dwelling at Minā and made sacrifice. He then said to the barber, "Take". He gestured towards his right side (of his head), then to his left side. He began giving the hair to the people.

In one account he gives, he shaved the right side of his head and distributed it, a hair or two at a time, to the people. He gave the hair of the left side to Abū Ṭalḥa. In another account of his, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) gave the hair of the right side to Abū Ṭalḥa, and also gave him the hair of the left side, telling him to distribute it among the people.

Imām Ahmad stated that Sulaymān b. Ḥarb related to him, quoting Sulaymān b. al-Mughīra, from Thābit, from Anas, who said, "I saw the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), while the barber was shaving him. His Companions were encircling him, not wanting a hair to fall anywhere but into a man’s hand."

Ahmad is alone in giving this.

Chapter.

After having cast stones at the pillar at al-ʿAqaba, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) dressed in robes, put on perfume and sacrificed his ḥadīth. Before he circumambulated the kaʿba ʿAʾisha put perfume on him.
Al-Bukhari stated that 'Ali b. 'Abd Allah b. al-Madini related to him, quoting Ṣufyān – he being Ibn ʿUyayna – quoting 'Abd al-Rahmān b. al-Qāsim b. Muḥammad, the latter being the finest of men of his era, who said that he heard his father, the finest man of his era, say that he heard ʿAʾisha state, “I put perfume on the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), with these two hands of mine when he adopted the ḵilāl state and again when he declared it at an end, before he circumambulated,” and that she spread out her hands.

Muslim stated that Yaʿqūb al-Dawraqī and Aḥmad b. Manī both related to him, quoting Hushaym, quoting Maḥṣūr, from ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. al-Qāsim, from his father who quoted ʿAʾisha as saying, “I would put perfume on the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), before he adopted the ḵilāl state, and on the day of the sacrifice, before he circumambulated the kāba; I used perfume mixed with musk.”

Al-Nasāʾī narrated, from a hadīth of Ṣufyān b. ʿUyayna, from al-Zuhri, from Ṣurwa, from ʿAʾisha, who said, “I perfumed the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), for his state of ḵilzam when he affirmed it and for his state of ḵilāl after he had cast stones at the pillar at al-Aqaba, before he circumambulated the kāba.”

Al-Shafiʿī stated that Sufyān b. ʿUyayna informed him, from ʿAmr b. Dinār, from Sālim, who quoted ʿAʾisha as saying, “I perfumed the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), for both his states, of ḵilzam and ḵilāl.”

ʿAbd al-Razzaq narrated it from Maʿmar, from al-Zuhri, from Sālim, from ʿAʾisha.

In both saḥīḥ collections Ibn Jurayj is quoted as saying that ʿUmar b. ʿAbd Allah b. ʿUrwa informed him that he heard ʿUrwā and al-Qāsim quoting ʿAʾisha as having said, “I perfumed the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), by my own hands, using perfume in powder form, on the ḥijjat al-wadāʾ, both for the ḵilzam and the ḵilāl.”

Muslim related it from a hadīth of al-Ḍahḥāk b. ʿUthmān, from Abū al-Rijjal, from his mother ʿAmra, who quoted ʿAʾisha as above.

Ṣufyān al-Thawrī stated, on the authority of Salāma b. Kuhayl, from al-Ḥasan al-ʿAwfī, who quoted Ibn ʿAbbās as saying, “When you have cast stones at the pillar, your state of ḵilzam will be concluded and all things previously ḥaram will be ḥalāl for you, except for women (they will continue to be haram for you); until you circumambulate the kāba.” A man asked, “What about perfume, Abū al-ʿAbbās?” He replied, “I saw the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) rub musk on to his head. And is that perfume, or not?”

Muḥammad b. ʾIshāq stated that Abū ʿUbaydā related to him, from ʿAbd Allāh b. Zamā, from his father and his mother, Ẓaynāb, daughter of Umm Salāma, who quoted Umm Salāma as saying, “It was the night when the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) would circulate, the night of the sacrifice. He was with me when Wahb b. Zamā came in, accompanied by a man of the family of Abū ʿUmayya. Both men were wearing long shirts. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) asked them, ‘Have you performed the ḥawāf (of the ifṣāda)?’ ‘No,’ both men replied.
‘Then take off your shirts,’ he told them, and they did so. Wahb then asked him, ‘Why, Messenger of God?’ He replied, ‘This is a day when you are given permission (to wear the shirts) if you have cast (stones) at the pillar and have sacrificed animals, if you had brought some. Then you would be in a state of ḥilal for all that had previously been ḥarām for you, except for women until you have circumambulated the ka'ba. If you have cast stones but not completed the tawāf, you will remain in a state of ḥilal, until after you circumambulate the ka'ba.’”

Abū Dā‘ūd narrated it similarly from Aḥmad b. Ḥanbal and Yahyā b. Ma‘īn, both of whom quoted from Ibn Abī ‘Adī, from Ibn Ishaq.

Al-Bayhaqī gave it from al-Ḥākim, from Abū Bakr b. Abī Ishaq, from Abū al-Muthanna al-‘Anbarī, from Yahyā b. Ma‘īn. He adds the following at the end, “Abū ‘Ubayda stated that Umm Qayys, daughter of Miḥṣan related to him, as follows, ‘Ukkasha b. Miḥṣan, along with a group of men of Banū Asad, all dressed in shirts, left my place on the evening of the day of the sacrifice. Then they returned to us that evening carrying their shirts in their hands.’ She questioned them and they told her the same as the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had said to Wahb b. Zam‘a and his companion.”

This hadith is very gharib. I do not know a single other scholar who quoted it.

Accounts of the visit of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) to the ancient ka'ba.

Jābir stated, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) then rode on and proceeded in a throng to the ka'ba. He performed the al-zuhr prayer in Mecca and went over to Banū ‘Abd al-Muṭṭalib who were distributing the water at zamzam. He said, ‘Dismiss Banū ‘Abd al-Muṭṭalib! Were it not for the people's preference for you having charge of the water distribution, I would have disputed with you!’ They handed him a bucket and he drank from it.”

Muslim narrated this. In this text there is evidence that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) rode to Mecca prior to the decline of the sun and circumambulated the ka'ba. Having finished this, he performed the al-zuhr prayer there.

Muslim also stated that Muhammad b. Rāfī‘ informed him, quoting ‘Abd al-Razzāq, quoting ‘Ubayd Allāh b. ‘Umar, from Nāfi‘, from Ibn ‘Umar (who said) that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) performed the tawāf (of the ifāda) on the day of the sacrifice and then returned and performed the al-zuhr prayer at Minā.

This differs from the hadith of Jābir; both are given by Muslim. If we analyze both accounts, it is possible for it to be said, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) performed the al-zuhr prayer at Mecca, then returned to Minā, found the people waiting for him there and prayed with them.” But God knows best.

It is possible that he returned to Minā within the time allotted to the al-zuhr prayers, even though he had done so much that morning, because that was in summer and the day time was long. He proceeded that day from al-Muzdalifah well after the light of dawn had come, but before actual sunrise. He then went to Minā and began casting pebbles at the pillar at al-'Aqaba. He proceeded on to sacrifice the 63 camels by his own hand, while ʿAli sacrificed the remainder of the 100. Thereafter, a piece of the meat of each camel was taken, placed in a pot and cooked until done. He ate some of the meat and drank some of the gravy.

In the meantime, he shaved his head and put on perfume. And when he had completed all this, he rode to the kaʾba.

The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) delivered a major address that day; I do not know whether that was before his departure to the kaʾba or following his return thereafter to Minā. God knows best.

The outcome of this is that he did ride to the kaʾba and made seven circumambulations of it while mounted. He did not circumambulate between al-Šafāʾ and al-Marwa, as is established in the ṣaḥīḥ collection of Muslim, from Jābir and ʿAʾisha, may God be pleased with them both. He then drank from the waters of zamzam and from a beverage of dates made from water from zamzam.

All of this substantiates the assertion of those who stated, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) performed the al-ṣuḥr prayer at Mecca, as Jābir related. And it is likely that he returned to Minā at the very end of noon and then also performed the al-ṣuḥr prayer at Minā with his companions.”

This was problematic for Ibn Ḥazm, and he did not know what to say about it. And he is to be excused for this, due to the contradictions in the various ḥadīths relating to it that are (classified as) ṣaḥīḥ, ‘authentic’. God knows best.

Abū Dāʾūd stated that ‘Ali b. Baḥr and ʿAbd Allāh b. Saʿīd al-Maʿnī both related to him, quoting Abū Khālid al-Aḥmar, from Muḥammad b. Ishāq, from ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. al-Qāsim, from his father, who quoted ʿAʾisha as saying, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) performed the ṭawāf (of the ifīʿa) on the last day (or the latter part of the day) hīna ʿallā al-ṣuḥr,123 when he had performed the al-ṣuḥr prayer. Then he returned to Minā, where he stayed for the nights of the ayyām al-tashrīq,124 casting stones at the pillar when the sun began to decline. Each time he cast seven pebbles, saying ‘God is most Great’, with each pebble.”

Ibn Ḥazm stated, “And so Jābir and ʿAʾisha agreed that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), performed the al-ṣuḥr prayer on the day of the sacrifice at Mecca. Both of them – though God knows best – are more accurate in this than was Ibn ʿUmar.”

He went on, “This does not mean anything particular; for this account of ʿAʾisha does not determine that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) performed the al-ṣuḥr prayer at Mecca, though that would be likely if the correct wording in the account were hattā ʿallā al-ṣuḥr (until he had performed the al-ṣuḥr prayer). If, however, the statement read hīna ʿallā al-ṣuḥr (when he performed the al-ṣuḥr

123. The words used in this ḥadīth are the subject for discussion immediately hereafter.
124. The three days of the ḥaʾīj that follow the day of the sacrifice.
prayer) – which is more likely – that, then, would be evidence that he performed the al-zuhur prayer at Minâ before he went to the ka'ba. This is more likely. But God the Almighty, may He be praised, knows best."

Ibn Ḥazm is therefore contradicting the hadith of Jâbir. For this would require that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) performed the al-zuhur prayer at Minâ before he rode to the ka'ba. Yet the hadith of Jâbir requires that he rode to the ka'ba before he performed the al-zuhur prayer, and he did perform it at Mecca.

Al-Bukhârî stated that Ābû al-Zubayr said, quoting ‘A'isha, and Ibn ‘Abbâs also said that, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) postponed it”, that is the tawâf al-ziyâra, until the night.

This comment given by al-Bukhârî is also narrated by the scholars from a hadith of Yahyâ b. Sa‘îd, ‘Ābd al-Rahmân b. Mahdi and Faraj b. Maymûn, from Sufyân al-Thawrî, from Ābû al-Zubayr, from ‘A'isha and Ibn ‘Abbâs, to the effect that the Prophet (ṢAAS) postponed the circumambulation of the day of the sacrifice until the night. The scholars of the al-sunan ḥadîth texts narrated it from a ḥadîth of Sufyân. Al-Tirmidhî categorized it as ḥasan.

Imâm Āḥmad stated that Muḥammad b. ‘Abd Allâh related to him, quoting Sufyân, from Ābû al-Zubayr, from ‘A'isha and Ibn ‘Umar, that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) visited it at night.

If this is interpreted as him having postponed it until after the sun had declined, meaning until the evening, then that could be true. But if this is interpreted as referring to after the setting of the sun, then that would be very unlikely, and contrary to what is established in the authentic and well-known ḥadîth which state that he circumambulated the day of the sacrifice during day time and drank from water drawn from zamzam.

The circumambulation for which he went out at night was the tawâf al-wadâ‘, "the (so-called) farewell circumambulation". Some narrators refer to it as the tawâf al-ziyâra, "the visit circumambulation", as we will relate, if God so wills it. Or they refer to it simply as the tawâf ziyâra,125 "visit circumambulation", before the tawâf al-wadâ‘ and after the tawâf al-ṣadar, "the circumambulation of the return from the pilgrimage", that being the tawâf al-fârd, "the circumambulation of the divine ordinance".

There is another ḥadîth that we will quote in its proper place to the effect that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) would visit the ka'ba each of the nights at Minâ, this too is unlikely. But God knows best.

The ḥâfîz al-Bayhaqî related, from a ḥadîth of ‘Amr b. Qays, from ‘Ābd al-Rahmân, from al-Qâsim, from his father, from ‘A'isha, who stated, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) gave permission to his Companions and they visited the ka'ba on the day of the sacrifice at midday, and that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) visited it at night with his wives.”

125. Without the definite article, that is.
This too is a very strange hadith. (Also) there is a statement of Tāwūs and ʿUrwa b. al-Zubayr that, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) postponed the circumambulation on the day of the sacrifice until night time.”

What is authentic from the accounts and what is agreed by the majority, is that he circumambulated on the day of the sacrifice during day time. What is likely is that this was before the sun declined, or perhaps thereafter. But God knows best.

What is well established is that when the Messenger of God (SAAS) arrived in Mecca, he circumambulated the ka'ba seven times while he was mounted. He then went to zamzam where Banū ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalib were serving water to themselves and the people. From it he took a bucket from which he drank. It was then emptied over him.

As Muslim stated, “Muḥammad b. Minḥal al-Dārīr informed us, quoting Ḥumayd al-Tawīl, from Bakr b. ʿAbd Allāh al-Muṣṣant, who heard Ibn ʿAbbās say, while he was sitting with him at the ka'ba, ‘The Prophet (SAAS) arrived on his camel, with Usāma mounted behind himself. They brought a vessel containing nabīḍīḥ;126 he drank from it and gave the remainder to Usāma. He said, ‘You have acted correctly and done well. Continue in this way.’”

Ibn ʿAbbās went on, “And so we do not wish to change what the Messenger of God (SAAS) ordered.”

In an account from Bakr, a bedoulīn asked Ibn ʿAbbās, “How come I see your uncle’s folk pouring milk and honey, while you serve al-nabīḍīḥ? Is this because of your poverty, or your miserliness?” Ibn ʿAbbās then related to him this hadith.

Ahmad stated that Rawḥ related to him, quoting Ḥumayd, from Ḥumayd, from Bakr, from ʿAbd Allāh (who said) that a bedoulīn asked Ibn ʿAbbās, “How come Muṣṣant’s kinsfolk serve water and honey, the family of so-and-so serves milk, while you serve al-nabīḍīḥ? Is this due to your miserliness or your poverty?”

“Ibn ʿAbbās replied, ‘We’re neither miserly nor poor; however, the Messenger of God (SAAS) came to us, Usāma b. Zayd mounted behind himself, and asked to drink. We served him this’ – meaning the nabīḍīḥ – ‘and he drank from it. He said, ‘You have done well. Continue in this way.’”

Ahmad related it, from Rawḥ and Muḥammad b. Bakr, from Ibn Jurayj, from Ḥusayn b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUbayd Allāh b. ʿAbbās, and Daʿūd b. ʿAlī b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAbbās, from Ibn ʿAbbās.

Al-Bukhārī narrated from Iṣḥāq b. Sulaymān, quoting Khalīd, from Khalīd al-Ḥadhdhāʾ, from Ikrima, from Ibn ʿAbbās, (who said) “The Messenger of God (SAAS) came to the watering place and asked to drink. Al-ʿAbbās said, ‘Faḍl, go to your mother and bring something from her for the Messenger of God to drink.’ The latter asked, ‘Give me to drink.’ He (al-ʿAbbās) replied, ‘Messenger of God, they are putting their hands into it.’ He asked, ‘Give me to drink!’ and he drank from it.

126. Here “unfermented date juice”.
“He then went to zamzam while they were serving its water (to the pilgrims) and working in it. He said, ‘Work, for you are engaged in proper work.’ He then said, ‘Were it not that you would be overwhelmed (by people wanting to emulate me) I would also have drawn water by placing the rope on this’—meaning his own shoulder, to which he gestured.”

He (al-Bukhari) also gives a hadith of ‘Aṣim, from al-Sha’bi, that Ibn ‘Abbas said, “I served (water) to the Prophet (ṢAAS), from zamzam, and he drank it while standing.” ‘Aṣim said, “Ikrima swore, ‘That day he rode on nothing but a ba‘ir, “a camel”.’”

In one account the wording is, “on nothing but his nāqa, ‘his (she) camel’.”

Imām Alḥmad stated that Ḥushaym related to him, quoting Yazid b. Abū Ziyād, from Ikrima, from Ibn ‘Abbās (who said) that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) circumambulated the ka‘ba while (mounted) on a camel. He saluted the “black stone” with a staff he had.

He went on, “He came to the watering place and said, ‘Serve me to drink.’ They replied, ‘The people plunge into this; but we will bring you some of it from the ka‘ba.’ He replied, ‘I don’t need that; serve me from what the people drink.’”

Abū Da‘ūd narrated from Musaddad, from Khalīd al-Ṭāḥān, from Yazid b. Abū Ziyād, from Ikrima, from Ibn ‘Abbās, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) arrived while we were drawing water. He circumambulated on his camel.” He went on to narrate the hadith.

Imām Alḥmad stated that Rawḥ and ‘Affān related to him, quoting Ḥammād, from Qays, and ‘Affān stated in his hadith, that Qays informed him, from Mujāhid, who quoted Ibn ‘Abbās as saying, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) came to zamzam. We drew up a bucket for him, and he drank. Then he spat into it, and we poured it into zamzam. After that he said, ‘Were it not that you would be overwhelmed (by people wanting to emulate me) I would draw it out with my own hand.’”

Alḥmad is alone in giving it; its line of transmission meets the criteria of Muslim.

Chapter.

The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) did not repeat the circumambulation between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa a second time, being content with his first. As Muslim related in his sahih collection through Ibn Jurayj, quoting Abū al-Zubayr, who heard Jābir b. ʿAbd Allāh say, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) and his Companions made only one circumambulation between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwa.”

I note that the reference here to “his Companions” is to those who had brought hadis and who were performing the ḥajj al-girān.

It is similarly established in the sahih collection of Muslim that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said to ʿAisha, who had joined the ḥajj to the ‘umra and was therefore performing the hajj al-qirān, “Your circumambulation of the ka'ba and between al-Šafā and al-Marwa (once) suffices for both your hajj and your 'umra.”

Those who support the teaching of Imām Ahmad consider that the statement of Jabir and his companions applies generally, to both those performing the hajj al-tamattu’ and those who are performing the hajj al-qirān. Imām Ahmad, therefore, laid down that for the person performing the hajj al-tamattu’, one circumambulation would suffice for both his hajj and his 'umra even if he had been (out of the state of iḥrām) during the interim.

This is a strange statement, taking literally from the hadith. But God knows best.

Those who accept the teachings of Abū Ḥanīfa regarding the hajj al-tamattu’, and also those of the Malikis and the Shāfi‘is, state that those performing the hajj al-tamattu’ are required to perform two circumambulations (of the ka'ba) and two passages (between al-Šafā and al-Marwa), though the Ḥanafis (alone) extend that rite to those performing the hajj al-qirān as well. This, however, is a rule unique to their school (of law). They maintain that the latter (the qirān) should also perform both (circumambulations), tracing this back to ʿAlī mawqūfan directly to the Prophet (ṢAAS).

We have already spoken on all that with regard to the circumbulation, and have shown that the lines of transmission for that are weak and contradict ahādīth that are categorized as sahih. But God knows best.

Chapter.

The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) then returned to Minā after having performed the al-ṣuḥr prayer at Mecca, as the hadith of Jabir shows. Ibn ʿUmar stated, “He returned and performed the al-ṣuḥr prayer at Minā.”

Muslim narrated both (ahādīth relating to this), as we have given above. It is possible to reconcile between both by that having occurred at Mecca and at Minā. But God knows best.

Ibn Ḥazm discussed this issue, but reached no decisive conclusion about it. And he is to be excused for this, since the accounts considered authentic relating to it are contradictory. But God knows best.

Muḥammad ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. al-Qāsim, from his father, who quoted ʿAisha as saying, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) proceeded on (with the pilgrims) for the rest of that day, when he had performed the al-ṣuḥr prayer. Then he returned to Minā, where he stayed for the nights of ayyām al-tashriq, casting (pebbles) at the mound, when the sun began to decline, seven at each mound, and saying ‘God is Most Great!’ with each one.”

Abū Da’ūd is alone in giving this hadith.

This shows that his proceeding to Mecca on the day of the sacrifice was after the sun began to decline. This contradicts absolutely the hadith of Ibn ʿUmar.
And there is also controversy over his contradiction of the hadith of Jābir. But God knows best.

Chapter.

On that fine day the Messenger of God (SAAS) gave a wonderful address that numerous ahādīth reiterate. We will relate those of them that God, the Almighty and Glorious, so enables us.

Al-Bukhārī gave a section entitled, Chapter on the address made during the days at Mīnā.

He went on to state that ʿAlī b. ʿAbd Allāh related to him, quoting Yahlī b. Saʿīd, quoting Fuṭayl b. Ghazwān, quoting ʿIkrima, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said that the Messenger of God (SAAS) made an address to the people on the day of the sacrifice. He said, “0 people, what day is this?” They replied, “A day that is ḥarām, ‘sacrosanct’.” “And what land is this?” he asked. “A sacrosanct land,” they replied. “And what month is this?” he asked. “A sacrosanct month,” they replied. He then said, “Your blood, your possessions and your honour are sacrosanct for you, like this day of yours in this your land in this your month.”

Ibn ʿAbbās went on, “He repeated this several times. Then, raising his head, he went on, ‘0 God, have I delivered (the message well)? 0 God, I have delivered (the message).’”

Ibn ʿAbbās continued, “By Him in whose hand is my soul, it was his testament to his nation. (He then stated), ‘Let those witnessing this inform those absent. Do not revert into being unbelievers after me, striking the necks of one another!’”

Al-Tirmidhī narrated it from al-Fallas, from Yahlī al-Qaṭṭān. He characterized it as ḥasan sabīb.

Al-Bukhārī also stated that ʿAbd Allāh b. Muhammad related to him, quoting Abū ʿĀmir, quoting Qurra, from Muḥammad b. Sīrīn, quoting ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. Abū Bakr, from his father, and a man more worthy in my view that ʿAbd al-Rahmān Ḥumayd b. ʿAbd al-Rahmān, from Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him, who said, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) made an address to us on the day of the sacrifice. He said, ‘Do you know what day this is?’ We replied, ‘God and His Messenger know best.’ He was silent, so that we thought he was going to give it some different name. He then asked, ‘Is this not the day of the sacrifice?’ ‘Why, yes,’ we replied. ‘And what month is this?’ he asked. ‘God and His Messenger know best,’ we replied. He was silent, so that we thought he was going to give it some different name. He then asked, ‘Is this not Dhū al-Ḥijja?’ ‘Yes indeed,’ we replied. ‘And what land is this?’ he asked. ‘God and His Messenger know best,’ we replied. He was silent so that we thought he was going to change its name. ‘Is this not the sacrosanct land?’ he asked. ‘Yes indeed,’ we replied.

‘He went on, ‘Your blood and your possessions are sacrosanct for you, just as this day of yours is holy for you, in this month of yours, in this land of yours, until the day you meet your Lord. And have I delivered (the message)?’ ‘Yes,’ we replied. He went on, ‘O God, bear witness! Let those present inform those absent; and many who will be informed (of this) will be more conscious than those who hear (it now). Do not revert into being unbelievers after me, striking the necks of one another.’”

Al-Bukhãrî and Muslim narrated it through several lines, from MuHAMMAD b. Sîrîn. Muslim narrated it from a hadith of ‘Abd Allâh b. ‘Awn, from Ibn Sîrîn, from ‘Abd al-Rahmân b. Abû Bakr, from his father. He added at its end, “He then turned aside to two fine rams, both of which he sacrificed. He also (turned towards) a herd of goats and divided them up between us.”

Imâm Ahmad stated that Ismâ’îl related to him, quoting AYYûb, from Muhammad b. Sîrîn, from Abû Bakr, (who said) “The Messenger of God (SAAS) made an address on his hijja, saying, ‘Time has run a course, as was its way the day God created the heavens and the earth. The year has twelve months, of which four are sacrosanct. Three follow one another in succession – Dhût al-Qa’dâ, Dhût al-Hijja and al-MuHarram. And there is Rajab of (Banû) Mu’dar, which is between Jumādâ and Sha’bân.’

“He went on, ‘And what day is this?’ We replied, ‘God and His Messenger know best.’ He was silent, so that we thought he was giving it a different name. He then asked, ‘Is this not the day of the sacrifice?’ We replied, ‘Yes indeed.’ He then asked, ‘What month is this?’ We said, ‘God and His Messenger know best.’ He was silent so that we thought he was giving it a new name. He then asked, ‘Is it not Dhût al-Hijja?’ ‘Yes indeed,’ we replied. Then he asked, ‘What country is this?’ ‘God and His Messenger know best,’ we replied. He was silent, so that we thought he was giving it a new name. Then he asked, ‘Is it not the sacrosanct land?’ We replied, ‘Yes indeed.’ He then said, ‘Your money and your possessions,’ – I think he also said ‘and your honour’ – ‘are sacrosanct for you, as this day of yours is sacrosanct in this your month and this your country. You will meet your Lord and he will question you about your deeds. Do not revert after me into error, striking the necks of one another. Have I delivered (the message well)? Let those witnessing deliver the message to those absent. And perhaps those who are informed will be more conscious of it than some of those who heard it.’”

This is how it occurs in the hadith collection of Imâm Ahmad, from Muhammad b. Sîrîn, from Abû Bakr. Abû Da’ûd narrated it similarly from Musaddad. Al-Nasâ’î gave it from ‘Amr b. Zurâra, both of whom quoted from Ismâ’îl – he being Ibn ‘Uliyya – from AYYûb, from Ibn Sîrîn, from Abû Bakr.

It is interrupted in its line of transmission because both authors of the sahih collections gave it from another route, from AYYûb and others, from MuHAMMAD b. Sîrîn, from ‘Abd al-Rahmân b. Abû Bakr, from his father.

Al-Bukhãrî stated also that Muhammad b. al-Muthannâ related to him, quoting Yazid b. Hârûn, quoting ASIM b. MuHAMMAD b. Zayd, from his father, from Ibn ‘Umar. He said, “The Prophet (SAAS) asked at Minâ, ‘Do you know what day this is?’ They replied, ‘God and His Messenger know best.’ He went on, 'This day is sacrosanct; and do you know what land this is?' They replied, 'God and His Messenger know best.' He went on, 'It is a sacrosanct land.' He asked, 'And do you know what month this is?' They replied, 'God and His Messenger know best.' It is a sacrosanct month,' he said. He went on, 'And God made sacrosanct for you your blood, your possessions and your honour, like he made sacrosanct the nature of this your day in this your month in this your land.'"

Al-Bukhari gave it in various places of his sahih collection, as did the rest of the major scholars, except for al-Tirmidhi, through various routes from Muhammad b. Zayd b. Abdullah b. Umar, from his grandfather, 'Abd Allah b. Umar.

Al-Bukhari (also) stated, "And Hisham b. al-Ghaz stated that Nafi' informed him, from Ibn 'Umar, that the Prophet (SAAS) stood between the pillars on the hijja he made on his pilgrimage and said, 'This is the day of al-hajj al-akbar, "the major pilgrimage". The Prophet (SAAS) then began by declaring, 'O God, bear witness!' He then said farewell to the people and they said, 'This is the hijjat al-wada', "the farewell pilgrimage".'"

Abu Da'ud gave a line of transmission for this hadith from Mu'ammar b. al-Fadl, from al-Walid b. Muslim. Ibn Majah gave it from Hisham b. 'Ammar, from Sadaqa b. Khalid, both of whom quoted from Hisham b. al-Ghaz b. Rabia al-Jarashi Abu al-'Abbas al-Dimashqi.

His standing at the pillars to make this address renders it possible that it was delivered after his casting at the pillar on the day of the sacrifice and before his circumambulation. It is also possible that it was delivered after his circumambulation, his return to Minah and his casting (the stones) at the pillars.

However, the first possibility is strengthened by what al-Nasa'i narrated, when he said that Amr b. Hisham al-Harrani related to him, quoting Muhammad b. Salam, from Abu 'Abd al-Rahman, from Zayd b. Abu Unaysa, from Yahya b. Husayn al-A'masi, from his grandmother Umm Husayn. She stated, "I took part in the hijja of the Prophet (SAAS); I saw Bilal holding the bridle of his camel, while Usama b. Zayd raised a garment above him, sheltering him from the heat, while he was in the ihram state, until he cast at the pillar at al-Aqaba. He then made an address to the people, praising and lauding God and saying many things."

Muslim narrated it from a hadith of Zayd b. Abu Unaysa, from Yahya b. al-Husayn, from his grandmother, Umm al-Husayn. She stated, "I performed the hijjat al-wada' with the Messenger of God (SAAS). I saw Usama and Bilal; one of them was holding the bridle of the Messenger of God (SAAS), while the other raised his garment sheltering him from the heat until he cast (pebbles) at the mound at al-Aqaba."

She went on, "The Messenger of God (SAAS) said many things. I then heard him say, '(Even) if a castrated' - I think he said 'black' - 'slave should become your commander, who leads you with God's Book, then listen to him and obey.’”

Imām ʿĀmad stated that Muḥammad b. ʿUbayd Allāh related to him, quoting al-Aʿmash, from Abū Ṣāliḥ— he being Dhakwān al-Sammān—from Jābir, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) made an address to us on the day of the sacrifice and he said, ‘Which day is the most sacrosanct?’ They replied, ‘This day of ours.’ He asked, ‘Which month is the most sacrosanct?’ They replied, ‘This month of ours.’ He asked, ‘Which land is the most sacrosanct?’ They replied, ‘This land of ours.’ He then said, ‘Your blood and your possessions are sacrosanct for you as this day of yours in this country of yours in this month of yours are sacrosanct. Have I delivered the message successfully?’ ‘Yes,’ they replied. He then said, ‘O God, bear witness.’”

ʿĀmad is alone in giving it with this line; it meets the criteria of the two ṣaḥīḥ collection. Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba narrated it from Abū Muʿāwiyah, from al-ʿAʾmash.

The ḥadīth of Jaʿfar b. Muḥammad is given above, from his father, from Jābir in the address given by the Prophet (ṢAAS), on the day at Mt. ʿArafāt. God knows best.

Ibn Māja narrated it from Hishām b. ʿAmmār, from ʿĪsā b. Yūnus. Its line of transmission meets the criteria of both ṣaḥīḥ collections. But God knows best.

The ḥāfīz Abū Bakr al-Bazzār stated that Abū Hishām related to him, quoting Ḥāfṣ, from al-ʿAʾmash, from Abū Ṣāliḥ, from Abū Hurayrah, and Abū Saʿīd (who said) that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) made an address. He asked, ‘What day is this?’ They replied, ‘A sacrosanct day.’ He said, ‘Your blood and your possessions are sacrosanct for you as this day of yours in this month of yours in this land of yours are sacrosanct.’”

Al-Bazzār went on to state, “Abū Muʿāwiyah narrated it from al-ʿAʾmash, from Abū Ṣāliḥ, from Abū Hurayrah and Abū Saʿīd. Abū Hishām joined both together for us, from Ḥāfṣ b. Ghiyāṯ, from al-ʿAʾmash, from Abū Ṣāliḥ, from Abū Hurayrah and Abū Saʿīd.”

I note that the account given by ʿĀmad from Muḥammad b. ʿUbayd al-Ṭanāfust, from al-ʿAʾmash, from Abū Ṣāliḥ, from Jābir b. ʿAbd Allah, is given above. Perhaps Abū Ṣāliḥ gave it from three (sources).

Hilāl b. Yasāf stated, from Sālama b. Qays al-Ashjaʿi, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said on the ḥijjat al-wadāʾ, ‘They are only four in number; do not associate anything with God; do not kill, for God has forbidden this, unless by the right; do not commit adultery; and do not steal.’”
Salama b. Qays al-Ashja'i went on, “And no one became more careful regarding these four than myself when I heard them from the Messenger of God (SAAS).”

Aḥmad and al-Nasāʾī narrated this from a ḥadīth of Maṃṣūr, from Hilāl b. Yasāf. Sūfīyān b. ʿUayna narrated it similarly, as did al-Thawrī, from Maṃṣūr.

Ibn Ḥaẓm stated on the subject of the ḥijjat al-waḍāʾ that Aḥmad b. ʿUmar b. Anas al-ʿUdhri related to him, quoting Abū Dharr ʿAbd Allāh b. Aḥmad al-Ḥarwi al-ʿAṣṣārī, quoting Aḥmad b. ʿAbdān, the ḥāfiz at al-Ahwāz, quoting Sahl b. Mūsā b. Shīrzhād, quoting Mūsā b. ʿĀsim, quoting Abū al-ʿAwwām, quoting Muḥammad b. Juḥāda, from Ziyād b. ʿAlaqā, from Usāma b. Sharrīk, who said, “I witnessed the Messenger of God (SAAS), on the ḥijjat al-waḍāʾ, while he was delivering an address. He said, ‘Your mother, your father, your sister, your brother and then the closest to you, and the closest to you.’

Some people then came and said, ‘Messenger of God, Banū Yarba‘ attacked us!’ The Messenger of God (SAAS) said, ‘No person should harm any other.’ A man who had forgotten to cast stones at the pillars then asked him what he should do. He replied, ‘So cast the pebbles (now); no matter.’ Another man then came to him and said, ‘Messenger of God, I forgot to circumambulate.’ He replied, ‘So circumambulate (now); no matter.’ Another man came to him who had shaved before he had made sacrifice. He told him, ‘Make sacrifice; no matter.’ And that day whenever anyone asked him anything, he always replied, ‘No matter; no matter!’

“He then said, ‘God may make all problems go away – except for a man who borrows money from a man who is a Muslim; for him there is a problem, and he is ruined.’ He went on, ‘God brought down no disease for which He did not provide a cure – except for senility, that is.’”

Iḥām Aḥmad and the orthodox scholars give some of this text from this line. Al-Tirmidhī stated, “It is ḥasan, saḥīḥ.”

Iḥām Aḥmad stated that Ḥājjāj related to him, quoting Shuʾbā, from ʿAlī b. Mudrik, who said he heard Abū Zurʿa relate from Jarir – who was his grandfather – that the Prophet (SAAS) said on the ḥijjat al-waḍāʾ, “Jarir, listen to the people.” He then said in his address, “Do not revert into unbelievers after me, striking the necks of one another.”

Aḥmad then narrated it from Ghandar, and from Ibn Mahdī, both of whom quoted it from Shuʾbā. Both authors of the saḥīḥ collections gave it from a ḥadīth of Shuʾbā.

Aḥmad stated that Ibn Numayr related to him, quoting Ismāʿīl, from Qays, who said, “We were informed that Jarir stated that the Messenger of God (SAAS) said, ‘Listen to the people. I really do not know, after what I see, (whether) you will revert to being unbelievers, striking the necks of one another.’”

Al-Nasāʾī narrated it from a ḥadīth of ʿAbd Allāh b. Numayr.

Al-Nasāʾī stated that Ḥanīnād b. al-Sarrī related to him, from Abū al-Aḥwāṣ, from Ibn Ghaqrqada, from Sulaymān b. ʿAmr, from his father, who said, “I witnessed the Messenger of God (SAAS), on the ḥijjat al-waḍāʾ, as he said,
‘People!’ He said this three times. ‘What day is this?’ They replied, ‘It is the day of the “greater pilgrimage”.’

“He went on, ‘Your blood, your possessions and your honour are sacrosanct among yourselves as this day of yours in this land of yours is sacrosanct. Let no man do harm to his child. Satan has despairs that he will be worshipped in this your land! However, you will be obedient to him in your performance of some acts you think insignificant, and he will be pleased. All usury of the jahiliyya period is abolished. You have (the right to) your capital only. Do no wrong, and you will not be wronged.’” He proceeded to complete the hadith as above.

Abū Da‘ūd gives a section entitled, Chapter of those who stated, ‘He gives an address on the day of the sacrifice’.

He went on to state that Hārūn b. ʿAbd Allāh related to him, quoting Hishām b. ʿAbd al-Malik, quoting ʿIkrima— he being Ibn ʿAmmār— quoting al-Hīrām b. Ziyād al-Bāhili, who said, “I saw the Messenger of God (SAAS) make an address to the people while on his camel al-ʿAdḥā on the day of the immolation at Mīnā.”

Aḥmad and al-Nāsīrī narrated it from several lines, from ʿIkrima b. ʿAmmār, from al-Hīrām, who said, “My father was mounted behind myself and I saw the Messenger of God (SAAS) making an address to the people at Mīnā on the day of the sacrifice while on his camel al-ʿAdḥā.”

This is the wording of Aḥmad. It is from one of the three volumes of his musnad compendium.

Abū Da‘ūd stated further that Muʿāmmil b. al-Fadl al-Ḥarrānt related to him, quoting al-Walīd, quoting Ibn Jabīr, quoting Sulaym b. ʿAmīr al-Kalāʾī, who said he heard Abū Amāma say, “I heard the address given by the Messenger of God (SAAS), at Mīnā on the day of the sacrifice.”

Imām Aḥmad stated that ʿAbd al-Raḥmān related to him, from Muʿāwiya b. ʿṢāliḥ, quoting Sulaym b. ʿAmīr al-Kalāʾī, who said, “I heard Abū Umāma state, ‘I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS), one day while mounted upon al-Jaḍā’, his feet placed in the stirrups, stretching out so that people would hear. He said at the top of his voice, “Do you not hear?” One man in one of the groups of people asked, “Messenger of God, with what do you charge us?” He replied, “Worship your Lord. Perform your five (prayers). Fast for your month. And obey when you are commanded. (Then) you will enter your Lord’s garden.”’

“I (Sulaym) asked him, ‘Abū Umāma, (how old were you) at that time?’ He replied, ‘At that time I was a man of 30, controlling the camel and urging it forwards towards the Messenger of God (SAAS).’”

Aḥmad also narrated it from Zayd b. al-Ḥubāb, from Muʿāwiya b. ʿṢāliḥ, and al-Tirmidhī gave it from Mūsā b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān al-Kūfī, from Zayd b. al-Ḥubāb. He stated that it was ḥasan saḥīḥ, “good and authentic”.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Abū al-Mughīṭra related to him, quoting Ismāʿīl b. ʿAbbās, quoting Shuʿrāḥbīl b. Muslim al-Khawlānī who stated that he heard Abū Umāma al-Bāhili say, “I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say in his address on the year of the hijjat al-wada’, ‘God has given to each worthy man his due, and so there is no testamentary inheritance for an heir. The child applies to the bed (to the parents). For the adulteress there is the stone, and their reckoning is with God. Anyone making a claim to anyone but his father or claims an association with any patron not his own, upon him shall be God’s curse that shall follow him till Judgement Day. A woman may not expend from her household (funds) except with the permission of her husband.’

“Someone asked him, ‘Messenger of God, not even for food?’ He replied, ‘That is the best of our possessions.’ He then went on to say, ‘Things borrowed must be returned.’”

The scholars of the four orthodox schools narrated it from a hadith of Ismā’īl b. ‘Ayyāsh. Al-Tirmidhī categorized it as hasan, “good”.

Abū Dā’ūd, may God have mercy upon him, then gave a section entitled, Section on when he makes an address on the day of the sacrifice.

He went on to state that ʿAbd al-Wahhāb b. ʿAbd al-Rahīm al-Dimashqī related to him, quoting Marwān, from Hilāl b. ʿAmīr al-Muzantī, quoting Rāfīʾ b. ʿAmr al-Muzantī, who said, “I saw the Messenger of God (SAAS) make an address to the people at Minā when dawn arose. He was mounted on a grey she-mule. ʿAlī was speaking on his behalf. Some of the people there were standing, others were seated.”

Al-Nasaʾī narrated it from Duḥaym, from Marwān al-Fazārī.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Abū Muḥāwiya related to him, quoting Hilāl b. ʿAmīr al-Muzantī, from his father, who said, “I saw the Messenger of God (SAAS) making an address to the people at Minā on a she-mule, wearing a red cloak. And there was a man who had participated in the battle of Badr in front of him speaking on his behalf. I then advanced and placed my hand between his foot and his shoelace. I was surprised at how cool it (his foot) was.”

Imām Aḥmad stated that Muhammad b. ʿUbayd related to him, quoting a sheikh of Banū Fazārā, from Hilāl b. ʿAmīr al-Muzantī, who quoted his father as saying, “I saw the Messenger of God (SAAS), mounted upon a grey she-mule; ʿAlī was speaking on his behalf.”

Abū Dāʾūd narrated it from a hadith of Abū Muḥāwiya, from Hilāl b. ʿĀmir.

Abū Dāʾūd went on to give a chapter entitled, Section on what the Imām refers to in his address at Minā.

He then stated that Musaddād related to him, quoting ʿAbd al-Wārith, from Ḥumayd al-ʿArāj, from Muḥammadm b. ʿIbrāhīm al-Taymī, from ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Muḥādh al-Taymī, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) made an address to us while we were at Minā. Our hearing was so accentuated that we could hear what he was saying while we were in our dwellings. He started off by instructing them on their rites, until he reached the (method of stoning) the pillars, at which point he raised both index fingers. Thereafter he gave orders to the muhājirin and they positioned themselves at the front of the mosque. He gave orders to the ansār and they went behind the mosque. (The rest of) the people took their places thereafter.”

Ahmad narrated it from ʿAbd al-Ṣamad b. ʿAbd al-Wārith, from his father. Al-Nasaʿi gave it from a hadith of Ibn al-Mubarak, from ʿAbd al-Wārith in similar form.

Hereabove is given the account of Imam Ahmad, from ʿAbd al-ʿRazzāq, from Maʿmar, from Muḥammad b. Ibrāhīm al-Taymī, from ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Muʿādh, from a man who was one of the Companions. God knows best.

It is established in both saḥīh collections, from a hadith of Ibn Jurayj, from al-Zuhri, from ʿIsā b. Ṭalha, from ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAmr b. al-ʿĀṣ (who said). “While the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was making an address to us on the day of the sacrifice, a man got up and said to him, ‘I used to think that this-and-that was before so-and-such.’ Another man then arose and said, ‘I used to think that this-and-that was before this.’ The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) responded, ‘Do it (thus). No matter.’”

Both compilers of the saḥīh collections gave it from a hadith of Mālik. Muslim added, “and Yūnus, from al-Zuhri”. He gives many variations, but this is not the right place to scrutinize them. The correct place is (my) work Kitāb al-ʿAḥkām.

From God help is to be sought.

In the wording of both saḥīh collections, he stated, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was not that day asked about anything relating (to the sequence of the ṭaʿaffūd) without him responding, ‘Do it; no matter.’”

Chapter.

The Prophet (ṢAAS) then stopped at Minā where the mosque is today, so it is said. He positioned the muhājirin to his right and the ansār to his left, with the rest of the people thereafter around them.

The ḥāfīz al-Bayhaqī stated that ʿAbd Allāh al-Ḥāfīz informed him that ʿAlī b. Muḥammad b. ʿUqba al-Shaybānī of al-ʿUkṣa (related to him) quoting Ibrāhīm b. Ishāq al-Zuhri, quoting ʿUbayd Allāh b. Mūsā, quoting Ṣaʿdīl, from Ibrāhīm b. Muḥājir, from Yūsuf b. Māhik, from Umm Musayka, from ʿAʾisha, who said, “Someone asked the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), ‘Should we not construct for you at Minā a building to shade you?’ He replied, ‘No; Minā was a residence of former people.’”

This line of transmission is not bad; however, it is not in al-Musnad, nor in the six canonical collections of traditions from this line.

Abū Daʿūd stated that Abū Bakr Muḥammad b. Khallād al-Bāhili related to him, quoting Yahyā, from Ibn Jurayj, quoting Ḥarīz – or Abū Ḥarīz, the doubt stems from Yahyā – who stated that he heard ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Farrūkh ask Ibn ʿUmar, “When we do business (during the ḥiṣa) with the people’s goods and one of us happens to be in Mecca, is he allowed to spend the night there (or should he return to Mina)?’ He replied, ‘The Messenger of God (SAAS) overnighted at Minâ and went on doing so.’

Abû Da‘îd is alone in giving this.

Abû Da‘îd went on to state that Uthmân b. Abû Shayba related to him, quoting Ibn Numayr and Abû Usâma, from Ubayd Allâh, from Nâfî’, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said, ‘Al-ʿAbbâs asked permission of the Messenger of God (SAAS), to stay in Mecca for the nights (one is supposed to spend) at Minâ because of (his role in) providing the water for the pilgrims; he gave him permission.’

Al-Bukhârî traced it from Abû Usâma and ʿUqba b. Khâlid, all of them quoting Ubayd Allâh b. ʿUmar.

At Minâ the Messenger of God (SAAS) would shorten (the daily prayers of four rakaʿât) to two rakaʿât, as is established in both sahîh collections from a hadith of Ibn Mas‘ûd and Jâriîa b. Wahb, may God be pleased with them both.

This is why a number of scholars of the Mâlikî school, maintain that the shortening (of the daily prayers, where applicable, to just two rakaʿât) was part of the rites of the hajj. They say, ‘Regarding those who state that the Messenger of God (SAAS) used at Minâ to say to the people of Mecca, ‘Complete (the prayer as normal); we (shorten our prayer because) we are a people who are travelling.’’ But these people are mistaken; the Messenger of God (SAAS) only said this in the year of the conquest (of Mecca) while he was staying at al-Abtah, as we have stated hereabove. But God knows best.

The Messenger of God (SAAS) used to cast stones at the three pillars every day of those he spent at Minâ, after the sun had declined, as Jâbir related above. He would do so on foot, as Ibn ʿUmar stated heretofore, casting seven stones saying, ‘God is most Great!’ with each one. He would, moreover, stop and pray at the first and the second and pray to God, Almighty and Glorious is He, but he would not stop at the third.

Abû Da‘îd stated that ʿAli b. Bahr related to him, as did ʿAbd Allâh b. Saʿîd al-Mâ‘nî, who both stated that Abû Khâlid al-Aḥmar related to them, from Muḥammad b. Isḥâq, from ʿAbd al-Râhîmân b. al-Qâsim, from his father, who quoted ʿA’isha as saying, ‘The Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the ṭawâf al-ifîda at the end of his day when he performed the al-zuhr prayer. He then returned to Minâ and stayed there for the nights of the ayyâm al-tashriq, casting (stones) at the pillar when the sun began to decline, seven pebbles at each pillar, and saying ‘God is most Great!’ with each one. He stood and performed prayers at the first and the second, standing at both at length and making humble entreaties to God. At the third he cast (stones) without standing at it.’’

Abû Da‘îd is alone in giving it.
Al-Bukhari narrated from more than one line, from Yūnus b. Yazīd, from al-Zuhri, from Sālim, from Ibn Ūmar, that the latter would cast seven pebbles at the lower pillar, saying “God is most Great!” after each one. He then would go forwards and stand on level ground at length facing the qibla, praying and raising his hands. After that he would cast stones at the middle pillar, move to the north and then stand at length, on level ground, facing the qibla, praying with his hands raised. Thereafter, he would cast (stones) at the big pillar, from the middle of the wādi, but he would not stand at it. Then he would move away, saying, ‘It was thus that I saw the Messenger of God, God’s peace and blessings be upon him, do it.’"

Wabra b. ‘Abd al-Ra’ūlīn stated, “Ibn Ūmar stopped at al-‘Aqaba long enough to recite the surat al-Baqara (II).” Abu Mijlaz stated, “I estimated his stopping there to be long enough to recite surat Yūsuf (XII).”

Al-Bayhaqi gave both of these comments.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Sufyān b. ‘Uyayna related to him, from ‘Abd Allāh b. Abū Bakr, from his father, from Abū al-Qaḍāḥ, from his father, that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) gave permission to the shepherds that they cast (stones) on one day and graze their flocks for a day.

Aḥmad stated that Muḥammad b. Abū Bakr related to him, and that Rawḥ informed him, quoting Ibn Jurayj, quoting Muḥammad b. Abū Bakr b. Muḥammad b. ‘Amr, from his father, from Abū al-Qaḍāḥ b. ‘Āṣim b. ‘Adī, from his father, that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) gave permission to the shepherds to act consecutively and to cast stones on the day of the sacrifice. They would then pray for a day and a night and cast stones on the following day.

Imām Aḥmad stated that ‘Abd al-Ra’ūlīn related to him, quoting Malik, from ‘Abd Allāh b. Bakr, from his father, from Abū al-Qaḍāḥ b. ‘Āṣim b. ‘Adī, from his father (who said) that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) gave permission to the camel herdsmen to overnight at Mīnā until they (could) cast stones on the day of the sacrifice. After having done this, they would also cast stones on the next day, or on the day thereafter, for two days. And they would then cast stones on the yawm al-nafr, “the day of the return from Mīnā”.

He narrated it similarly from ‘Abd al-Razzāq, from Malik. The scholars of the al-sunan texts narrate it from the ḥadīth of Malik, and from that of Sufyān b. ‘Uyayna. Al-Tirmidhī stated, “The account of Malik is more authentic; it is a ḥadīth that is ṣaḥīḥ.”

Chapter: Aḥādīth showing that the Prophet (ṢAAS) made an address to the people on the second, the middle that is, day of the ayyām al-tashriq.

Abū Dā’ūd gave a section entitled, Chapter regarding which day it was that he made an address to the people.

He went on to state that Muḥammad b. al-‘Alā’ related to him, quoting Ibn al-Mubārak, from Ibrāhīm b. Nafīs, from Ibn Abū Najīḥ, from his father, from two men of Banū Bakr, both of whom stated, “We saw the Messenger of God (SAAS) make an address around the middle of the days of the ayyām al-tashriq; we were close by his camel. This was the address he made at Minā.”

Abū Dā‘ūd is alone in giving this.

Abū Dā‘ūd then stated that Muḥammad b. Bashshār related to him, quoting Abū ʿĀṣim, quoting Rabīʿa b. ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. Ḥuṣayn, quoting his great-grandmother Sarraʾ, daughter of Nabān, who had headed a household before the coming of ʿĪsām. She said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) made an address to us on the yawn al-rūʿūs, the day of the heads. He (Rabīʿa) asked, ‘And what day is that?’ We stated, ‘God and His Messenger know best!’ He asked, ‘Is that not the middle day of the ayyām al-tashriq?’”

Abū Dā‘ūd was alone in giving this.

Abū Dā‘ūd went on, “The uncle of Abū Ḥurrat al-Raqaṣhī stated that he made the address on the middle day of the ayyām al-tashriq.”

Imām ʿAḥmad narrated this hadith with a fully connected line of transmission and at length. He stated that Uthmān related to him, quoting ʿUmmād b. Saʿlāma, quoting ʿAlī b. Zayd, from Abū Ḥurrat al-Raqaṣhī, from his uncle, who said, “I was holding the reins of the camel of the Messenger of God (SAAS), in the middle of the days of the ayyām al-tashriq, keeping the people away from him. He said, ‘O people, do you know on which day of which month and in which land you are?’ They replied, ‘On a sacrosanct day, of a sacrosanct month, in a sacrosanct land.’ He went on, ‘Your blood, your possessions and your honour are sacrosanct for you, as is this your day, in this your month, in this your land, on until you meet Him.’” He went on, ‘Listen to me and live. Do not do wrong! Do not do wrong! Do not do wrong! The property of a Muslim is not permitted to you, except by his wish. All blood, money and deeds done in the jahiliyya are (crushed) beneath these feet of mine until Judgement Day. The first blood debt abolished is that of Ibn Rābiʿa b. al-Ḥārith b. ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalib – he was fostered among Banū Saʿd, and Hudhayl killed him. All the usury charges of the jahiliyya are abolished. God has decreed that the first usury charges to be abolished are those of al-ʿAbbās b. ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalib. Your capital is your own; do not do wrong and you will not be wronged.’

‘Time has revolved as was its fashion the day God created the heavens and the earth.’ He then recited, ‘The number of the months with God is twelve months in God’s ordinance since the day He created the heavens and the earth. Of these four are sacrosanct. That is the correct reckoning. Therefore do not harm yourselves regarding them’ (sūrat al-Tawbah (al-Barāʾa); IX, v.36). ‘Do not revert after me into unbelievers, striking the necks of one another. Satan has despaired that those who pray will worship him. However, he is present in the dissent between yourselves.

‘Fear God in (your relationships) with women. They are (as) captives with you. They own nothing but themselves. They have rights over you, and you have rights over them – that they not allow anyone other than yourselves to set foot in your furnishings, and that they not give permission (to anyone you dislike) to enter your homes. If you fear those of them who are fractious, then admonish them and leave them in the beds and strike them, but not viciously. They have rights to their provisions and their clothing, in kindness. It was only by God's covenant that you took them; and it is by God's word that you are permitted access to their sexual organs. And whoever has a covenant should discharge it to whomever entrusted it to him.'

"He then spread out his hands and said, 'Have I delivered the message? Have I delivered the message?' He went on, 'Let those witnessing inform those absent. Many of those who are informed are happier than those who hear.'"

Humayd stated that when these words reached al-Hasan he commented, "They have indeed delivered the message to peoples who were happier by it."

Abu Da'ud narrated an account in the Kitab al-Nikah chapter of his work al-Sunan, from Mūsā b. Ismā'il, from Ḥammād b. Salama, from ʿAlī b. Zayd b. Jadān, from Abū Ḥurrat al-Raqqāshī – his given name being Ḥanifa – from his uncle, that makes some reference to the "women who are fractious" (in the above hadith).

Ibn Hazm stated, "It is said that the Prophet (ṢAAS) made an address on the yawm al-ruwaṣ, that being the second day, following the day of the sacrifice, as the Meccans do not dispute. It is said also that this is the awsat, 'the middle', of the ayyām al-tashriq. It is likely that the word awsat is being used here in the sense of ashrat, "most noble", as in the words of God Almighty, "And likewise we have made of you a nation that is awsat, 'most noble'" (ṣūrat al-Baqara; II, v.143).

This view adopted by Ibn Hazm is implausible. But God knows best.

The ḥāfiz Abū Bakr al-Bazzār stated that al-Walid b. ʿAmr b. Miskīn related to him, quoting Abū Ḥammām Muḥammad b. al-Zabraqān, quoting Mūsā b. ʿUbayda, from ʿAbd Allah b. Dīnār and Ṣadāqa b. Yāsār from ʿAbd Allah b. ʿUmar, who said, "This sūrat was revealed to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), at Minā during the awsat of the ayyām al-tashriq, on the hijjat al-wadāc 'When God's help and the victory came' (ṣūrat al-Naṣr, CX, v.1). He knew that it was the farewell, and he ordered that his camel al-Qaṣwā be brought. It was saddled for him and he mounted it and stood for the people at al-Ṭaqaba. There assembled around him as many of the Muslims as God wished. He gave appropriate praise and thanks to God and then he said, 'To proceed: O people! All blood debts of the jahiliyya are made null and void; the first blood debt so rendered is that of Ibn Rabīʿa b. al-Ḥārith – who was sucked among the Banū Layth and killed by Hudhayl. All usury of the jahiliyya is abolished. The first such usury abolished is that of al-ʿAbbas b. ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalib.

"O people! Time has revolved as is its fashion (since) the day God created the skies and the earth. The number of the months with God is twelve, of which four are sacrosanct. (These are) Rajab of (Banū) Muḍar that is between Jumādā and Shaʿbān, Dhū al-Qaʿda, Dhū al-Ḥijja and al-Muḥarram. "That is the correct faith; do not wrong yourselves in them” (sūrat al-Tawba; IX, v.36). And “al-nas‘, ‘intercalation’, is an excess of disbelief; by it those who disbelieve are led astray. One year they make it permissible and another year they make it prohibited, in order to conform (outwardly) with the number that God made sacred” (sūrat al-Tawba; IX, v.37). One year they would make Ṣafar ḥalāl and another year they would make al-Muḥarram ḥarām. One year they would make Ṣafar ḥarām and another they would make al-Muḥarram ḥalāl. That is al-nas‘, ‘intercalation’.

“O people, those having deposits should award them to those who entrusted them with them. 0 people, Satan has despaired that he will be worshipped in your land till the end of time. Yet he may be pleased with you, by (your) despicable acts. Beware of him (harming) your religion by despicable acts. O people! Women are (as) captives with you. You took them with God’s covenant and you are permitted access to their sexual organs by God’s word. You have rights over them and they have rights over you. One of your rights you have over them is that they not allow others than yourselves to set foot upon your furnishings. And they should not disobey you in (your) permissible requests. If they so obey, then you have no right to (chastise them). They are due their food and their clothing in kindness. If you strike (them), then do so without viciousness. No man should have access to his brother’s funds, unless with his goodwill. O people! I have left among you that with which, if you adopt it, you will not go astray, the Book of God; behave by it.

“O People! What day is this?” They replied, ‘A sacrosanct day.’ He said, ‘What land is this?’ They replied, ‘A sacrosanct land.’ He asked, ‘What month is this?’ They replied, ‘A sacrosanct month.’ He said, ‘God has made sacrosanct your blood, your possessions and your honour, just as this day in this land and this month are sacrosanct. Let those of you who witness inform those of you who are absent. There will be no prophet after me, and no nation after you.’ He then raised his hands and said, ‘O God, bear witness!’”

REFERENCES TO A HADITH IN WHICH IT IS STATED THAT THE MESSENGER OF GOD (ṢAAS) WOULD VISIT THE KA’BA EVERY NIGHT OF THOSE AT MINA.

Al-Bukhārī stated, “It is recounted from Abū Ḥassān from Ibn ʿAbbās, that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) would visit the ka’ba during the days at Minā.”

He related it thus, with a comment that it was a weak tradition.

The ḥāfiz al-Bayhaqi stated that Abū al-Ḥasan b. ʿAbdān informed him, quoting Ahmad b. ʿUbayd al-Ṣaffār, quoting al-ʿUmārī, quoting Ibn ʿArāra, who said, “Muʿādh b. Ḥishām presented us a document, saying, ‘I heard it from my father; he did not read it.’ He went on, ‘In it it states, “from Qatāda, from Abū Ḥassān, from Ibn ʿAbbās (who said) that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) would visit the ka’ba every night for so long as he was at Minā.” He commented, ‘I never saw anyone agree with him over this.’”
Al-Bayhaqi stated that al-Thawri narrated in the book al-jami‘, from Ibn Tawus, from Tawus, from Ibn ‘Abbas (who said) “The Messenger of God (SAAS) would perform the circumambulation (of the ka'ba) every night” – those at Minā, that is. This hādith is mursal.

Chapter.

The sixth day of Dhū al-Ḥijja, according to some, is said to have been known as the ya’um al-zina, “the day for decoration”, because on it the sacrificial camels would be adorned with garlands and other things.

The seventh day is known as the ya’um al-tarwiyya, “the day for the provisioning with water”, because on it they refresh themselves with the water and carry away what they need of it for the al-wuqūf, “the stationing” (at ‘Arafāt), and thereafter.

The eighth day is known as ya’um Minā, “the day at Minā”, because pilgrims proceed then from al-Abtaḥ to Minā.

The ninth day is known as ya’um ‘Arafāt, “the day at Mt. ‘Arafāt”, because they stand upon it that day.

The tenth day is known as ya’um al-nahr, “the day of the sacrifice”, and ya’um al-‘aḏhān, “the day of the immolation”, and as ya’um al-ḥajj al-akbaru, “day of the greater ḥajj”.

The day following that is known as ya’um al-qarr, “the day of rest”, since on that day pilgrims rest. It is also known as ya’um al-ruṭūs, “the day of the heads”, because on that day they eat the heads of the animals sacrificed. It is the first of the ayyām al-tashriq.

The second day of the ayyām al-tashriq is known as the ya’um al-nafir al-awwal, “the first day of the departure”, because it is permissible to leave on it. It is also said to refer to the day known as the ya’um al-ruṭūs.

The third day of the ayyām al-tashriq is known as the ya’um al-nafir al-‘akhir, “the other day of the departure”. God Almighty stated, “Those who hasten away in two days shall not be considered sinful; and those who remain behind are not considered sinful” (sūrat al-Baqara; II, v.203).

On the ya’um al-nafir, the third day of the ayyām al-tashriq, that being a Tuesday, the Messenger of God (SAAS) and the Muslims with him got upon their mounts. He departed with them from Minā and stopped at al-Muḥāṣṣab, a wādī between Mecca and Minā. There he performed the al-‘asr prayer.

It is also narrated that the Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the al-zuhr prayer on the yawm al-nafr at al-Abtaḥ; that is al-Muḥāṣṣab. But God knows best.

Al-Bukhari (also) stated that ʿAbd al-Muttaʿal b. Ṭalib related to him, quoting Ibn Wabh, quoting ʿAmr b. al-Ḥārith, (who said) that Qatāda related to him that Anas b. Mālik related to him that, “The Prophet (SAAS) performed the al-zuhr, the al-ʿaṣr, the al-maghrib and the al-ʿishā prayers and laid down to rest at al-Muḥāṣṣab, rode to the kaʿba and circumambulated it.”

I note that he is referring to the tawāf al-wadā, the farewell circumabulation (after completion of the ḥiḍa).

Al-Bukhari stated that ʿAbd Allâh b. ʿAbd al-Wahhab related to him, quoting Khalīd b. al-Ḥārith, who said, “ʿAbd Allâh was asked about al-Muḥāṣṣab and so Ḥubayd Allâh related to us, from Nafiʾ, who said, ‘The Messenger of God (SAAS) stayed there, as did ʿUmar and Ibn ʿUmar.’”

And from Nafiʾ (it is narrated that), “Ibn ʿUmar would pray there – meaning al-Muḥāṣṣab – for the al-zuhr and the al-ʿaṣr prayers. I think he said, ‘and the al-maghrib prayer.’” Khalīd b. al-Ḥārith stated, “I have no doubt about the al-ʿishā prayer. He would then lie down and sleep; and he would narrate that about the Prophet (SAAS).”

Imām Aḥmad stated that Nūḥ b. Maymūn related to him, quoting ʿAbd Allâh, from Nafiʾ, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said that the Messenger of God (SAAS), Abū Bakr, ʿUmar and ʿUthmān stayed at al-Muḥāṣṣab.

I saw it thus in the musnad of Imām Aḥmad, from a ḥadīth of ʿAbd Allâh al-ʿUmari, from Nafiʾ.

Al-Tirmidhi stated, “And on this subject (there are ahādīth) from ʿAʿisha, Abū Raʾf and Ibn ʿAbbās. The ḥadīth of Ibn ʿUmar is ḥasan gharib. And we only know it from a ḥadīth of ʿAbd al-Razzāq, from Ḥubayd Allâh b. ʿUmar.”

Muslim narrated it from Muḥammad b. Māhrān al-Rāzī, from ʿAbd al-Razzāq, from Maʿīmar, from Ayyūb, from Nafiʾ, from Ibn ʿUmar (who said) that the Messenger of God (SAAS), Abū Bakr and ʿUmar would stay at al-Abtaḥ.

Muslim also narrated it from a ḥadīth of Ṣakhir b. Juwayriyya, from Nafiʾ, from Ibn ʿUmar, (who said) that he would stay at al-Muḥāṣṣab, and that he would perform the al-zuhr prayer on the yawm al-nafr at al-Ḥasaba.

Nafiʾ stated that the Messenger of God (SAAS) stayed at al-Muḥāṣṣab, and that the caliphs did so after him.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Yūnus related to him, quoting Ḥammād – meaning Ibn Salama – from Ayyūb and Ḥumayd, from Bakr b. ʿAbd Allâh, from Ibn ʿUmar, (who said) “The Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the al-zuhr, the al-ʿaṣr, the al-maghrib and the al-ʿishā prayers at al-ʻAbtaḥ and he then slept. Thereafter he entered” – meaning Mecca – “and circumambulated the kaʿba.”
Abū ʿAbdullāh (also) narrated it from ʿAffān, from Ḥammād, from Ḥumayd, from Bakr, from Ibn ʿUmar.

At the end of this hadith he added, "Ibn ʿUmar would do this."

Abū Daʿūd narrated it like this from Abū ʿAffān, Ibn ʿAlīn, from ʿAlīn, from ʿAbdullāh b. ʿAmr b. ʿUthmān, who said, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said that as from tomorrow, the day for the sacrifice at Miʿād, (they would stay in the khayf): ‘Tomorrow we will stay at the khayf of Banū Kināna, where they pledged disbelief to one another.’" By this he was referring to al-Muḥāṣṣab.

Muslim narrated it from Zuhayr b. Ḥarb, from al-Walīd b. Muslim, from al-Awzāʿī. He related it the same.

Imām ʿAbd al-Razzāq related to him, quoting Maʿmar, from al-Zuhārī, from ʿAlī b. al-Ḥusayn, from ʿAmr b. ʿUthmān, from Usāma b. Zayd, who said, "I asked the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), ‘Where will you stay tomorrow?’ This was on his hijja. He replied, ‘Has ʿĀqil left us anywhere to stay?’ He then said, ‘Tomorrow, if God wills it, we will stay at the khayf of Banū Kināna’ - meaning al-Muḥāṣṣab - ‘where they made a pact of unbelief with Quraysh.’"

This referred to how Banū Kināna made a pact with Quraysh regarding Banū Ḥāshim - that they would not intermarry, nor ally with them, nor accommodate them - until the latter had delivered over to them the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), that is.

He (the Prophet ṢAAS) went on to say, "Muslims shall not inherit from unbelievers, nor unbelievers from Muslims."

Al-Zuhārī stated that the word al-khayf meant al-wādi, "the dry river bed".

They (the authors of the two sahīh collections) both gave it from a hadith of ʿAbd al-Razzāq.

These two aḥādith provide evidence that the Prophet (ṢAAS) planned to stay at al-Muḥāṣṣab to spite them for the agreement the Quraysh unbelievers had made when they signed the pact to boycott Banū Ḥāshim and Banū al-Muṭṭalib until they delivered over to them the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), as we have explained above in the appropriate place.

He similarly stayed there in the year of the conquest (of Mecca). His having stayed there therefore constitutes a sunna to be emulated. This is one of the two comments made by the scholars.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Abū Naʿīm related to him, quoting Sufyān, from Hishām b. Urwa, from his father, from ʿAisha, who said, "The Prophet (ṢAAS) only stayed there since it would be more convenient for his departure." This reference was to al-ʿAbṭah.

127. Al-Zuhārī is quoted hereafter as interpreting this obscure word to mean wādi, "dry river bed".
Muslim gave it from a hadith of Hashim. Abu Dā'ūd narrated it from Aḥmad b. Ḥanbal, from Yahyā b. Sa'īd, from Hishām, from his father, from ʿAmīsha who said, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) only stayed at al-Muḥaṣṣab so that it would be more convenient for his departure. It is not a sunna. Staying there is a matter of personal preference."

Al-Bukhārī stated that ʿAlī b. ʿAbd Allāh related to him, quoting Sufyān, who said, "ʿAmr stated, quoting ʿAtaʾ from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, "Al-Taḥṣib is nothing (of importance); it is just somewhere the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) stayed."

Muslim narrated it from Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba, and others from Sufyān, the latter being Ibn ʿUyayna.

Abū Dāʾūd stated that Aḥmad b. Ḥanbal, ʿUthmān b. Abū Shayba al-Maʿnī and Musaddad stated that Sufyān related to them, quoting Sālīḥ b. Kaysān, from Sulaymān b. Yaṣār, who said, "Abū Rāfīʾ stated, 'He'—meaning the Messenger of God (ṢAAS)—'did not order me to stay there. However, his pavilion was pitched and so he did stay there.'"

Abū Dāʾūd quoted Musaddad as stating, "He was in charge of the baggage of the Prophet (ṢAAS)." Abū Dāʾūd also quoted ʿUthmān as stating that this (place) reference was to al-ʿAbṭaḥ.

Muslim narrated it from Qutayba, Abū Bakr and Zuhayr b. Ḥarb from Sufyān b. ʿUyayna.

The outcome of the above is that all of these are agreed that the Prophet (ṢAAS) did stay at al-Muḥaṣṣab when he left from Minā. However, they do differ somewhat. Some (scholars) maintain that he had not actually planned to stay there but had done so by chance and for the conveneince of his departure. Others interpret his words to imply his having stayed there intentionally. This is more likely.

That is because the Prophet (ṢAAS) ordered people that they spend their last time there at the kaʿba; before that they would leave from all parts, as Ibn ʿAbbās stated. And so he ordered people that their last time there should be at the kaʿba—this reference being to the tawāf al-wadāʾ "the farewell circumambulation". The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) wanted himself and those Muslims there with him to perform the tawāf al-wadāʾ. He had departed from Minā at around noon and had not been able to come to the kaʿba for the rest of that day, to circumambulate it and travel on into the outskirts of Mecca on the Medina side, since that would have been impossible for so numerous a throng. And so he needed to spend the night near Mecca.

There was no place more appropriate for him to stay than al-Muḥaṣṣab, where Quraysh had made a pact against Banū Ḥāshim and Banū al-Muṭṭalib. But God did not fulfill anything for Quraysh, but crushed and defeated them instead, making His religion dominant, aiding His Prophet and enhancing his influence. God fulfilled for him the true religion and through him made clear the straight path.
And so he went on pilgrimage with the people and made clear to them God’s rites and regulations. He had made his departure after having completed the rituals and then stayed in that place where Quraysh had sworn a pact for evil, aggression and boycott. There he performed the prayers for the al-ṣuḥr, the al-ṣaːr, the al-muḥrīb and the al-ʿiṣāːl and then he went to sleep.

He had dispatched ʿAʾisha, “mother of the Believers”, along with her brother ʿAbd al-Raḥmān, to perform the al-ʿumrā from al-Tanʾim and to come to him after finishing. When she had completed her ʿumrā and returned, he gave permission to the Muslims to proceed to the ancient kāʾba.

As Abū Daʿūd stated, “Wahb b. Baqiyya related to me, quoting Khālīd, from Aflāḥ, from al-Qāsīm, from ʿAʾisha, who said, ‘I declared myself in a state of ihram for the ʿumrā from al-Tanʾim, entered Mecca and performed it. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) waited for me at al-Abtaːl until I had finished and then ordered the people to set off. He went to the kāʾba, circumambulated it and left.’”

Both (authors of the saḥīḥ collections) included it, from a ḥadīth of Aflāḥ b. Ḥumayd.

Abū Daʿūd stated, “Ibn Bashshār mentioned her having been sent to al-Tanʾim. She said, “I then came (back shortly) before daybreak. He gave his Companions permission to depart and did so himself. He passed by the kāʾba before the al-ṣuḥb prayer. When he left, he circumambulated it and proceeded off to Medina.”

Al-Bukhārī narrated it from Muḥammad b. Bashshār.

I observe that it is clear that the Prophet (ṢAAS) performed the al-ṣuḥb prayer with his Companions that day at the kāʾba. In that prayer of his, he recited, “By Mt. al-Ṭūr and a book inscribed on a stretched leather! By the inhabited house and the raised roof! And by the swelling sea” (sūrat al-Ṭūr, L.II, v.1–6).

This (conclusion) stems from what al-Bukhārī narrated. He stated that Iṣmāʾīl related to him, quoting Malik, from Muḥammad b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Nawfal, from ʿUrwa b. al-Zubayr, from Zaynab, daughter of Abū Salama, from Umm Salama, the wife of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), who said, “I complained to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), telling him I was in pain. He replied, ‘Circumambulate at the rear of the people, while mounted.’ I did so while he was praying that day beside the kāʾba and reciting, ‘By Mt. al-Ṭūr and a book inscribed . . . ’”

The rest of the scholars of the aḥadith, except for al-Tirmidhi, gave it from a ḥadīth of Malik, with a similar line of transmission.

Al-Bukhārī narrated it from a ḥadīth of Hishām b. ʿUrwa, from his father, from Zaynab, from Umm Salama, to the effect that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was at Mecca and wished to leave; however, Umm Salama had not yet circumambulated but wanted to leave. He then told her, “When the al-$ubh prayer is being performed, circumambulate on your camel while the people are praying.” He then gave the rest of the hadith.

Imām Ahmad narrated that Abū Mu‘āwiya related to him, quoting Hishām b. Urwa, from his father, from Zaynab, daughter of Abū Salama, from Umm Salama, who said that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), “ordered her to circumambulate at Mecca with him at the time of the al-$ubh prayer on the day of the sacrifice”.

This obviously has a line of transmission that meets the criteria of both sahih collections. However, no one (else) gave it with this terminology from this line. Perhaps this is because of the words “the day of the sacrifice” – an error from the narrator or from the copyist. In fact it was the yawm al-nafr, “the day of the departure”. This is substantiated by the account we have given above from al-Bukhārī. But God knows best.

The outcome of this is that when the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had completed the al-$ubh prayer, he performed seven circumambulations of the ka’ba and stood at the al-multazam that is between the corner bearing the “black stone” and the door of the ka’ba. He said a prayer to God, the Almighty and Glorious, and pressed his body close to the ka’ba.

Al-Thawri stated, from al-Muthannā b. al-Ṣabbāh, from ‘Amr b. Shu‘ayb, from his father, who quoted his grandfather as saying, “I saw the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) press his face and his chest to the al-multazam.”

Al-Muthannā is a weak source.

Chapter.

The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) then made his departure from the lower part of Mecca. As ‘A‘isha stated, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) entered Mecca from its upper part and left from its lower part.” Both sahih collections include this.

Ibn ‘Umar stated, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) entered from the upper pass at al-Bat’hā, and left by the lower pass.”

Al-Bukhārī and Muslim narrated this.

In one version the wording is, “He entered from Kadā and left from Kudā.”

Imām Ahmad stated that Muḥammad b. Fudayl related to him, quoting Ajlāh b. ‘Abd Allāh, from Abū al-Zubayr, from Jābir, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) departed from Mecca at sunset. He did not pray until he reached Sarif, which is nine miles from Mecca.”

This is very strange. There are differing views about Ajlāh. Perhaps this related to some occasion other than the hijjat al-wadā. As we have stated above, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) circumambulated the ka’ba after the al-$ubh prayer. What could have delayed him until sunset? This is very strange.

128. The word means here, “the place against which the faithful press while supplicating God”.

298 THE LIFE OF THE PROPHET MUḤAMMAD
Unless, that is, the claim made by Ibn Ḥazm is true. Namely, that he returned to al-Muḥaṣṣab from Mecca after his having made the ṭawāf al-wadāʾ circumambulation. The only evidence he gave for this was the statement of ʿAʾīshah when she returned after having made her ʿumra from al-Tanʿīm, meeting the Prophet (ṢAAS), at Saʿdah, whether while he was going down to the people of Mecca or while she was descending and he ascending.

Ibn Ḥazm stated, “One thing beyond doubt is that she was going up from Mecca and that he was descending. This is because she had come in for the ʿumra and he was waiting until she came. He then arose to make the ṭawāf al-wadāʾ and met her on his way out to al-Muḥaṣṣab from Mecca.”

Al-Bukhārī gave a section entitled, Chapter on those who stayed at Dhū Ṭuwān when he returned from Mecca.

Al-Bukhārī went on to quote Muhammad b. Ḥassā as stating that Ḥammād b. Zayd related to him, from Ayyūb, from Nāfiʿ, to the effect that when Ibn ʿUmar came (on the pilgrimage to Mecca) he spent the night at Dhū Ṭuwān and went in (to Mecca) next morning. When he departed (from Mecca) he would pass by Dhū Ṭuwān where he would pass the night till next morning. He would relate that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) did this.

He related this thus, with a fully connected line of transmission, and in certainty. He, along with Muslim, substantiated this from a ḥadīth of Ḥammād b. Zayd; however, there is no mention in it of staying at Dhū Ṭuwān on his return. God knows best.

An invaluable addendum that gives the information that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) took away some of the water of zamzam with him.

The ḥāfīz Abū ʿĪsā al-Tirmidhī stated that Abū Kurayb related to him, quoting Khallād b. Yazīd al-Juʿfī, quoting Zuhayr b. Muʿawiya, from Hishām b. ʿUrwa, from his father, from ʿAʾīshah, (who said) that she would carry water from zamzam and she reported that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) would carry it.

He (al-Tirmidhī) then stated, “This ḥadīth is ḥasan gharīb; we know of it only from this line.”

Al-Bukhārī stated that Muhammad b. Muqṭīl related to him, quoting ʿAbd Allāh – he being Ibn al-Mubārak – quoting Mūsā b. ʿUqba, from Sāлим and Nāfiʿ, from ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar (who said) “When the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) returned from a military expedition or from the ḥajj or the ʿumra, be would thrice proclaim, ‘God is most Great!’. Then he would say, ‘There is no god but God alone! He has no associate! Power is His, and praise. He has control over everything. We return, repenting, worshipping, prostrating to our Lord, praising. God has fulfilled His promise, given aid to His servant, and defeated the factions (by Himself) alone.’”

The accounts stating this are numerous. And to God all praise and reliance are due.
Chapter: On the narration of the hadith showing that the Prophet (SAAS) gave an address in a place between Mecca and Medina on his way back from the hajjat al-wada', near al-Juhfah, a place called Ghadir Khumm.

At this place he made clear the virtue of ‘Ali b. Abu Talib and how his honour was untainted by the charges made against him by some of those who had been with him in Yemen on account of the awards he had issued then that some thought to be unjust, inadequate and miserly. However, he was in the right in this.

When, therefore, the Prophet (SAAS) had finished explaining the pilgrimage rituals and returned to Medina, on the way he clarified that issue, making a major address on the 18th of Dhūl-Hijja that year. It was a Sunday; it was delivered beneath a tree at Ghadir Khumm and in it he clarified a variety of concerns. He emphasized ‘Ali’s virtues, his trustworthiness and his closeness to himself, all of which erased the doubts that many people had about him.

We will, through God’s power and help, present the most significant of the accounts relating to this, making clear what in them is authentic and what is questionable.

Abū Ja’far Muḥammad b. Jarir al-Ṭabari, author of the Qurʾān exegesis and the history, greatly concerned himself with this hadith. He collected two volumes of material relating to it, giving its variations in lines of transmission and terminology. He distinguished between the authentic and inauthentic reports (contrary) to the practice of many of the early authorities on the hadith literature, who presented in this section all that came to them without discriminating between those of doubtful quality from others of clear authenticity. The same may be said of the great ḥāfiz Abū al-Qasim b. Ḥasan, who gave many ahādīth relating to this address.

We will give the major relevant accounts with notice that none of it (contains material) from the Shi‘a community; what we will present and explain will provide them neither support nor evidence.

To proceed — and God’s help is sought — Muḥammad b. Isḥāq stated in his text on the hajjat al-wada’ that it was related to him by Yaḥyā b. ‘Abd Allāh b. ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. Abū ‘Amra, from Yazīd b. Ṭalḥa b. Yazīd b. Rukana, who said, “When ‘Ali arrived from Yemen to meet the Messenger of God (SAAS) in Mecca, he hurried ahead leaving behind one of his men in command of his troops. The latter proceeded to dress each of his men in a special robe made from the cloth that ‘Ali had.

“When the army approached, he (‘Ali) went out to meet them and was surprised to see them dressed in robes. ‘What is all this?’ he asked. He (his deputy commander) replied, ‘I dressed up the men so that they would look well when they arrive among the people.’ ‘Confound you!’ ‘Ali exclaimed. ‘Take them off before you get to the Messenger of God.’ His deputy proceeded to remove their robes and replaced them in the store of cloth. The army expressed complaints at how he (‘Ali) had treated them.”
Ibn Ishāq went on to state that 'Abd Allāh b. 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Ma'īmar b. Ḥāzm related to him, from Sulaymān b. Muḥammad b. Ka'b b. 'Ujra, from his aunt Zaynab, daughter of Ka'b, who was married to Abū Sa'īd al-Khudrī, who quoted Abū Sa'īd as saying, "People complained about 'Alī and the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) arose among us to make an address. I heard him say, 'People! Don't complain about 'Alī! I swear by God, he is too rigorous regarding God and His cause than for him to be the object of complaint.'"

Imām Aḥmad narrated it from a hadith of Muḥammad b. Ishāq, quoting him as stating, "He is very rigorous regarding God and His cause."

Imām Aḥmad also stated that al-Faḍl b. Dukayn related to him, quoting Ibn Abū Ghaniyya, from al-Hakam, from Sa'īd b. Jibyrr, from Ibn 'Abbās, from Burayda, who said, "I went on the expedition to Yemen with 'Alī and considered his behaviour harsh. When I reached the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), I referred to 'Alī with criticism. I saw the expression on the face of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) change and he said, 'Burayda, do I not have a higher claim on the Muslims than they have on themselves?' 'Yes indeed, Messenger of God,' I replied. He said, 'Whoever has myself as his lord, so is 'Alī his lord.'"

Al-Nasā'I narrated it thus from Abū Da'ūd al-Ḥarrānī, from Abū Nu'aym al-Faḍl b. Dukayn, from 'Abd al-Malik b. Abū Ghaniyya; his line of transmission is similar. This line is excellent and firm; all the men quoted are considered trustworthy.

Al-Nasā'I narrated in his al-sunan from Muḥammad b. al-Muthanna, from Yahyā b. Hāmīd, from Abū Muʿāwiya, from al-Aʿmash, from Ḥabīb b. Abū Thābit, from Abū al-Ṭufayl, who quoted Zayd b. Arqam as having said, "When the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) returned from the hijjat al-wadaʾ and stayed at Ghadir Khumm, he ordered that the area under the large trees be swept. He then said, 'It is as if I have received an invitation and have accepted. I have left among you the two treasures: the Book of God and my family, my household. Watch how you succeed me in both these. They will never split apart until they come to me at al-lzawrj."

"He then said, 'God is my Lord, and I am the guardian of every believer.' He then took 'Alī by the hand and said, 'Whoever has myself as his lord, so is this (man) his guardian. O God, protect all who protect him, and oppose all who oppose him.'"

"I (Abū al-Ṭufayl) asked Zayd, 'You actually heard this from the Messenger of God (ṢAAS)?' He replied, 'There was no one in the tents who did not see him with his own eyes and hear him with his own ears.'"

Al-Nasā'I is alone in giving this from this line.

Our teacher, Sheikh Abū ʿAbd Allāh b. Dhahabī said that this was an authentic hadith.

129. The pool or basin near which on Judgement Day the Prophet (ṢAAS) is to meet his community.
Ibn Maja stated that 'Ali b. Muhammad related to him, quoting Abū al-Husayn, quoting Ḥammād b. Salama, from 'Ali b. Zayd b. Ju'dān, from 'Adī b. Thabit, from al-Bara'i b. 'Azib, who said, “We came (to Mecca) with the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), on the ḥijjat al-wādā‘ that he attended. He made a halt on the way and gave orders that there be a general prayer. He took 'Ali by the hand and said, ‘Do I not have a higher claim on the Muslims than they have on themselves?’ They replied, ‘Yes, indeed!’ He then asked, ‘Do I not have a higher claim on each Muslim than he has on himself?’ ‘Yes, indeed,’ they replied. He then said, ‘This (man) is the lord of all those whose lord I am. O God, protect those who protect him and oppose all who oppose him.’ ”

‘Abd al-Razzaq narrated it thus, from Ma'mar, from 'Ali b. Zayd b. Ju'dān, from 'Adī, from al-Bara'i.

The ḥāfiẓ Abū Ya'sā al-Mawṣīlīt and al-Hāsan b. Sufyān stated that Hudba related to them, quoting 'Abd al-Malik, from ‘Abd al-Rahmān al-Khādī, from Zadḥān Abu 'Umar, who said, “I heard 'Ali at al-Rāba' while he was addressing the people saying, ‘Who witnessed the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), on the day at Ghadir Khumm when he spoke as he did?’”

Zadḥān went on, “Twelve men arose and bore witness that they had heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) say, ‘Those whose lord I have been have 'Ali as their lord.’”

'Abd Allah, son of Imam Ahmad, stated in his father’s musnad ḥadīth collection, “A ḥadīth of 'Ali b. Ḥakim al-'Azdi quoted Sharīk, from Abū Iṣḥāq, from Sa'id b. Wahb, and from Zayd b. Yuthayr, who said, ‘'Ali addressed those at al-Raḥba, asking, “Anyone who heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) speak on the day at Ghadir Khumm should rise.”

“Six men arose on behalf of Saʿīd, while six men arose on behalf of Zayd. They testified that they had heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) say to ʿAlī on the day at Ghadir Khumm, “Is not God more solicitous of the Muslims than (they are) of themselves?” “Yes indeed,” they replied. He then asked, “O God, those whose lord I have been have ʿAlī as their lord. O God, protect those who protect him and oppose those who oppose him.””

ʿAbd Allāh went on to state that ʿAlī b. Ḥakīm related to him, quoting Sharīk, from Abū Ishāq, from ʿAmr Dhū Amr, a ḥadīth similar to that of Abū Ishāq, from Saʿīd and Zayd, that is. He added to it the words, “Aid those who aid him and forsake those whom he forsakes.”

ʿAbd Allāh stated that ʿAlī related to him, quoting Sharīk, from al-ʿAqā, from Ḥabīb b. Abū Thabit, from Abu al-Tufayl, from Zayd b. Arqam, who quoted the Prophet (ṢAAS), as above.

AI-Nasāʾī stated in the book Ḳhāṣṣaṣ ʿAlt that al-Ḥusayn b. Ḥabīb related to him, quoting al-Faḍl b. Ṭūs, from al-ʿAqā, from Abū Ishāq, from Saʿīd b. Wahb, who said, “ʿAlī said at al-Raḥba, ‘I adjure by God any man who heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), that day at Ghadir Khumm say, “God is the lord of the Believers and those whose lord I have been have this (man) as their lord. O God, protect those who protect him, oppose those who oppose him, and favour those who favour him; hate those who hate him and aid those who aid him’” (to rise and so testify)”

Shuʾba narrated it thus from Abū Ishāq. And this is an excellent line of transmission.

AI-Nasāʾī also narrated it from a ḥadīth of Isrāʾīl, from Abū Ishāq, from ʿAmr Dhū Amr, (who said) “ʿAlī adjured the people at al-Raḥba and some men got up and bore witness that they had heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) say on the day at Ghadir Khumm, ‘Those whose lord I have been (now have) ʿAlī as their lord. O God, protect those who protect him, oppose those who oppose him, and favour those who favour him; hate those who hate him and aid those who aid him.’”

Ibn Jarir narrated it from ʿAbd al-Razzāq, from ʿAbd al-Razzāq, from Isrāʾīl, from Abū Ishāq, from Zayd b. Ṭūs and ʿAbd Khayr, from ʿAlī.

Ibn Jarir also narrated it from ʿAbd al-Razzāq, from Ubayd Allāh b. Muṣa, who is a Shīʿa considered a trustworthy source, from Maṭʿar b. Khalifah, from Abū Ishāq, from Zayd b. Ṭūs, Zayd b. Yūthayr, and ʿAmr Dhū Amr (who said) that ʿAlī adjured the people at al-Kūfah. He then gave the ḥadīth as above.

130. This phrase, necessary for the sense of the text, seems to have been omitted in error from this one narration.
day at Ghadir Khumm, say, “Anyone whose guardian I have been, has 'Ali as his guardian” to get up and so testify.”

‘Abd al-Rahmān went on, “So twelve men arose; it is as though I am at this moment looking at one of them. They said, ‘We testify that we heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say on the day at Ghadir Khumm, ‘Do I not have a higher claim on the Muslims than they have on themselves? And are not my wives like their own mothers?’ ‘Yes indeed, Messenger of God,’ we replied. He went on, ‘Those whose lord I have been have ‘Ali as their lord. O God, protect those who protect him and oppose those who oppose him.”

This line of transmission is ḍaʿif gharth, “weak and anomalous”.

‘Abd Allah b. Aḥmad stated that Ahmad b. Numayr al-Wakiī stated, quoting Ṣayd b. al-Ḥubāb, quoting al-Wāḥid b. ‘Uqba b. Ḍirār al-Qaysī, quoting Ṣimāk, from Ubayd b. al-Wāḥid al-Qaysī, who said, “I went in to ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. Abū Laylā and he related to me that he witnessed ‘Alī at al-Raḥba. He said, ‘He adjoined any man who had heard and witnessed the Messenger of God (SAAS) on the day at Ghadir Khumm to rise; only those who had actually seen him should arise. Twelve men got up and said, ‘We saw and heard him when he took ‘Ali by the hand, saying, ‘O God, protect those who protect him and oppose those who oppose him. Aid whoever aids him and forsake anyone who forsakes him.” (All) except three (who had heard him) stood up; these three did not. He then cursed them (the three) and his curse was effective.”

It was also narrated from ‘Abd al-A‘la b. Amīr al-Thalabī and others, from ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. Abū Laylā.

Ibn Jarīr stated that Aḥmad b. Maṣūr related to him, quoting Aḥmad al-A‘qīdī and Ibn Abū Aṣīm narrated, from Sulaymān al-Ghallaḥī, from Abū Aḥmad al-A‘qīdī, quoting Katbīr b. Ṣayd, quoting Muḥammad b. ʿUmar b. ʿAlī, from his father, from Abū ʿAlī (who said) that the Messenger of God (SAAS) was present near a tree at Khumm. He went on to relate the hadīth which contained the words, “Whose lord I have been, has ‘Alī as his lord”.

Some authorities narrated it from Abū ‘Aḥmad b. Katbīr, from Muḥammad b. ʿUmar b. ʿAlī, from ‘Alī, with a line of transmission that is ṭanqīfī.

Isma‘īl b. Aḥmad al-Bajālī – he being a weak source – stated, from Mis‘ar, from Ṣa‘īd b. Muṣāfir, from Umayra b. Sa‘īd (who said) that he witnessed ‘Alī on the minbar adorning the Companions of the Messenger of God (SAAS), who had heard the latter on the day at Ghadir Khumm (to stand up). Twelve men did stand; these included Abū Hurayra, Abū Sa‘īd and Anas b. Mālik. They testified that they had heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say, “Anyone whose lord I have been has ‘Alī as his lord. O God, protect those who protect him and oppose those who oppose him.”

Ubayd Allāh b. Mūsā narrated it from Ḥanī b. Ayyūb – he being considered a trustworthy source – from Ṣa‘īd b. Muṣāfir.

‘Abd Allāh b. Ahmad stated that Ḥajjāj b. al-Shā‘īr related to him, quoting Shabāba, quoting Nuṣaym b. Ḥakīm, quoting Abū Maryam and a man who was a close companion of 'Ali, who quoted 'Ali as saying that, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) said on the day at Ghadir Khumm, ‘Anyone whose lord I have been, has ‘Ali as his lord.’ He went on to say that, ‘Some people add to that the words, “protect those who protect him and oppose those who oppose him.”’”

Abū Da'ūd narrated with this line of transmission the hadith of al-Mukhdij. Imām Aḥmad stated that Ḥusayn b. Muḥammad and Abū Nu'aym al-Ma'nī both stated that Qaṭān quoted Abū al-Ṭūfayl as having said, “‘Ali assembled the people at al-Raḥbā – meaning the courtyard of the mosque at al-Kūfah – and said, ‘God calls upon all who heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) speak at Ghadir Khumm to stand (and say) what they heard.’ Many people did stand and testified to his having taken ‘Ali by the hand and having asked the people, ‘Do you know that I have a higher claim on the people than they have on themselves?’ They replied, ‘Yes, Messenger of God.’ He continued, ‘Anyone whose lord I have been has ‘Ali as his lord. O God, protect those who protect him and oppose those who oppose him.’”

“I then left, feeling somewhat disturbed, and met Zayd b. Arqam. I told him what I had heard ‘Ali say. He asked, ‘What is it you are disputing? I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say that to him.’”

Imām Aḥmad related it thus in the musnad ascribed to Zayd b. Arqam, may God be pleased with him.

Al-Nasā‘ī narrated it from a hadith of al-‘Ar(selector) from Ḥābib b. Abū Thabit, from Abū al-Ṭūfayl, from Zayd b. Arqam. This is given above.

Al-Tirmidhī gave it from Bandār, from Ghundār, from Shu‘ba, from Salama b. Kuhayl, who said, “I heard Abū al-Ṭūfayl relate from Abū Sāriḥah” – or Zayd b. Arqam, Shu‘ba was unsure – “that the Messenger of God (SAAS) said, ‘Anyone whose lord I have been has ‘Ali as his lord.’”

Imām Aḥmad stated that Affān related to him, quoting Abū ‘Awānā, from al-Mughirah, from Abū ‘Ubayd, from Maymūn Abū ‘Abd Allāh, who said, “Zayd b. Arqam said, while I listened, ‘We made a halt at a place called Wādi Khumm. He ordered prayers and performed it at midday.

“‘He made an address to us. The Messenger of God (SAAS) was protected from the sun by a cloth placed over a tree. He said, “Do you not know” – or “do you not bear witness” – “that I have a higher claim on any believer than he has on himself?” “Yes indeed,” they replied. He went on, “Anyone whose lord I have been has ‘Ali as his lord. O God, protect those who protect him and oppose those who oppose him.””

Aḥmad proceeded to narrate it from Ghundar, from Shu‘ba, from Maymūn Abū ‘Abd Allāh, from Zayd b. Arqam, up to the words, “Anyone whose lord I have been has ‘Ali as his lord”. Maymūn then stated, “Some authorities quote Zayd as saying that the Messenger of God (SAAS) also said, ‘O God, protect those who protect him and oppose those who oppose him.’”
This line of transmission is excellent. Its sources are men considered trustworthy according to the criteria of the Sunan. Al-Tirmidhi categorized as ṣaḥīḥ a tradition with this line of transmission dealing with al-rayth, “tardiness”.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Yaḥya b. Adam related to him, quoting Ḥanash b. al-Ḥārith b. Laqt b. ‘Āsh rgba, from Rabbāḥ b. al-Ḥārith, who said, “A group of men came to ṢAlī at al-Raḥba and said, ‘Peace be upon you, lord of ours!’ He replied, ‘How can I be your ‘lord’ when you are Arabs?’ They responded, ‘We heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) say on the day at Ghadīr Khumm, ‘Anyone whose lord I have been has this man as his lord.’’”

Rabbāḥ went on, “When they left, I went in after them and asked, ‘Who were those?’ They replied, ‘A group of ānṣār; Abū Ayyūb al-Anṣārī was one of them.’”

Imām Aḥmad stated that Ḥanash related to us, from Rabbāḥ b. al-Ḥārith, who said, “I saw a group of ānṣār go in to see ṢAlī at al-Raḥba. He asked, ‘Who are these people?’ They replied, ‘Your mawāli, ‘subjects’, Commander of the Believers.’” And he completed the ḥadīth similarly.

This is his phraseology; the ḥadīth is one of those that only he gives.

Ibn Jarir stated that Aḥmad b. ‘Uthmān Abū al-Jawzā related to him, quoting Muḥammad b. Khalid b. ʿAthama, quoting Musā b. Yaʿqūb al-Zamʿi – he being entirely trustworthy – quoting Muḥājir b. Mīsār, from Ṭalίṣa, daughter of Ṣaʿd, who quoted her father as saying, “I heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) speak on the day at al-Juḥfa. He took ṢAlī by the hand and made an address. Then he said, ‘People, I am your guardian.’ ‘You are right,’ the people responded. He then raised ṢAlī’s hand and said, ‘This is my wāli, “my deputy”, and muʿaddi, “the one deputized by me”. God is the protector of those who protect him and the opponent of those who oppose him.’”

Our teacher al-Dhahabi stated, “This ḥadīth is ḥasan gharīb, “good yet anomalous”.

Ibn Jarir then narrated it from a ḥadīth of Yaʿqūb b. Jaʿfar b. Abū Bakr, from Muḥājir b. Mīsār. His version tells of the Prophet (ṢAAS) stopping until those behind him caught up and of his ordering back those who had advanced. He then addressed them as in the ḥadīth above.

Abū Jaʿfar b. Jarir al-Ṭabarī stated in the first part of his book Ghādir Khumm, that his teacher Abū ʿAbd Allāh al-Dhahabī stated that he found the following in a manuscript quoting Ibn Jarir as stating that Muḥmūd b. ʿAwf al-Taʿṣī related, quoting ʿUbayd Allāh b. Yūnus, quoting ʿĪsā b. Ṣaʿd, from ʿAbbās b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar – Ibn Jarir stated, “I think he added, ‘from ʿUmar’, but that is not in my notes” – who said, “I heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) say, as he held the hand of ṢAlī, ‘Anyone whose lord I have been has this man as his lord. O God, protect those who protect him, and oppose those who oppose him.”

This hadith is gharib; indeed, it is munkar, “objectionable”, and its line of transmission is da'if. Al-Bukhari stated that Jamil b. ‘Ammārā is a questionable source.

Al-Mu’talib b. Ziyād stated, quoting from ‘Abd Allāh b. Muḥammad b. ‘Aqīl, who heard Jābir b. ‘Abd Allāh say, “We were at the dry-well at Ghadir Khumm when the Messenger of God (SAAS) came out to us and said, ‘Anyone whose lord I have been has ‘Ali as his lord.’”

Our teacher, al-Dhahabi, stated, “This hadith is hasan, ‘good.’” Ibn Lahi’a narrated it from Bakr b. Sawāda and others, from Abū Salama b. ‘Abd al-Raḥmān, from Jābir similarly.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Yahyā b. ʿĀdīm related to him, that Isrāʾīl related to them both, from Abū ʿIṣḥāq, from Ḥābashī b. Jaṇāda — who had, Yahyā b. ʿĀdīm stated, been present on the hijjat al-wādī’ — and stated, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) said, ‘Alī is of me, and I am of him; and only I or Alī direct from me.’”

Ibn Abū Bukayr said (that the words spoken were), “No one settles debts on my behalf except myself or ‘Ah.”

Aḥmad also narrated it thus from Abū Aḥmad al-Zubayrī, from Isrāʾīl.

Imām Aḥmad stated that al-Zubayrī related to him, quoting Shurayk, from Abū ʿIṣḥāq, from Ḥābashī b. Jaṇāda in similar terms, “I”, (Shurayk) “asked Abū ʿIṣḥāq, ‘Where did you hear him say this?’ He replied, ‘He stood over us on a mare at our majlis, “assembly”, at the al-Sabrc cemetery.’”

Aḥmad narrated it similarly, from Aswad b. ʿĀmīr, as did Yahyā b. ʿĀdīm, from Shurayk. Al-Tirmidhī narrated it from Isra’īl b. Alqīf, from Shurayk. Ibn Majā did so from Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba, as also did Suwayd b. Saʿīd and Isra’īl b. Mūsā, all three of these quoting it from Shurayk. Al-Nasāʾī narrated it from Aḥmad b. Sulaymān, from Yahyā b. ʿĀdīm, from Isrāʾīl. Al-Tirmidhī characterized it as hasan saḥīh gharib.

Sulaymān b. Qarrī — whose traditions are rejected — narrated it from Abū ʿIṣḥāq, from Ḥābashī b. Jaṇāda, who heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say on the day at Ghadir Khumm, “Anyone whose lord I have been has ‘Alī as his lord. O God, protect those who protect him and oppose those who oppose him.” He went on to narrate the hadith.

The hāfīz Abū Yaḥyā al-Mawsīlī stated that Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba related to him, quoting Shurayk, from Abū Yazīd al-Aẓdī, from his father, who said, “Abū Hurayra came in to the mosque and the people gathered about him. One young man went up to him and said, ‘I adjure you by God to tell whether you heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say, “Anyone whose lord I have been has ‘Alī as his lord. O God, protect those who protect him and oppose those who oppose him.” “Yes,” he replied.’”
Ibn Jarir narrated it from Abū Kurayb, from Shādhān, from Shurayk. Idrīs al-Azdī concurred with him, quoting it from his brother Abī Yazīd, whose name was Dāʿūd b. Yazīd. Ibn Jarir also narrated it from a hadīth of Idrīs and Dāʿūd, from their father, from Abū Hurayra.

Also there is the hadīth narrated by Dāmra from Ibn Shawdhab, from Māṭar al-Warrāq, from Shahr b. Hawshāb, from Abū Hurayra, which states, “When the Messenger of God (ṣaṣā) took ʿAlī by the hand, he said, ‘Anyone whose lord I have been has ʿAlī as his lord.’ And so God the Almighty and Glorious revealed, ‘Today I have perfected for you your religion and completed My favours upon you’” (ṣūrat al-Mīdād; V, v.3).

Abū Hurayra went on, “This was the day at Ghadir Khumm; whoever fasts the 18th day of Dhū al-Ḥijja has credited for him a fast of 60 months.”

This is a highly objectionable hadīth; indeed it is mendacious! Because contradictory material is established in both saḥīh collections from the Commander of the Believers, ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb, to the effect that this verse was revealed on the Friday, the day at ʿArafat, while the Messenger of God (ṣaṣā) was standing there. We have given this above.

Similarly, his statement, “whoever fasts the 18th day of Dhū al-Ḥijja has credited for him a fast of 60 months” is untrue. For what is established in the saḥīh collections is that fasting the month of Ramaḍān brings credit of 10 months. And so how could it be that fasting one day would be counted as 60 months? This is nonsense.

After relating this hadīth, our teacher, the ḥafiz Abū ʿAbd Allāh al-Dhahabī commented, “This hadīth is extremely objectionable.”

Hābshūn al-Khālīl and ʿAḥmad b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAḥmad al-Nirī, both highly trustworthy sources, narrated it from ʿAlī b. Saʿīd b. al-Ramālī, from Dāmra, who said, “This hadīth is narrated from those (traced to) ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb, Mālik b. al-Huwaiyriḥ, Anas b. Mālik, Abū Saʿīd and others, with weak lines of transmission.”

Dāmra went on, “The beginning part of the hadīth is successively given, with high certainty that the Messenger of God (ṣaṣā) spoke it. Regarding the words, ‘O God, protect those who protect him’, it is an addition that has strong lines of transmission. This reference to fasting, however, is inauthentic. And, by God, this verse quoted was definitely revealed on Mt. ʿArafat, some days before that at Ghadir Khumm. But God, Almighty is He, knows best.”

minbar, gave praise and thanks to God and said, 'People, Abu Bakr never did me harm; give him credit for that. People, I am well pleased with Abu Bakr, 'Umar, 'Uthmân, 'Ali, Talha, al-Zubayr, 'Abd al-Rahmân b. 'Awf and the initial muhâjirin. Give them all credit for that. People, preserve me in my Companions, my relatives and my friends. God does not seek for you to harm any one of them. People, keep your tongues off the Muslims, and if one of them should die, then say good of him.'"

THE YEAR 11 AH.

This year commenced after the return of the noble Prophet (SAAS), to that city of prophecy, Medina, "the purified", following his completion of the hijjat al-wada'.

Momentous events took place that year, among the most shocking being the death of the Messenger of God (SAAS). However, he was in fact transported by Almighty God from this transient abode away into eternal ease in an elevated place on high, the most exalted and most splendid level of paradise. As the Almighty stated, "The afterlife is better for you than the former; your Lord will give to you, and you will be pleased" (sûrat al-Doâra; XCIII, v.4).

That was after he had completed carrying out the mission that God Almighty had ordered him to announce. He had given advice to his nation and had directed them to the very best that he knew for them. He had warned them and restrained them from what would have harmed them here on earth and in their afterlife.

We have given above the hadith of 'Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb narrated by both authors of the sahih collections, to the effect that the words of the Almighty: "Today I have perfected for you your religion and completed My favours upon you, and willed that Islam be your religion" (sûrat al-Ma'idâ; V, v.3) were revealed on Friday, while the Messenger of God (SAAS) was standing on 'Arafât.

We have narrated, from a fine line of transmission, that when this sûrat was revealed, 'Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb wept. He was asked, "What makes you weep?" He replied, "After perfection there can only be loss." It was as though he had sensed the death of the Prophet (SAAS).

The latter pointed to this in what was narrated by Muslim from a hadith of Ibn Jurayj, from Abû al-Zubayr, from Jabir, that, "the Messenger of God (SAAS) stood at the pillar at al-'Aqaba and said to us, 'Take from me your rituals, for I may perhaps not make the pilgrimage after this year.'"

We have given above what the two ḥâfîz Abû Bakr al-Bazzâr and al-Bayhaqî narrated from the hadith of Mûsâ b. 'Ubayda al-Rabdhî, from Šâdaqa b. Yâsîr, from Ibn 'Umar, who said, "This sûrat: '(Remember) when God's help and the victory came' (sûrat al-Nâsîr; CX, v.1) was revealed in the middle days of al-tashriq, and the Messenger of God (SAAS) knew that it meant the farewell.
He therefore ordered that his camel al-Qaṣwā' be brought, and it was saddled.” He went on to refer to the address the Prophet (SAAS) made that day, as is told above.

‘Abd Allah b. ‘Abbās, may God be pleased with him, spoke similarly to ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb when he asked him about the interpretation of this surat in the presence of many of the Companions, to show them the virtue of Ibn ‘Abbās, his superiority and knowledge. This related to his having been brought forwards and seated (in a prominent position) with the elders who had participated in the battle of Badr. He (‘Umar) said, “You know from where he came.” He proceeded, in the presence of Ibn ‘Abbās, to question them on the interpretation of this surat: “(Remember) when God’s help and the victory came and you saw the people entering God’s religion in droves. Give joyful praise to your lord, and seek His forgiveness. He is Forgiving” (surat al-Nasr; CX v.1–3). They replied, “We were ordered, after having been given (God’s) help, to speak His name, to praise Him and to seek His forgiveness.”

“He (‘Umar) asked, ‘What do you say, Ibn ‘Umar?’ He replied, ‘It (referred to) the impending death of the Messenger of God (SAAS); he was being notified of it.’ ‘Umar commented, ‘I know of it only what you know.’”

We have referred, in our exegesis of this surat, to the various sources substantiating Ibn ‘Abbās’s statement, even though that does not contradict interpretations offered by the Companions.

What is narrated by Imam Ahmad is similar. (He stated) that Waki’ related to him, from Ibn Abī Dhī‘b, from Šalih, the freed-man of al-Tawḥama, from Abū Hurayra, (who said) that when the Messenger of God (SAAS) went on the pilgrimage accompanied by his wives, he said, “There will only be this hijja, and then they will remain in confinement.”

Ahmad is alone in giving it from this line. Abū Da‘ūd narrated it in his work al-sunan, from another excellent line.

What is implied here is that this year the people sensed the (impending) death of the Messenger of God (SAAS).

We will refer to all that and present the accounts and evidences relating thereto. And God’s help is to be sought.

In way of preface to that, we will refer to what the imām Muhammad b. Ishāq b. Yasar, Abū Ja‘far b. Jarir and Abū Bakr al-Bayhaqi narrated prior to his death, in their enumerations of his pilgrimages, military expeditions and raids, documents and messages to rulers. Our references will be concise and abridged, and we will follow this material with the death.

In both sahih collections, it is stated in a hadith of Abū Ishāq al-Sabri, from Zayd b. Arqam, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) went on nineteen military expeditions and, following his hijra, performed the hijjat al-wadā’ but made no pilgrimage thereafter.

Abū Ishāq stated that there was one other at Mecca.
Abū Ishāq al-Sabīr stated the same. Zayd b. al-Ḫubāb stated, from Sufyān al-Thawrī, from Jaʿfar b. Muhammad, from his father, from Jābir, (who said) that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) made three pilgrimages — two before his Hijra and one thereafter, along with which he also performed an 'umra. To the latter he brought thirty-six camels for sacrifice and 'Aīr brought the complement thereto from Yemen.

We have presented information above given in both ṣaḥīḥ collections from more than one of the Companions, including Anas b. Malik, to the effect that the Prophet (ṢAAS) performed the 'umra four times, that at al-Ḫudaybiyya, the 'umrat al-qatf, the 'umra from al-Jiʿrānā, and the 'umra that accompanied his ḥijjat al-wadaʾ.

Regarding the military expedition, al-Bukhārī narrated, from Abu Gaṣūn al-Nabīl, from Yazd b. Abū ʿUbayd, from Salama b. al-Akwaʾ, who said, “I participated in seven military expeditions with the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and in nine with Zayd b. Ḥāritha, whom the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had appointed in command of us.”

In both ṣaḥīḥ collections a hadīth is given from Qutayba, from Ḥātim b. Ismāʿil, from Zayd, from Salama who said, “I went on seven military expeditions with the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and on nine others he dispatched (without himself participating). On one Abū Bakr was in command of us, and on another it was Usama b. Zayd.”

In the ṣaḥīḥ collection of al-Bukhārī, there is a hadīth from Isrāʾīl, from Abū Ishāq, from al-Baraʾ, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) went out on fifteen military expeditions.”

In both ṣaḥīḥ collections it is stated in a hadīth from Shuʿba, from Abū Ishāq, from al-Baraʾ, that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) made nineteen expeditions, in seventeen of which he participated. The first of these was that to “al-ʿUshayr” or “al-ʿUsayr”.

Muslim narrated from Ahmad b. Ḥanbal, from Muʿtamir, from Kahmas b. al-Ḥasan, from Ibn Burayda, who quoted his father as saying that he participated along with the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) in sixteen military expeditions.

There is also an account of Muslim, through al-Ḥusayn b. Waqīd, from ʿAbd Allāh b. Burayda, who quoted his father as saying that he participated in nineteen military expeditions with the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), in eight of which he engaged in combat.

In another account from him with this line of transmission, it is said that he dispatched twenty-four military expeditions, and that he engaged in the battles of Badr, Uhud, al-Ahzāb, al-Muraysiʾ, Khaybar, Mecca and Ḥunayn.

In the ṣaḥīḥ collection of Muslim, from a hadīth of Abū al-Zubayr, Jābir is quoted as saying, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) engaged in twenty-one military expeditions. I took part with him in nineteen, and did not fight at Badr or Uhud because my father prevented me. When the latter was killed at Uhud, I never missed any military expedition he sent out.”
'Abd al-Razzaq stated that Ma'mar related to him, from al-Zuhri, who said, "I heard Sa'd b. al-Musayyab say, 'The Messenger of God (SAAS) organized eighteen military expeditions.' And once I heard him say that they totalled twenty-four. But I don't know whether I imagined that or heard it thereafter."

Qatada stated, "The Messenger of God (SAAS) organized nineteen military expeditions in eight of which he himself engaged in combat. He also sent out twenty-four missions. His expeditions and raids together totalled forty-three."

Urwa b. al-Zubayr, al-Zuhri, Musa b. 'Uqba, Muhammad b. Ishâq b. Yasîr and other scholars expert in this subject state that the Prophet (SAAS) fought at Badr in Ramadân in 2 AH, then at Uhud in Shawwâl of 3 AH, at al-khandaq and against Banû Qurayza, also in Shawwâl, of 4 AH — for which date 5 AH is also given — against Banû al-Muštâliq at al-Muraysî in Sha'ban of 5 AH, and at Khaybar in Safar of 7 AH, dated by some as 6 AH. What is correct is that it occurred at the beginning of 7 AH and the end of 6 AH. Then he fought against the Meccans in Ramadân of 8 AH, and against Banû Hawâzin, then besieged the inhabitants of al-Ta'if in Shawwâl and part of Dhu al-Îjā'în 8 AH, as is told above in detail. In 8 AH 'Attâb b. Usayd, the Governor of Mecca, made the pilgrimage with the people and then in 9 AH, Abû Bakr, "the trusting", did so. Thereafter, in 10 AH the Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the pilgrimage with the Muslims.

Muhammad b. Ishâq stated, "The number of military expeditions which the Messenger of God (SAAS) organized totalled twenty-seven. These were, in order, Waddân, also known as al-Abwâ'; Buwât, over towards Radwa; al-'Ushayra, in the Yanbu' valley; the first Badr battle, in pursuit of Kurz b. Jâbir; 'the great battle of Badr', in which God slew the Quraysh chiefs; Banû Sulaym, proceeding as far as al-Kudr; al-Sawiq, in pursuit of Abû Sufyân b. Ḥarb; Ghatafân, also known as Dhû Amârr; Bahrân, a mine in Ḥijâz; Uhud; Ḥamrâ' al-Asad; Banû al-Naḍîr; Dhât al-Riqâ' of Nakhl; the 'other' battle of Badr; Dûmat al-Jandal; al-khandaq; Banû Qurayza; Banû Liyyân of Ḥudhayl; Dhû Qarad; Banû al-Muštâliq of Khuzâ'î; al-Ḥudaybihyya, where he did not intend to do battle and was blocked by the polytheists; Khaybar; the 'umrat al-qadî pilgrimage; al-Âthâr; Ḥunayn; al-Ṭâ'îf; and Tabûk."

Ibn Ishâq went on, "He actually engaged in combat in nine expeditions—Badr; Uhud; al-khandaq; Qurayza; al-Muštâliq; Khaybar; al-Âthâr; Ḥunayn; and al-Ṭâ'îf."

I note that all this is narrated in detail above in the appropriate places and with reference to various witnesses and evidence. And to God praise is due.

Ibn Ishâq went on to state that the missions and raids he dispatched totalled thirty-eight. And he proceeded to present details of these.

All or most of this material we have presented above in the proper place. And to God goes all praise and credit.
Let us, then summarize what Ibn Ishāq referred to here: the dispatch of 'Ubayd b. al-Ḥarīth to below Thaniyat Dhū al-Marwa; the dispatch of Ḥamza b. ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalib to the coast, over towards al-Ṭūs; some predate this to the dispatch of 'Ubayd, as mentioned hereabove. God knows best.

The dispatch of: Saʿd b. ʿAbī Waqqāṣ to al-Kharrār; ʿAbī Allāh b. Jaḥsh to Nakha; Zayd b. Ḥarīthah to al-Qarada; Muḥammad b. Maslama to Kaʿb b. al-Ashraf; Marthad b. ʿAbū Marthad to al-Rajʿī; al-Mundhir b. ʿAmr to Bīr Maʿṣūna; ʿAbī Ubaydah to Dhū al-Qaṣṣā; ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb to Turba in Banū ʿAmir territory; ʿAlī to Yemen.

(The dispatch of) Ghalib b. ʿAbī Allāh al-Kalbi to al-Kadid, where he fought Banū al-Mulawwah. He attacked them by night, killed a number of them and took away their livestock. Some of them pursued to retrieve the livestock and when they drew near a ṭālīt, a flood intervened. On their way the Muslims captured ʿAbd al-Jail b. Malik b. al-Barṣāت.

Ibn Ishāq gave account of this here, as we have dealt with it above.

(Ibn Ishāq went on), “The dispatch of: ʿAlī b. Abū Ṭalib to the territory of Fadak; Abū al-Awja to al-Sulami to Banū Sulaym, both he and his men being killed; Ḥuṣayn b. al-Ghamra; Abū Salama b. ʿAbd al-Asad to Qaṭān, a well in Najd belonging to Banū Asad; Muḥammad b. Maslama to al-Qartūṣ of Ḥawāzin; Bashir b. Saʿd to Banū Murra at Fadak; also Bashir b. Saʿd out towards Ḥunayn; Zayd b. Ḥarīthah to al-Jumūt, territory of Banū Sulaym.”

Regarding the expedition of Zayd b. al-Ḥarīthah to Judhām, territory of Banū Khushayn. Ibn Hishām commented that this was part of the territory of Ḥashmi. The reason for this, as told by Ibn Ishāq and others, was that when Dihya b. Khalīfa returned from his trip to the Byzantine emperor, having taken to him the document from the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), inviting him to God and having received treasures and gifts, he arrived in a valley in Banū Judhām territory called Shanār. At that time al-Hunayd b. ʿUṣ and his son ʿUṣ b. al-Hunayd, men of (Banū) al-Ḍulaṣ, a clan of Judhām, attacked him. They took all he had with him. One group of them, who had accepted Islam, fled from them, retrieving for Dihya what had been seized from him.

(Ibn Ishāq went on), “When Dihya returned to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), he told him what had happened and asked his permission to take the blood of al-Hunayd and his son ʿUṣ. Thereupon the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) dispatched Zayd b. Ḥarīthah with a force of men against them. They approached from near al-Awlağ, attacking Māqīṣ from the direction of the lava field. They captured the men and property they could find and killed al-Hunayd, his son, two men of Banū al-ʿAlmaṣ and one of Banū Khaṣīb.

“After Zayd had captured their livestock and families, a group of them met with Rifaʿāt b. Zayd, who had received a letter from the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), inviting them to Islam. Rifa‘a read it out to them and a group responded. Zayd b. Ḥarīthah did not, however, know this.

“After three days riding they reached the Messenger of God (ṣAṣā) in Medina. They gave him the letter and he ordered that it be read out in public. He then asked aloud, three times, ‘What should I do about those slain?’ One of their men, named Abū Zayd b. ʿAmr, replied, ‘Release those who are alive, Messenger of God. Those dead are already beneath these feet of mine.’

“The Messenger of God (ṣAṣā) ordered ‘Ali b. Abū ʿAlī to accompany them. ‘Ali responded, ‘Zayd will not obey me.’ And so the Messenger of God (ṣAṣā) gave him his own sword as a sign. ‘Ali then left with them, riding one of their camels. At Fayḍ al-Faḥlatayn they met up with Zayd, and ‘Ali gave back to them all that had been taken from them; they lost nothing at all.

“He also dispatched Zayd b. Ḥarīthah to Banū Fazāra at Wādī al-Qurā, where a number of his men were killed. He was wounded, along with those killed. When he returned home, he swore that no water would touch his head after a janabah until he had attacked them again. When he had recovered from his wound, the Messenger of God (ṣAṣā) sent him off once more in command of a force. He fought them at Wādī al-Qurā, taking prisoner Umm Qīra, Fāṣima, daughter of Rābiʿa b. Badr, the wife of Mālik b. Ḥudhayfah b. Badr, who was accompanied by a daughter of hers. Zayd b. Ḥarīthah gave orders to Qās b. al-Musahhar al-Yaʿmūrī and he killed Umm Qīra, allowing her daughter to live. Umm Qīra had been held in very high honour, maxims being in common use referring to her nobility. Salāma b. al-Akwa took charge of her daughter and he petitioned the Messenger of God (ṣAṣā), to award her to him, which he did. Thereafter the Messenger of God (ṣAṣā) presented her to his (Salāma’s) uncle, Ḥāzn b. Abū Wabh, to whom she bore his son ʿAbd al-Ḥaqqān.

“He twice sent ‘Abd Allāh b. Rawaḥa to Khaybar. On one expedition he killed al-Yusayr b. Rizām who had been assembling Ghatafs to attack the Messenger of God (ṣAṣā). The latter therefore dispatched ‘Abd Allāh b. Rawaḥa with a force of men that included ʿAbd Allāh b. Unays. When they approached al-Yusayr b. Rizām, they wished to conduct him back to the Messenger of God (ṣAṣā). He did proceed with them, but when they were at al-Qarqara, some six miles from Khaybar, al-Yusayr regretted having come. His son, ʿAbd Allāh, attacked him while he was drawing his sword and used his own to strike him, cutting off his father’s leg. Al-Yusayr struck him back on the head with a shawkat wood. Each Muslim then attacked and killed his Jewish companion. One of them, however, escaped on foot.

“When ʿAbd Allāh b. Unays arrived, the Messenger of God (ṣAṣā) spat upon his head and his wound did not suppurate or cause him pain.”

133. The word in Islamic practice means a “major ritual impurity”. That is, he would abstain from sexual relations until he had again fought Banū Fazāra.

134. In the version of Ibn Iṣḥāq translated by Guillaume, it was Salāma who presented the woman to his uncle. Op. cit. page 665.
I note that I think the other expedition to Khaybar to have been when the Messenger of God (SAAS) dispatched him to the date-palms at Khaybar. But God knows best.

Ibn Ishāq narrated here his story at length. Reference is made to him in the account of events of 5 AH. But God knows best.

He sent Zayd b. Ḥarītha, Ja‘far and ‘Abd Allah b. Rawāḥa to Muṭa in Syria, where they were killed as was related above.

He sent Ka‘b b. Umayr (and a force) to Dhat Atlaḥ, in Syria, and they too were killed.

He sent Uuyayn b. Ḥisn b. Hudhayfā b. Badr to Banū al-‘Anbar of Ṭamīm, whom he attacked. He killed a number of their men and then a delegation from them accompanied the prisoners to the Messenger of God (SAAS). He set some of them free and accepted ransom for others.

He also sent Ghālib b. ‘Abd Allah to Syria where Mirdas b. Naḥīk, their ally from al-‘Urqa of (Banū) Juhayna was struck down. He was killed by Usāma b. Zayd and one of the anfār who overtook him. When they drew their swords upon him, he uttered the words, “There is no god but God” (but they still killed him). When the two men returned, the Messenger of God (SAAS) criticized them severely. They excused themselves by maintaining that he had only spoken these words to avoid being killed. He asked Usāma, “And so did you tear up his heart (to learn whether he was feigning belief)?” He began saying to Usāma, “And what will happen to you on Judgement Day, when confronted by the statement ‘There is no god but God’?” Usāma said, “And he went on repeating this until I wished I had myself not become a Muslim before that (incident).” We have discussed this above.

He sent ‘Amr b. Ḥādhāra to Dhat al-Salasil in Banū ‘Udhra territory to encourage the Arabs to attack Syria. This was because the mother of ‘Amr b. Wa‘il was from Bāt; the Messenger of God (SAAS) therefore sent ‘Amr to enlist them, believing he would be received most favourably by them.

When he reached a well of theirs called al-Salsal, he grew fearful of them. He therefore sent to the Messenger of God (SAAS) for help. The latter dispatched to him a force that included Abū Bakr and ‘Umar and was commanded by Abū ‘Ubayda b. al-Jarrāh. When they reached him, ‘Amr took command over them all, saying, “You have only been dispatched as reinforcements for myself.” Abū ‘Ubayda, an easy-going man who cared little for prestige, accepted submissively. ‘Amr would lead the prayer with all of them. Upon his return, therefore, he asked, “Messenger of God, who is your favourite person?” “A’isha,” he replied. “And of the men?” ‘Amr asked. “Her father,” he responded.

He dispatched ‘Abd Allah b. Abū Ḥadrād to the Iqam valley. That was prior to the conquest of Mecca. The story of Muhallim b. Haththātha, given above with reference to 7 AH, is narrated at length above.
He also dispatched Ibn Abū Ḥadrād to al-Ghāba.

THE DISPATCH OF ʿABD AL-RAḤMĀN B. ʿAWF TO DŪMAT AL-JANDAL.

Muḥammad b. Iṣḥāq stated that someone above suspicion quoted ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Rabāḥ as having said, “I heard a man from Bāṣra ask ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb about a man’s allowing his turban, if wearing one, to fly freely behind him.” ʿAbd Allāh stated, “I will tell you about that, if God so wills it. You should know that I was the tenth in a group of Companions of the Prophet (ṢAAS), in his mosque. The others were Abū Bakr, ʿUmar, ʿUthmān, ʿAlī, ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. ʿAwf, Ibn Masʿād, Muṣāḥh b. Jābal, Ḥudhayfā b. al-Yāmān, and Abū Saʿīd al-Khudrī. I was there with the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), when a young anṣārī came in, greeted him and sat down. He then asked, ‘Messenger of God, which of the Believers is the best? ’ ‘The most virtuous,’ he replied. He then asked, ‘And which of the Believers is the most intelligent?’ ‘The one who is the most aware of death and best prepared for it before it comes; those like that are the most intelligent.’ The young man became silent.

“The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) then came over to us and said, ‘Muḥāfīrs, there are five faults that I pray to God will never befall you. If immorality ever settles upon and overcomes a people, plague and disease will appear among them such as never did among their forefathers. If they give short measure and weight, they will be overwhelmed by famine and the ruler’s tyranny. If they ever refuse to give the zakāt from their wealth, they will be deprived of moisture from the sky; for were it not for the animals, no rain would fall on them. If ever they break the pact with God or His Messenger, an enemy will overpower them and take some of what they had. If their māms should ever rule without God’s book and what God revealed, then He will bring calamity among them.’

“He then ordered ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. ʿAwf to make preparations for an expedition on which he was sending him. Next morning he wore a turban made of black cotton. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) asked him to approach, and untied and then rearranged the turban so that four or so fingers’ length were lying behind him. He said, ‘That’s the way, Ibn ʿAwf. Put your turban on thus—that is better and more usual.’

“He then told Bilāl to present him with the banner, and he did so. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) praised God, spoke a prayer for himself and said, ‘Take it, Ibn ʿAwf. Combat all in God’s cause and do battle against those who disbelieve in Him. Do not defraud or use deceit, mutilate, or kill children. This is God’s covenant and the way of your Prophet among you.’

“And so ʿAbd al-Raḥmān took the banner.” Ibn Ḥishām added, “He proceeded out to Dūmat al-Jandal.”

He also despatched Abū ʿUbaydah b. al-Jarrāḥ. They were some 300 riders who travelled to the coast. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) provisioned him with a stock of dates. The story of the ʿanbar, “the great whale”, cast ashore from the sea, relates to this expedition. It provided food for them all for close to a month. It restored them to health and they cut it up into steaks to provision themselves for their return to the Messenger of God (SAAS). They gave him some of it and he ate it. This story is narrated above.

Ibn Hishām stated, “There were other expeditions to which Ibn Isḥāq did not refer here.” There was the dispatch of ‘Amr b. Umayya al-Ḍamrī to fight Abū Sufyān Ṣakhir b. Ḥarb, after the killing of Khubayb b. Ṭādī and his companions. We have related above what became of him.

With ‘Amr b. Umayya there was Jabbar b. Ṣakhir. It did not so happen that they killed Abū Sufyān; in fact, they killed a different man and brought down Khubayb’s body from his stake.

He sent Sālim b. ʿUmayr, one of the ḥababūna, “the weepers”, to Abū ʿAfak of Banū ʿAmr b. Ṭāfīl. He had made his hypocrisy apparent when the Messenger of God (SAAS) killed al-Barith b. Suwayd b. al-Ṣāmīt, as was told above. He mourned him with the following verses, criticizing—may God damn him—his acceptance of the faith:

“I have lived for an age and I have never seen a house nor a group
More true, when called upon, to promises, nor more trustworthy to those who have compacted with them
Than the sons of Qayla in their assembly, making mountains shake and never submitting.
A rider who came to them split them apart (by saying) ‘Permissible!’ ‘Forbidden!’ to various things.
If you had believed in glory or kingship, you would have followed Tubbāt.”

The Messenger of God (SAAS) asked, “Who will take care of this foul fellow for me?” And so this man Sālim b. ʿUmayr volunteered and killed him.

Umama al-Mundīyya spoke the following verses on this subject:

“You deny the veracity of God’s religion and the man
Aḥmad! By the life of him who bore you, evil is he who did so!
A ḥanīf presented you with a thrust in the night, (saying) ‘Take that, Abū ʿAfak, despite your age!’”

He dispatched ʿUmayr b. ʿAdī al-Khaṭṭātī to kill al-ʿAṣmāʾ, daughter of Marwān, of Banū ʿUmayya b. Zayd. She had been satirizing Islam and those practising it. When Abū ʿAfak, mentioned above, was killed, she made her hypocrisy plain, speaking the verses:

“Confound Banū Mālik, al-Nabīt, ʿAwf and Banū al-Khazraj!

135. A reference to the supposed ancestry of the anṣār of Medina.
You have obeyed a stranger not of yourselves, not a man of (Bani) Murad or (Bani) Madhiij.
You have hopes of him, after his having killed the chiefs, as you might hope for blossoms after fruit ripen!
Is there no proud man to ambush him and so destroy the hope of the pretender?

Hassan b. Thabit answered her with the verses:

"Bani Wlil, Bani Waqif and Khatma are beneath Bani al-Khazraj.
Having asked for folly, may woe be upon her in her lamenting; and death will come.
She upset a hero affine ancestry, a man noble both in his entering and in his exit.
He smeared her with blood shortly after the daytime and he has no regrets."

When the Messenger of God (SAAS) had heard her words, he had said, "Will no one rid me of Marwan's daughter?" Umayr heard this and the evening of that night he attacked and killed her. Next morning, he went to the Messenger of God (SAAS), and said, "Messenger of God, I have killed her!" He responded,
"Umayr, you have given help both to God and to His Messenger." Umayr asked, "Messenger of God, will I be held accountable for what happened to her?"
He replied, "Not even two goats will clash about her!"

Umayr returned to his people who were in disagreement about her death;
she had five sons. Umayr said, "It was I who killed her! Come at me, all of you; don't wait!" That was the first day that Islam gained strength among Banu Khadija. A large number of them became Muslims when they recognized the power of Islam.

Ibn Islaq went on to refer to those who captured Thumama b. Uthai al-Hanafi and the circumstances relating to his acceptance of Islam. We have referred to this above in relating authentic ahadith.

Ibn Hisham stated that it was in relation to him that the Messenger of God (SAAS) said, "The Believer eats with one stomach, the unbeliever with seven!"
This was because of the little food Thumama ate after his acceptance of Islam.
He related how, having left Medina, he entered Mecca to make the 'umra, reciting the talbiyya. The Meccans forbade him from doing this, but he disobeyed them, threatening to cut off their supply of grain from Yamama. When he returned home there, he did deny them grain until the Messenger of God (SAAS) wrote to him and he restored it to them. A man of Banu Hanifa said, "Among us is he who recited the talbiyya in Mecca, though forbidden, in spite of Abu Sufyan, in the sacrosanct months."

He sent Alqama b. Mujazziz al-Mudlij to take vengeance for his brother Waqqas b. Mujazziz the day he was killed at Dhul Qarad. He asked permission from the Messenger of God (SAAS) to follow their tracks; he gave it and appointed him commander of a force of men. When they were on their way, he ordered a group of them to come to him, and he appointed ‘Abd Allâh b. Ḥudhâfa to be their leader. He liked to joke. He lit a fire and ordered the men to enter it. When some were about to do so, he said, “I was only joking!” When this reached the Messenger of God (SAAS), he commented, “Do not obey someone who orders you to disobey God.”

The hadith on this subject was related by Ibn Hishâm from al-Darâwardi, from Muhammad b. ‘Amr b. Alqama, from ‘Amr b. al-Ḥakam b. Thawbân, from Abû Sa‘îd al-Khudrî.

He sent Kurz b. Jabir to fight those men who had come to Medina. They were of Qays of (Banû) Bajîla. They found Medina unhealthy and became sick and so the Messenger of God (SAAS) told them to go out to his camels and to drink their urine and their milk. When they recovered, they butchered Yasâr, the freed-man of the Messenger of God (SAAS), who was the camels’ herdsman and stuck thorns into his eyes. They then took away all the milch-camels. The Messenger of God (SAAS) sent after them Kurz b. Jabir with a force of his men and they brought them back from Bajîla following the return of the Messenger of God (SAAS) from the expedition to Dhu Qarad. He gave his order and their hands and feet were cut off and their eyes were gouged out.

It may well be that these are the men referred to in the well-accepted hadith of Anas – a group of eight men of ‘Ukî or ‘Urayna who came to Medina with the same consequences. It seems obvious that these were they; we have narrated their story at length above. Should they have been different men, we have given here the major information given by Ibn Hishâm. God knows best.

Ibn Hishâm went on to relate the expedition (to Yemen) made twice by ‘Ali b. Abû Ṭâlib. Ibn Hishâm quotes Abû ‘Amr al-Madani as stating, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) dispatched ‘Ali to Yemen and Khâlid with a different force. He had stated that if the two forces were to combine, then ‘Ali b. Abû Ṭâlib was to be their commander.

He (Ibn Hishâm) went on, “Ibn Is’hâq made reference to the dispatch of Khâlid, but did not include it in the total of expeditions and raids dispatched by the Messenger of God (SAAS). The number of these he should have given would be 39.”

Ibn Is’hâq stated, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) dispatched Usâma b. Zayd b. Ḥâritha to Syria. He ordered him to have the cavalry patrol the al-Balqâ‘ and al-Darûm regions of Syria. The men equipped themselves and it was the initial muhâjirûn who accompanied Usâma.”

Ibn Hishâm added, “This was the last expedition dispatched by the Messenger of God (SAAS).”

Al-Bukhârî stated that Ismâ‘îl related to him, quoting Malik, from ‘Abd Allâh b. Dinâr, from ‘Abd Allâh b. ‘Umar, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) sent out a force under the command of Usâma b. Zayd, but that the people criticized his appointment. The Prophet (SAAS) therefore arose and said, “Your criticism of his leadership is similar to your earlier criticism of his father's appointment to command. The former was, by God, qualified for command and one of those most beloved by me. And this man is also of those most loved by me.”

Al-Tirmidhi narrated it from a hadith of Malik. He categorized it as a hadith that was sahih hasan.

A large number of the senior initial muhajirin and ansār took part in this army. The most important of these was ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb. Those who say that Ābu Bakr was among them are in error. The illness of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was increasing in severity while the force was encamped at al-Jurf. The Prophet (ṢAAS) at that time appointed Ābu Bakr to lead the prayer, as will be recounted. How, then, could he have been in the army while being the imām for the Muslim community, by permission of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), from the lord of the worlds? Even if it be supposed that he had proceeded out with them, the law-giver (the Prophet) selected him out from among them by appointing him to leadership of the prayer, one of the most important of the pillars of Islam. And when the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died, Ābu Bakr sought ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb’s exclusion (from the expedition) from ‘Usāma, so the latter allowed ‘Umar to remain at the side of Ābu Bakr. Ābu Bakr, “the trusting”, then led ‘Usāma’s force (for a short distance to the outskirts of Medina).

THE VERSES IN THE QUR’ĀN AND AHADĪTH FOREWARNING OF THE DEATH OF THE MESSENGER OF GOD (ṢAAS), AND HOW THE ILLNESS FROM WHICH HE DIED COMMENCED.

God Almighty stated, “You (will be) dead and they shall be dead. Then, on resurrection day, you will be contending with one another before your Lord” (ṣūrat al-Zumar; XXXIX, v.30–31). And, “We ordained no immortality for any person before you; and if you die, shall they be immortal?” (ṣūrat al-Anbiyyā‘; XXI, v.34). And, “Every soul will taste death, and you shall only be fully paid your wages on the day of resurrection. Those drawn away from the fire and brought into paradise will be those who succeed. Life on earth is nothing but the baggage of vanity” (ṣūrat Al ‘Imrān; III, v.285).

The Almighty also stated, “Muḥammad is nothing but a messenger; messengers have passed away before him. If he dies or is killed, you might turn away on your heels. Whoever runs away on his heels will cause no harm to God. And God will reward the grateful” (ṣūrat Al ‘Imrān; III, v.144). It was this verse that Ābu Bakr, “the trusting”, recited on the day of the death of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). When the people heard it, it was as though they had not done so previously.

The Almighty also stated, “(Remember) when God’s help and the victory came and you saw the people entering God’s religion in droves. Give joyful praise to your Lord, and seek His forgiveness. He is forgiving” (ṣūrat al-‘Naṣr; CX, v.13).
Umar b. al-Khattab and Ibn ‘Abbās stated, “This was (referring to) the death of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), of which he was being informed” Ibn ‘Umar stated, “This was revealed in the middle part of Tishrin, during the ḥijjat al-wada‘, ‘the farewell pilgrimage’. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) knew it meant farewell and he delivered to the people an address in which he gave them instruction and prohibition.” This famous address was as given above.

Jābir stated, “I saw the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), casting at the pillars. He stopped and said, ‘You should take your rites and ceremonies from me. I might perhaps not perform the pilgrimage after this year.’”

The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said the following to his daughter Fāṭimah, “Gabriel would review the Qurʾān with me once each year; he did so twice this year. I can only think that this means the approach of my death.”

In the saḥīḥ collection of al-Bukhārī, it is narrated from a hadīth of Abū Bakr b. ’Ayyāsh, from Abū Ḥusayn, from Abū Ṣāliḥ, that Abū Hurayra stated, “Each month of Ramaḍān the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) would practise ḥittāj, withdraw into seclusion (in the mosque) for ten days. The year he died he so withdrew for twenty days. The Qurʾān was reviewed to him each Ramaḍān; the year he died, it was reviewed to him twice.”

“While the people were engaged in that, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) began to suffer from that illness in the course of which God took him away to that mercy and honour He wished for him. This occurred shortly before the end of Ṣafar or early in Rabi‘ al-Awwal.

“When the first symptoms appeared from which the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) suffered, so I have been informed, he went out to Baqī‘ al-Gharqad in the middle of the night and prayed for forgiveness for them (the dead), then returned home to his family. Next morning and from that day on he began suffering pain.

“Abū al-Ḥakam, from Ābd Allāh b. Ja‘far related to me, from ‘Ubayy b. Jubayr, the freed-man of al-Ḥakam, from ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAmr b. al-ʿĀs, from Abū Muwayhīhība, the freed-man of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), who said, ‘The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) sent me out in the middle of the night, saying, ‘Abū Muwayhīhība, I have been ordered to ask for forgiveness for those in this Baqī‘. So come with me.’

“I left with him and when he halted among them, he said, “Peace be upon you, you people in the graves! May you be content that you do not experience the same as people here. Troubles come like dark portions of the night, following one another in succession, the last being worse than the first.”

136. The cemetery outside Medina.
“He then came over to me and said, “Abū Muwayhiba, I have been given the keys to the treasuries of the world, remaining here a long time and the (going to) paradise. I have been given the choice between this and meeting my Lord and (going to) paradise (soon).”

“I said, “By my parents’ lives, choose the keys of the world’s treasuries, long life here, and then paradise.” He replied, “No, Abū Muwayhiba, I have, by God, chosen to meet my Lord and paradise.”

“He then proceeded to pray for forgiveness for the dead of al-Baqī’, then left. And so began the illness in which God took him.”

None of the authors of the books (of traditions) gave this. However, Aḥmad did narrate it from Ya‘qūb b. Ibrāhīm, from his father, who quoted Muḥammad b. Ishaq.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Abū al-Nadr related to him, quoting al-Ḥakam b. Fudayl, quoting Ya‘qūb b. ʿAṣār, from Ḫubayr b. Yahyā, who quoted Abū Muwayhiba as saying, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was ordered to pray for the dead at al-Baqī’. He prayed for them three times and after the third, he said, ‘Abū Muwayhiba, saddle up my mount.’

“He rode while I walked until we reached them. He then dismounted. I held the mount, while he stood” — or he said “he remained standing” — “over them. He then said, ‘May your present state make you more happy than the people are. Troubles come like dark portions of the night, following one another in succession, the last being worse than the first. So may your present state make you more happy than the people are.’

“He then came back and said, ‘Abū Muwayhiba, I have been awarded’ — or he said ‘asked to choose between’ — ‘the keys of what will be conquered by my nation after myself and then paradise, or meeting my Lord.’

“I said, ‘By my father and mother, choose us!’ He replied, ‘To reverse what God intended? I have chosen to meet my Lord!’

“And it was no more than seven or eight days thereafter that he died.”

ʿAbd al-Razzaq stated, from Maʿmar, from Ibn Tawūs, who quoted his father as saying, “I was given aid through terror and was awarded the treasuries. Then I was given the choice between remaining (alive) to see what would be conquered for my people and acceleration (of my death). I chose acceleration.”

Al-Bayhaqī stated, “This hadīth is mursal; it does testify to the hadīth of Abū Muwayhiba.”

Ibn Ishaq stated, “Yaʿqūb b. Utba related to me, from al-Zuhri, from Ubayd Allāh b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Utba, from Ibn Masʿūd, who quoted ʿAʾisha as stating, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) returned from the cemetery and found me suffering from a pain in my head. I was complaining, ‘O my head!’ He commented, ‘I swear by God, ʿAʾisha, I’m the one with the headache!’ He then asked, ‘Would you mind if you died before me, and I were to stand over you, put you in your shroud, pray over you and bury you?’ I replied, ‘I imagine that if you did that you would return to my house and celebrate a wedding night there with one of your wives!

"The Messenger of God (SAAS) smiled. The pain persisted in him while he visited in turn his wives. He was overcome by it in the home of Maymūna. He summoned his wives and asked their permission to be nursed in my home; this was agreed.

"The Messenger of God (SAAS) then left, being helped along by two men of his household, al-Fadl b. 'Abbās and another man. He had his head bound and he was dragging his feet when he entered my house."

'Ubayd Allāh stated, "I related this to Ibn 'Abbās and he said, 'Do you know who the other man was? That was 'Ali b. Abū Ta'lib."

This hadith has testimonials that will come shortly.

Al-Bayhaqī stated that al-Hakīm informed him, quoting al-Asamm, quoting Ahmad b. 'Abd al-Jabbār, from Yūnus b. Bulayr, from Muhammad b. Ishāq, quoting Ya'qūb b. Utba, from al-Zuhri, from 'Ubayd Allāh b. 'Abbās, who quoted 'A'isha as having said, "The Messenger of God (SAAS) came in to me while suffering from a headache while I was complaining about my own head. I said, 'O my head!' He said, 'I swear by God, 'A'isha, I'm the one with headache!'

"He then said, 'Would you mind, if you were to die before myself, if I were to take care of you, prayed over you and buried you?' I replied, 'I swear by God, I believe that if that happened, you would closet yourself with one of your wives in my house as soon as the day was over!' The Messenger of God (SAAS) laughed."

"His pain persisted and became severe while, visiting his wives in turn, he was at the house of Maymūna. His family assembled, and al-Abbās said, 'We think the Messenger of God has pleurisy. Let's give him medicine through the corner of his mouth.' They did so and the Messenger of God (SAAS) came to. 'Who did this?' he asked. 'It was your uncle al-Abbās; he is afraid you have pleurisy.' The Messenger of God (SAAS) said, 'It is from Satan! God would never have inflicted me with it! You should not omit giving medicine to anyone in my house except for my uncle al-Abbās!' And all the household were given medicine - even Maymūna, who was fasting. That was done in the sight of the Messenger of God (SAAS).

"Thereafter he asked permission of his wives to be nursed in my house; he received permission. So he left, between al-Abbās and another man" - she did not name him - "his feet dragging on the ground."

'Ubayd Allāh said that Ibn 'Abbās stated, "The other man was 'Ali b. Abū Ta'lib."

Al-Bukhārī stated that Sa'id b. Ufayr related to him, quoting al-Layth, quoting Aqīl, from Ibn Shihāb, who quoted 'Ubayd Allāh b. 'Abbās Allāh b. Utba as stating that 'A'isha, the wife of the Prophet (SAAS) said, "When the Messenger of God (SAAS) became ill and his pain intensified, he asked permission from his wives to be nursed in my home. And he was given permission. He left between two men, dragging his feet on the ground between ‘Abbas, Ibn ‘Abd al-Muṭṭalib, that is, and another man.”

‘Ubayd Allah said, “I told ‘Abd Allah” — meaning Ibn ‘Abbas — “what ‘A’isha had said. He asked me, ‘Do you know who was the other man whom ‘A’isha did not name?’ I replied, ‘No.’ He said, ‘It was Alī.”

‘A’isha, wife of the Messenger of God (SAAS), used to relate, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) entered my house and his pain was severe, he said, ‘Pour over me from seven water-skins the tops of which have not been untied so that I will (be well enough to) give advice to people.’

“We seated him in a tub belonging to Ḥafṣa, the wife of the Prophet (SAAS). Then we set about pouring over him water from those skins until he gestured to us with his hand saying, ‘You have done it now.’

“He then went outside to the people, spoke a prayer for them and made them an address.”

Al-Bukhārī also narrated it in other places in his saḥīḥ collection. Muslim gave it with various lines of transmission from al-Zuhri.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Ismā‘īl related to him, quoting Sulaymān b. Bihāl, quoting Hishām b. ‘Urwa, quoting his father, who quoted ‘A’isha as having said that the Messenger of God (SAAS) would ask during the illness in which he died, “Where will I be tomorrow? Where will I be tomorrow?” He was referring to ‘A’isha’s day (for his visit to her). His wives permitted him to be wherever he wished, so he was in ‘A’isha’s house until he died there.

(The account narrates that) “‘A’isha, may God be pleased with her, stated, ‘He died on the day he would come to visit me in my house. God took him while his head lay between my breasts and my throat. His saliva mixed with mine.’”

She went on, “‘Abd al-Ra‘ūf b. Ḥabīb came in carrying a tooth-pick with which he was cleaning his teeth. The Messenger of God (SAAS) looked over at him and I asked ‘Abd al-Ra‘ūf, ‘Give me the tooth-pick, ‘Abd al-Ra‘ūf.’ He gave it to me, and I chewed and softened it and gave it to the Messenger of God (SAAS). He cleansed his teeth with it while he rested against my chest.”

Al-Bukhārī is alone in giving this from this line of transmission.

Al-Bukhārī stated that ‘Abd Allah b. Yūsuf informed him, quoting al-Layth, quoting Ibn al-Had, from ‘Abd al-Raḥmān b. al-Qāsim, from his father, who quoted ‘A’isha as saying, “The Prophet (SAAS) died while between my breast and my chin. And I no longer abhor the death throes of anyone after (those of) the Prophet (SAAS).”

Al-Bukhārī stated that Hibban related to him, quoting ‘Abd Allah, quoting Yūnus, from Ibn Shihāb, who said, “Urwa informed me that ‘A’isha narrated to him that whenever the Messenger of God (SAAS) was in pain, he would breathe over himself, recite the al-mu‘awwidhāt (137) and wipe his hands over his body. And so when he was in pain during the illness from which he died, I set about reciting 137. The final two sūrat of the Qur’ān.

the al-mu’awwidhāt over him, breathing over him as he had, and using the hand of the Prophet (SAAS) to wipe over him.”

Muslim narrated this from a hadith of Ibn Wahb, from Yūnūs b. Yazīd al-Ayyīl, from al-Zuhrī. Al-Fāllās and Muslim gave it from Mūhammad b. Ḥātim and all of them.

It is established in both sahih collections from a hadith of Abū ʿAwāna, from Fīrās, from al-Shaḥī, from Mārūq, who quoted ʿA’īsha as having stated, “The wives of the Messenger of God (SAAS) all assembled around him; none of them was left out. Fāṭima came in, her footsteps not missing the style of his own walk. He said, ‘Welcome indeed to my daughter!’ He sat her down at his right, or his left. He then spoke something confidentially to her, and she wept. He then spoke to her quietly again, and she laughed. I commented to her, ‘The Messenger of God speaks secrets to you alone, and yet you cry!’

“When she arose, I asked her, ‘Tell me what he spoke to you.’ She replied, ‘I could not disclose a secret of the Messenger of God.’ After he had died, I asked her, ‘I ask you, by my rights over you, to tell me.’ She replied, ‘Now I can do so. The first comment he made in confidence to me was, “Gabriel would review the Qurʾān with me once each year. This year he has done so twice. I can see this only as meaning the approach of my death. Fear God and be patient; I am a worthy predecessor to you.” And so I wept. He then whispered to me again, saying, “Will it not please you to be mistress of the women of the Believers, or mistress of (all) the women of this nation?” I laughed.’”

This hadith has various lines of transmission from ʿA’īsha.

Al-Bukhārī narrated from ʿAlī b. ʿAbd Allāh and al-Fāllās, as did Muslim b. Mūhammad b. Ḥātim, all of them quoting from Yahyā b. Saʿīd al-Qattān, from Sufyān al-Thawrī, from Mūsā b. Abū ʿA’īsha, from ʿUbayd Allāh b. ʿAbd Allāh, from ʿA’īsha, who said, “We poured medicine into the corner of the mouth of the Messenger of God (SAAS), during his illness and he began gesturing to us not to do so. We said, ‘It’s just the dislike of a sick person for his medicine.’ When he recovered somewhat, he asked, ‘Did I not forbid you to put medicine in my mouth?’ We replied, ‘(We thought it) dislike of a sick person for his medicine.’ He then said, ‘Let all in the house have medicine poured into their mouths while I look on – except for Abū ʿAbdās who did not witness what you did.’”

Al-Bukhārī stated, “Ibn Abū al-Zinād narrated it from Hishām, from his father, from ʿA’īsha, who quoted the Prophet (SAAS).”

Al-Bukhārī also stated that Yūnūs stated that al-Zuhrī quoted ʿUrwa as saying, “ʿA’īsha stated, ‘The Prophet (SAAS) would say during the illness in which he died, “ʿA’īsha, I still suffer pain from the food I ate at Khaybar. At this time I sense my aorta being severed by that poison.”’”

Al-Bukhārī gave this as being mušallaq.

The hāfiz al-Bayhaqī gave it from al-Ḥākim, from Abū Bakr b. Mūhammad b. ʿAbdād b. Yaḥyā al-ʾAshqar, from Yūnūs b. Mūsā, from Abū Ḥamūd b. ʿAbd Mūṭaḥar, then to ʿAbdās from Yūnūs b. Yazīd al-Ayyīl, from al-Zuhrī.
Al-Bayhaqi stated that al-I‘akim informed him, quoting al-A‘ashm, quoting Ahmad b. ‘Abd al-Jabbar, from Abū Mu‘awiya, from al-A‘mash, from ‘Abd Allāh b. Murra, from Abū al-‘ᾲwās, from ‘Abd Allāh b. Mas‘ūd, who said, “I would prefer to swear nine times over that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was murdered than to do so once that he was not killed! That is because God assigned him to be a prophet and a martyr as well.”

Al-Bukhari stated that Isḥāq related to him, quoting Bishr b. Shu‘ayb b. Abū Hamza, quoting his father, from al-Zuhri, who said, “‘Abd Allāh b. Ka‘b b. Malik al-Anṣārī – Ka‘b b. Malik having been one of the three men who had received forgiveness¹³⁸ – informed me that ‘Abd Allāh b. ‘Abbas told him when ‘Alī b. Abū Ṭalib came out after having been with the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), during the illness in which he died, people asked him, ‘Abu al-‘ᾲasan! How is the Messenger of God, doing this morning?’ He replied, ‘Thanks be to God, he is recovered.’

“‘Abbas b. ‘Abd al-Malik took ‘Alī by the hand and said, ‘Three days from now, I swear by God, you will be ‘slave of the staff’.¹³⁹ I swear, I can see that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) will die from this illness. I well know how members of the ‘Abd al-Muṭṭalib family look when near death. Let us go to the Messenger of God, and ask him to whom rule will go. If to us, then we will know it; if to someone other than us, we can tell him and he (the Prophet (ṢAAS)) can tell him to care for us.’

“‘Alī stated, ‘I swear by God, if we asked the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) for it (the rule) and he refused it, then the people would never give it to us after him. So I swear, I’ll not ask the Messenger of God for it.’”

Al-Bukhārī is alone in giving this.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Qutayba related to him, quoting Sufyān, from Sulaymān al-Ahwal, from Sa‘īd b. Jubayr, who said, “Ibn ‘Abbas stated, ‘What a terrible Thursday that was! The illness of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) worsened. Then he asked, “Bring me writing materials with which I can write you a document after which Yūsuf will never go astray.” People disputed over this – and there should never be disputation in the presence of a prophet. Some said, “What is wrong with him; is he delirious? Question him.” So they went to him to ask him. He told them, “Leave me alone; my present condition is better than that to which you invite me.” He then advised them to do three things. He said, “Remove the unbelievers from the Arabian peninsula. Treat with dignity delegations as you saw me treat them.” And he either did not speak the third request, or he spoke it but I have forgotten it.’”

Al-Bukhārī also narrated it elsewhere; Muslim gave it from a ḥadīth of Sufyān b. ‘Uyayna.

Al-Bukhārī then stated that ‘Alī b. ‘Abd Allāh related to him, quoting ‘Abd al-Razzāq, quoting Ma‘mar, from al-Zuhri, from ‘Ubayd Allāh b. ‘Abd Allāh, ¹³⁸ A reference to the three Muslims who had held back from participation in the attack on Tabuk ordered by the Prophet (ṢAAS). See above, Vol. IV, pages 29–33.
¹³⁹ Under a new ruler, that is.
from Ibn 'Abbâs, who said, “When death was close for the Messenger of God (SAAS), and there were men present in his home, he said, ‘Come close; I will write a document for you after which you will never go astray.’ Some of them then said, ‘(But) the Messenger of God is overcome by illness, and you have the Qurân. God’s Book is enough for us.’

“The household differed among themselves and disputed. Some said, ‘Go over near him and let him write something after which you will never stray.’ Others said the contrary. When their disputation increased, the Messenger of God (SAAS) told them, ‘Go away!’

‘Ubayd Allah said, ‘Ibn ‘Abbâs stated, “It was truly disastrous that, due to their noise and disputation, the Messenger of God (SAAS) was prevented from writing that document for them.””

Muslim narrated it from Muhammâd b. Ra‘î, as did ‘Abd b. Hûmâyîd, both quoting from ‘Abd al-Razzâq in the same way. Al-Bukhârî gave it in various places in his hadîth collection from a hadîth of Ma‘mar and Yûnûs, from al-Zuhrî.

This hadîth has served to feed the imaginations of certain foolish persons, who advocate improper innovative practices. These adherents of the Shi‘a and others, all claimed that the Messenger of God (SAAS) wished to write in the document referred to above what they purpose in their own statements. This claim of theirs constitutes adherence to reasoning by allegory and disregard for what is fully established.140

Orthodox scholars accept what is fully established and reject what might be viewed as allegorical. This is the methodology of those firmly rooted in knowledge, al-râsîkhûna fi al-‘ilm, as God, the Almighty and Glorious characterized them in His Book (sûrat Al ‘Imrân; III, v.7).

This area is one of those where the feet of many of the noisesome slip. Orthodox scholars, however, follow no ‘school of thought’ but pursue the truth alone, moving with it along whatever path it leads.

Whatever the Messenger of God (SAAS) wished to write came previously in those hadîths that lend themselves to clear and unambiguous interpretation.

Imâm ‘Abd said that Mu‘âmmil related to him, quoting Na‘îf, from Ibn ‘Amr, quoting Ibn Abû Mulayka, from ʿÂishâ who said, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) was suffering from that illness from which he died, he said, ‘Summon Abû Bakr and his son, so that no one will lust after, or aspire to, Abû Bakr’s role.’ He went on, ‘God and the Believers reject that.’ He said this twice.”

ʿÂishâ is quoted as then having said, “And God and the Believers did indeed reject that!”

‘Abd is alone in giving this from this line of transmission.

Ahmâd stated that Abû Mu‘âwiya related to him, quoting ‘Abd al-Raḥmân b. Abû Bakr al-Qurashi, from Ibn Abû Mulayka, who quoted ʿÂishâ, who said, 140. The Arabic terms are mutashâbih and mubkam.

“When the illness of the Messenger of God (SAAS) worsened, he told 'Abd al-Rahmân, Abu Bakr's son, ‘Bring me a shoulder bone’ or a tablet so that I can write for Abu Bakr a document about which no one can dispute.’ When 'Abd al-Rahmân went to do this, he said, ‘God and the Believers reject there being any disagreement over you, Abu Bakr!’”

Aḥmad is also alone in giving this from this line of transmission.

Al-Bukhârî narrated from Yahlîd b. Yâhîyâ, from Sulaymân b. Bîlâl, from Yahlîd b. Sa‘îd, from al-Qâsîm b. Muḥammad, who quoted ‘A‘îshah as stating that the Messenger of God (SAAS) said, “I plan to send for Abu Bakr and his son to make a covenant, lest people argue or have ambitions.’ He went on, ‘Either God rejects or the Believers impel, or God impels and the Believers reject.’”

In the saḥîh collection of al-Bukhârî and in that of Muslim, there is a hadîth of Ibrâhîm b. Sa‘îd, from his father, from Muḥammad b. Jûbâyr b. Mû’tam, who quoted his father as saying, “A woman came to the Messenger of God (SAAS), and he told her to return to him again. She asked, ‘But supposing I came and did not find you?’ – she seemed to be implying his death. He replied, ‘If you do not find me, then go to Abu Bakr.’”

It seems obvious – though God knows best – that she only said that to the Messenger of God (SAAS), during the illness from which he died.

On the Thursday, five days before he died, the Messenger of God (SAAS) had delivered an address in which he had asserted the superiority of Abu Bakr, “the trusting”, over the other Companions, as part of his direction that he (Abu Bakr) lead them (in prayer).

It may perhaps be that this address should be viewed as a substitution for what he intended to write in the document.

He had washed himself prior to making that noble address. They had sprinkled over him water from seven water-skins, the openings of which had not been untied. This is referred to (in the saḥîh collections) in the chapter, Seeking a cure by seven (washings); another hadîth referring to this are also given elsewhere than in this section.

The point here is that the Messenger of God (SAAS) washed, went out and performed prayer with the people, and then made an address to them. This is shown above in the hadîth quoting ‘A‘îshah, may God be pleased with her.

THE AHâDÎTH MAKING REFERENCE TO THAT.

Al-Bayhaqî stated that al-Ḥâkim informed him, quoting al-Āṣâmm, from Aḥmad b. ‘Abd al-Jabbâr, from Yûnûs b. Bûkayr, from Muḥammad b. Ishaq, from al-Zuhri, from Ayyûb b. Bashir, who stated, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) said during his illness, ‘Pour water over me from seven water-skins from seven different wells so that I can go out and make a covenant with the people.’”

141. Paper not yet having been invented, sources tell us that Arabs wrote on large bones and pieces of leather, etc.
“They did so and he went out and sat upon the minbar. The first thing he did, after praising and thanking God, was to refer to his Companions who had attended the battle of Uhud; he asked God’s forgiveness for them and said a prayer for them. He then said, ‘Muhajirun, you have become very numerous while the ansar have remained as they were and have not increased in number. They are my saviours, those with whom I sought refuge. Honour them for their exploits and disregard their shortcomings.’

“He went on, ‘People, one servant of God has been given by God to choose between what is upon earth and what is with God. And he has chosen what is with God.’

“Abu Bakr, may God be pleased with him, was one among the people there who understood this and he wept, saying, ‘We would redeem you with ourselves, our children and our possessions!’ But the Messenger of God (SAAS) said, ‘Take it easy, Abu Bakr! Look at these doors leading in to the mosque and close them all off, except for the one from Abu Bakr’s house. I know of no one whom I consider a finer Companion than him.’”

This hadith is mursal, incomplete in its line; there are many testimonies to it. Al-Waqidi stated that Farwa b. Zabid b. Taws related to him, from ‘A’isha, daughter of Sa’d, from Umm Dharr, who quoted Umm Salama, wife of the Prophet (SAAS), as saying, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) went outside wearing a piece of cloth around his head. When he sat down on the minbar people stared hard at the minbar and flocked around him. He said, ‘By Him in whose hand is my soul, I am at this hour standing at the hawd, “the pool”.’ He then spoke the shahada. When he had finished this, the first words he spoke were to ask forgiveness for the martyrs killed at Uhud. He then said, ‘One servant of God has been asked to choose between this world and that with God; and this servant has chosen that with God.’

“Abu Bakr wept; we were surprised at his weeping. He said, ‘By my father and my mother! We would redeem you with our fathers, our mothers, ourselves and our possessions!’ It was the Messenger of God (SAAS), who had been given the choice, and Abu Bakr was the most aware of us what the Messenger of God (SAAS) had meant. The latter then said to him, ‘Take it easy, Abu Bakr!’”

Imam Ahmad stated that Abu ‘Amir related to him, quoting Fulayh, from Sālim Abū al-Nadr, from Bishr b. Sa’id, who quoted Abū Sa’īd as saying, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) made an address to the people and said, ‘God had a worshipper make a choice between this world and that with him. That worshipper chose that with God.’

“Abu Bakr wept. We were surprised at his weeping at the Messenger of God (SAAS), having made a reference to a ‘worshipper’. For it was the Messenger of God (SAAS) who had been given the choice and Abu Bakr was the most aware of us what he meant. The Messenger of God (SAAS) said, ‘The person most faithful to myself in his friendship and his wealth is Abu Bakr. If I were to take any other than God as my Companion, I would so take Abū Bakr. However, (what I do have with him) is the companionship of Islam and his love. Every door in the mosque has been shut except that of Abū Bakr.”

Al-Bukhārī narrated it thus from a hadith of Abū Āmir al-ʾAqādī.

Imām Aḥmad narrated it from Yūnūs, from Fulayḥ, from Sālim b. Abū al-Naḍr, from ʿUbayd b. Ḥunayn and Bishr b. Saʿīd, from Abū Saʿīd.

Al-Bukhārī narrated it similarly, as did Muslim, from a hadith of Fulayḥ; Malik b. Anas gave it from Sālim, from Bishr b. Saʿīd and ʿUbayd b. Ḥunayn, both of whom quoted from Abū Saʿīd in similar terms.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Abū al-Walīd related to him, quoting Hishām, quoting Abū ʿAwāna, from ʿAbd al-Malik, from Ibn Abū al-Muʿalla, from his father (who said) “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) one day made an address and said, ‘A man has been given by his Lord to choose between living on earth so long as he wishes and eating on earth whatever he wishes, and between meeting his Lord. And he has chosen to meet his Lord.’

“Abū Bakr wept. The Companions of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) asked one another, ‘Aren’t you surprised at this sheikh and the Messenger of God, referring to a fine man to whom God has given the choice of remaining on earth or meeting his Lord and him choosing to meet his Lord?’ For it was Abū Bakr who was most aware of what the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had meant. And Abū Bakr responded, ‘No, we will redeem you with our possessions and our children!’ And so the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, ‘No person is more faithful to us in his friendship and generosity than (Abū Bakr) Ibn Abū Quḥāfa.
And were I to take someone as my Companion, that person would be Ibn Abū Quḥāfa. However, there (is between us) love, brotherly feelings and faith. Your friend is the companion of God, Almighty and Glorious is He.’”

Aḥmad is alone in giving this. The correct name in the above line of transmission is “Ibn Saʿīd b. al-Muʿalla”. However, God knows best.

The ḥāfiẓ al-Bayhaqī narrated through Iṣḥāq b. Ibrāhīm – he being Ibn Rahawayh – who quoted Zakariyyāʾ b. ʿAdī, quoting ʿUbayd Allāh b. Ṭামr al-Raqī, from Zayd b. Abū Anṣār, from Ṭāmr b. Ṭarīq, from Ṭāmr Allāh b. al-Hārith, who quoted Jundab as having said that he heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) saying, five days before his death, “From (all of) you I have had brothers and friends. I release each companion from his companionship. If I were to take from my nation one companion, then that would be Abū Bakr. My Lord has taken me as His Companion, as He did Abraham. A people who came prior to yourselves treated the graves of their prophets and holy men as mosques.
Do not treat graves as mosques; I prohibit you from doing that.”

Muslim narrated this in his saḥīḥ collection, from Iṣḥāq b. Rahawayh in similar terms.

This day that preceded his death by five days was that Thursday referred to

We have given this address from Ibn ʿAbbās. The ḥāfiẓ al-Bayhaqī stated Muḥammad b. Iṣḥāq, quoting Yūsuf b. Yaʿqūb – he being Ibn ʿAwāna al-Isfaraynī – who said, “Muḥammad b. ʿAbū Bakr related to us, quoting Wahb b. Ṣaʿr, quoting his father, who said, ‘I heard Yaʿīṣ b. Ḥakīm relate from Ikrima, who quoted Ibn ʿAbbās as saying, “The Prophet (ṣaṣṣ) went outside during the illness from which he died with his head bandaged by a piece of cloth. He mounted the minbar, gave praise and thanks to God, then said, ‘Not one of the people has been more faithful to me with both himself and his possessions than ʿAbū Bakr. If I were taking any one of the people as a companion, that person would be ʿAbū Bakr. However, (what I have with him) is the companionship of Islam, which is best. Close off from me every entry-way into the mosque except that of ʿAbū Bakr.’””

Al-Bukhārī narrated it from ʿUbayd Allah b. Muḥammad al-Juʿfī, from Wahb b. Ṣaʿr b. Ḥazīm, from his father. In the words of the Prophet (ṣaṣṣ), “Close off from me every khawja, ‘entry-way’” – by which he meant the small doors into the mosque except that of ʿAbū Bakr”, he was making a reference to the caliphate. That is, so that he (ʿAbū Bakr) could pass through it to lead the prayer with the Muslims.

Al-Bukhārī also narrated it from the hadīth of ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. Sulaymān b. Ḥanzāla b. al-Ghāsīl, from Ikrima, from Ibn ʿAbbās. He stated that the Messenger of God (ṣaṣṣ) came out in the illness from which he died with his head wrapped in a blackish cloth, with a mantle over his shoulders and sat upon the minbar. Ibn ʿAbbās went on to quote the address, including his counsel to the ansār, and concluded with the words, “It was the last meeting the Messenger of God (ṣaṣṣ) attended until he died.” By this he meant that this was the last address made by the Messenger of God (ṣaṣṣ).

This hadīth is also recorded (as follows) from an anomalous and different line of transmission from Ibn ʿAbbās; its wording is also ghārīb, “anomalous”.

“People assembled and the Messenger of God (ṣaṣṣ) arose to address them. He said, ‘To proceed, my absence from among you is near at hand. You will not longer see me among you in this place. I have been thinking that there was no one who could dispense with my affairs unless I do it among you (personally). If there is anyone whose back I have whipped, then here is my own back; let that person retaliate. Anyone whose money I took: here is mine from which he may take. Anyone against whose honour I have cursed should retaliate against me.
Let no man say, 'I fear rancour from the Messenger of God.' Indeed not; rancour is not my nature or my character. Those of you I like best are those who will either take their due if I am in their debt or release me therefrom, that I meet Almighty God, without any injustice on anyone because of me.'

"One of the men arose and said, 'Messenger of God, you have three dirhams of mine.' He replied, 'I will not give the lie to anyone, nor will I ask him to swear an oath. Why do I have your money?' The man answered, 'Don't you remember how once a beggar passed you and you gave me orders, so I awarded him three dirhams?' He said, 'Give it to him, Faḍl!' And he told the man to sit.

"The Messenger of God (SAAS) then returned to his original address and said, 'Anyone of you who still has anything resulting from deception should return it.' A man got up and said, 'Messenger of God, I have three dirhams I took by deceit.' 'Why did you do so?' he asked. 'I needed it,' he replied. 'Take it from him, Faḍl,' the Messenger of God (SAAS) said.

"He again reverted to his original address, then said, 'People, if any of you are troubled, stand and I will say a prayer for you.'

"One man arose and said, 'Messenger of God, I am a hypocrite, a liar and I sleep to excess.' 'Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb interjected, 'Confound you, fellow! God would have covered for you (your shortcomings) if only you had done so for yourself!' The Messenger of God (SAAS) said, 'Quiet, Ibn al-Khaṭṭāb! Scandal on earth is easier to bear than scandal in the afterlife! O God, favour him with veracity and faith and take away his sleep, if he so wishes that.'

"The Messenger of God (SAAS) then said, 'Umar is with me, and I with 'Umar. And the truth after me is with 'Umar.'"

In both the line of transmission and the text of this hadith there is much that is anomalous.

An Account of the order by the Messenger of God (SAAS), to Abū Bakr, 'The Trusting', to lead the prayer with all the Companions, in the presence of them all. And how the Messenger of God (SAAS) came out and prayed behind him, emulating him in some of the prayers, as we shall relate, and how the latter acted as imām for the former and for those of the Companions after him.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Yaṣṣūb related to him, quoting his father, from Ibn Ishāq, quoting Ibn Shihāb al-Zuhri, quoting 'Abd al-Malik b. Abū Bakr b. 'Abd al-Rahmān b. al-Hārith b. Hishām, from his father, from 'Abd Allah b. Hishām, from his father, from 'Abd Allah b. Zam'a b. al-Aswad b. al-Muṭṭalib b. Asad, who said, "When the illness of the Messenger of God (SAAS) grew more intense, I was there with him, along with a group of his Companions. Bilāl made the call to prayer and he (the Prophet (SAAS)) said, 'Tell someone to lead the people in prayer.'"
“So I went off and found ʿUmar among the people, Abū Bakr being absent. I said, ‘ʿUmar, get up and lead people in prayer.’ When ʿUmar made the declaration that ‘God is most Great!’ the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) heard his voice—he was a man with a loud voice—and asked, ‘Where is Abū Bakr? God refuses that, as do the Muslims! God refuses that, as do the Muslims!’

“He then sent for Abū Bakr and he came after ʿUmar had led that prayer. And then Abū Bakr prayed with the people.”

ʿAbd Allāh b. Zamʿa went on, “ʿUmar said to me, ‘Confound you! What have you done, Ibn Zamʿa! By God, I only thought that it was the Messenger of God who told me to do it. Otherwise, I would not have led the prayer.’ I replied, ‘I swear that was not what the Messenger of God ordered. However, when I did not see Abū Bakr, I thought you the most deserving man present at the prayer.’”

That is also how Abū Daʿūd narrated it, from the ḥadīth of Ibn Ishaq quoting al-Zuhri. Yūnus b. Bukayr narrated it from Ibn Ishaq, quoting Yaʿqūb b. ʿUrba, from Abū Bakr b. ʿAbd al-Rahmān, from ʿAbd Allāh b. Zamʿa, as above.

Abū Daʿūd stated that Ahmad b. ʿĀsī related to him, quoting Ibn Abū Fudayk, quoting Mūsā b. Yaʿqūb, from ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. Ishaq, from Ibn Shihab, from ʿUbayd Allāh b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUrba, (who said) that ʿAbd Allāh b. Zamʿa related to him the following account, “When the Prophet (ṢAAS) heard ʿUmar’s voice, he came out, so that his head could be seen looking out from his room. Then he exclaimed, ‘No! No! Only Ibn Abū Quḥāfa shall lead the people in prayer!’ He spoke this in anger.”

Al-Bukhārī stated that ʿUmar b. Ḥafṣ related to him, quoting his father, quoting al-ʿArmānī, from Ibrāhīm (who stated that) al-Aswād said, “We were with ʿAʾisha at her home and made reference to the assiduity (of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS)), to prayer and to her. She said, ‘When the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was suffering from the illness from which he died, and the time for the prayer arrived and Bilāl made the call to it, he said, ‘Tell Abū Bakr to lead the people in prayer!’ He was told, “Abū Bakr is a grievously sad man; if he were to stand up in your place, he would not be able to proceed with the prayer.” The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) repeated what he had said and the same response was given him. He said it a third time, then went on, “You women are like Joseph’s companions. Tell Abū Bakr to lead the prayer with the people!”

“Abū Bakr went out (to perform the prayer). The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) felt somewhat better and went out, being helped forward between two men; I seem to see now his two feet dragging in pain. Abū Bakr wanted to stay back, but the Prophet (ṢAAS) gestured to him to remain in his place. He was then brought and seated at his side.”

(Al-Bukhārī’s account continues) “Someone asked al-ʿArmānī, ‘Was the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) praying and Abū Bakr praying as he did, with the people then following the prayer of Abū Bakr?’ Using his head, al-ʿArmānī answered in the affirmative.”
Al-Bukhari went on, "Abū Da‘ūd narrated this in part from Shu‘ba. Abū Mu‘āwiya added the following to the account given by al-A‘mash, ‘He sat at the right side of Abū Bakr; Abū Bakr was standing as he prayed.’"

Al-Bukhari narrated this in several places in his work. Muslim, al-Nasā‘ī and Ibn Māja narrated it along various lines of transmission from al-A‘mash. In one of these al-Bukhari gave it from Qutayba; Muslim gave it from Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba and Yahyā b. Yahyā, from Abū Mu‘āwiya.

Al-Bukhari also stated that ‘Abd Allah b. Yūsuf related to him, quoting Malik, from Hishām b. ‘Urwa, from his father, from ʿA’isha, to the effect that she stated, ‘The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said during his illness, ‘Tell Abū Bakr to lead the prayer for the people.’’"

Ibn Shihab stated, ‘ʿUbayd Allah b. ʿAbd Allah quoted ‘A’isha as having said, ‘I opposed the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) in this; the only thing making me oppose him was my concern that the people would perceive Abū Bakr’s praying as an evil portent, though I knew that would be the case no matter who took his place. What I wanted was to have the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) deflect this away from Abū Bakr to someone else.’’"

In the Sahih collection of Muslim, it is stated in a hadith of ʿAbd al-Razzāq, from Ma‘mar, from al-Zuhri, who said, ʿHamza b. ʿAbd Allah b. ʿUmar informed me that ʿA’isha stated, ‘When the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) came into my house, he said, ‘Tell Abū Bakr to lead the people in the prayer.’ I said, ‘Messenger of God, Abū Bakr is a sensitive man; if he recites the Qurān, he will not be able to restrain his tears. What if you were to tell someone else?’’ ʿA’isha went on, ‘I swear by God, I only did this out of my dislike that the people would blame the first man who prayed in place of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) as an evil portent. I reiterated this two or three times, but he said, ‘Let Abū Bakr lead the prayer for the people. You women are like Joseph’s companions.’’"

In both Sahih collections there is a hadith of ʿAbd al-Malik b. ʿUmayr, from Abū Burda, from Abū Mūsā, who quoted his father as stating, ‘The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was ill and said, ‘Tell Abū Bakr to lead the prayer for the people.’ ʿA’isha said, ‘Messenger of God, Abū Bakr is a sensitive man; when he stands up in your place, he won’t be able to pray with the people.’ He said, ‘Tell Abū Bakr to lead the prayer for the people. You women are like Joseph’s companions.’ And so Abū Bakr did lead the prayer throughout the (remainder of) the life of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).’’

Imām Ahmad stated that ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. Mahdi related to him, quoting Zāida, from Mūsā b. Abū ʿA’isha, from ʿUbayd Allāh b. ʿAbd Allāh, who said, ‘I went in to ʿA’isha and asked, ‘Would you tell me about the illness of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS)?’ She replied, ‘Certainly. When he became very ill, he asked, ‘Have the people prayed?’ We replied, ‘No; they are waiting for you, Messenger of God.’ He then said, ‘Pour some water into the wash basin for me.’’ We did so. He then washed and made as if to get up to leave, but fainted.
When he recovered, he asked, “Have the people prayed?” We replied, ‘No; they are waiting for you, Messenger of God.” “Pour some water into the wash basin for me,” he asked. We did so and he washed and made as if to get up to leave, but fainted. When he recovered, he asked, “Have the people prayed?” We replied, “No; they are waiting for you, Messenger of God.” He said, “Pour some water into the wash basin for me,” he asked. We did so and he washed and made as if to get up to leave, but fainted. When he recovered, he asked, “Have the people prayed?” We replied, “No; they are waiting for you.””

‘A>isha went on, “The people were still in the mosque, waiting for the Messenger of God (SAAS), for the al-‘isha’ prayer. The Messenger of God (SAAS) sent a message to Abu Bakr saying that he should lead the people in prayer. Abü Bakr was a sensitive man and he asked, ‘Umar, you lead the people in prayer.’ He replied, ‘No; you are more worthy of that.’ But he did lead them in prayer for those days.

“Then the Messenger of God (SAAS) recovered somewhat and went out, being led between two men, one of them al-‘Abbâs, to perform the al-zuhr prayer. When Abü Bakr saw him, he went to move to the back, but the Messenger of God (SAAS) gestured to him not to do so and ordered the two men to seat him beside Abü Bakr. Abü Bakr began praying, standing while the Messenger of God (SAAS) prayed while seated.”

‘Ubayd Allah went on, “I then went in to Ibn ‘Abbas and said, ‘Should I tell you what ‘A‘isha told me about the illness of the Messenger of God (SAAS)?’ ‘Let’s hear it,’ he replied. So I did tell him, and he contradicted nothing. He did ask, ‘Did she name to you the man who was with al-‘Abbâs?’ I replied, ‘No.’ ‘That was ‘Ali,’ he said.”

Both al-Bukhâri and Muslim narrated it from Aḥmâd b. Yûnus, from Za‘ida. In one account, the text states, “Abû Bakr began praying with the prayer of the Messenger of God (SAAS) while standing; the people repeated the prayer delivered by Abû Bakr, while the Messenger of God (SAAS) remained seated.”

Al-Bayhaqî stated, “In this it is stated that the Prophet (SAAS) led that prayer and that Abû Bakr joined his prayer to it.”

He went on, “Al-Aswad and Urwa related it thus, from ‘A‘isha. Al-Arqâm b. Shu‘râhblî narrated it thus from Ibn ‘Abbâs.”

By this he is referring to the hadîth narrated by Imâm Aḥmâd, who stated that Yaḥyâ b. Zakâriyya’ b. Abû Za‘ida related to him, quoting his father, from Abû Ishâq, from al-Arqâm b. Shu‘râhblî, from Ibn ‘Abbâs, who said, “When the Prophet (SAAS) became sick, he ordered Abû Bakr to lead the people in prayer. He then recovered and went out. When Abû Bakr became aware of him, he wanted to withdraw, but the Prophet (SAAS) gestured to him and he sat down next to Abû Bakr, on his left. He commenced with the verse at which Abû Bakr, may God be pleased with him, had finished.”

He then narrated it again from Wâski, from Isrâ‘îl, from Abû Ishâq, from Arqâm, from Ibn ‘Abbâs at greater length.
Waki' stated one time, “Abū Bakr would follow the Prophet (SAAS) (in that prayer) and the people, Abū Bakr.”

Ibn Māja narrated it from 'Ali b. Muḥammad, from Waki', from Isrā'il, from Abū Isḥāq, from Arqam b. Shurahbil, from Ibn 'Abbās.

Imām Ahmad stated that Shabāba b. Sawwār related to him, quoting Shu'ba, from Nu'aym b. Abū Hind, from Abū Wā'il, from Masrūq, who quoted ʿĀʾisha as saying, “During the illness from which he died, the Messenger of God (SAAS), while seated, prayed behind Abū Bakr.”

Al-Tirmidhī and al-Nasāʾī narrated this from the ḥadīth of Shu'ba and al-Tirmidhī categorized it as hasan saḥīḥ.

Ahmad stated that Bakr b. Īsā related to him that he heard Shu'ba b. al-Ḥajjāj quote from Nu'aym b. Abū Hind, from Abū Wā'il, from Masrūq, who quoted ʿĀʾisha as stating, “Abū Bakr led the people in prayer while the Messenger of God (SAAS) remained in the row (of worshippers).”

Al-Bayhaqī stated that Abū al-Ḥusayn b. al-Fādr al-Qādīn informed him, quoting ʿAbd Allah b. Ja'far, quoting Ya'qūb b. Sufyān, quoting Muslim b. Ibrāhīm, quoting Shu'ba, from Sulaymān al-ʿAmnash, from Ibrāhīm, from al-Aswad, from ʿĀʾisha, who said that the Messenger of God (SAAS) prayed behind Abū Bakr.

The line of transmission for this is excellent; they (the major compilers) did not give it.

Al-Bayhaqī stated, “Ḥumayd narrated it thus, from Anas b. Malik, as did Yūnus, from al-Ḥasan as being n miraculous. He then gave this from the line of Husaym, quoting Yūnus from al-Ḥasan.”

Hushaym stated that Ḥumayd informed him, from Anas b. Malik, (who said) that, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) went out while Abū Bakr was leading the people in prayer and sat down by his side. He was wearing a cloak, the ends of which he crossed over. Abū Bakr prayed, as did the Messenger of God (SAAS).”

Al-Bayhaqī stated that ʿAlī b. Ahmad b. Ṭādān informed him, quoting Ahmad b. Ubayd al-Ṣaffār, quoting Ubayd b. Shurayk, quoting Ibn Abū Maryam, quoting Muḥammad b. Ja'far, quoting Ḥumayd, who said that he heard Anas say, “For the last prayer performed by the Messenger of God (SAAS) with the people, he was wearing one piece of clothing wrapped around himself, and he was positioned behind Abū Bakr.”

I note that this line of transmission is excellent and conforms with the criteria of the (compilers of) the saḥīḥ collections; they did not include it.

This addendum is excellent — that it was the final prayer that the Prophet (SAAS) performed with the people.

Al-Bayhaqī narrated through Sulaymān b. Bilāl and Yahyā b. Ayyūb, from Ḥumayd, from Anas, that the Prophet (SAAS) prayed while behind Abū Bakr, wearing one garment the ends of which were crossed over. When he wished to get up, he said, “Call Usāma b. Zayd for me.” He came and the Messenger of God (SAAS), rested his back against Usama's chest. This was the last prayer he performed.

Al-Bayhaqi stated, "In this there is evidence that this prayer was that of the morning of Monday, the day on which his death occurred, because that was the last prayer he performed and because it is established that he died in the forenoon of Monday."

What al-Bayhaqi stated here he had taken intact from the work on the military expeditions by Mūsā b. 'Uqba, for he related it thus. Abū al-Aswad narrated it similarly, from Urwa.

That conclusion is weak. This was indeed the last prayer he performed with the people, as is in accord with his addendum given above in the other account. Because (both) are one (in meaning) it is necessary to understand the general mutlaq tradition in light of the specific muqayyad tradition.

Moreover, it is not possible that this be the prayer of the early morning of the Monday that was the day he died. Because he did not perform it with the community, but in his home; this was due to his weak condition.

Proof of this is what al-Bukhari stated in his sabīḥ collection. He stated that Abū al-Yaman related to him, quoting Shu‘ayb, from al-Zuhri, quoting Anas b. Mālik, who had followed the Prophet (SAAS), and been his servant and companion. He stated, "Abū Bakr would pray before them during the illness from which the Messenger of God (SAAS) died. This was until the Monday. They (the Muslims) were in lines for the prayer when the Prophet (SAAS) withdrew the curtain across his chamber and looked out at us. He was standing, and his face was like that of a sheet from a musṭajāb. He smiled and laughed. We were becoming overwhelmed with delight at sight of the Prophet (SAAS), when Abū Bakr turned around to straighten the line. He thought that the Prophet (SAAS) was coming out for the prayer. But the latter gestured to us to complete the prayer. He then drew down the curtain. That was the same day he died."

Muslim narrated it from a hadīth of Sufyān b. 'Uyayna, Sabīh b. Kaysān and Ma‘mar, from al-Zuhri, from Anas.

Al-Bukhari then stated that Abū Ma‘mar related, quoting ‘Abd al-Warīth, quoting ‘Abd al-‘Azīz, from Anas b. Mālik, who said, "The Messenger of God (SAAS) did not come out for three days. Then the prayer was held. Abū Bakr went to advance and the Messenger of God (SAAS) said, ‘Take the screen.’ He raised it. And when the face of the Prophet (SAAS) became visible, we felt as though we had never seen any more wonderful sight than it. The Prophet (SAAS) gestured to Abū Bakr to go forward. The Prophet (SAAS) then released the screen. He remained incapacitated (thereafter) until he died."'

Muslim narrated it from a hadīth of ʿAbd al-Šamād b. ʿAbd al-Warīth, from his father.

142. The word means a book or manuscript and is commonly applied to the Qur‘ān. A footnote in the Arabic printed text states that the phrase suggests the beauty of the face and the clarity and luminosity of his skin.
This provides very clear evidence that the Messenger of God (SAAS) did not perform the al-ṣuhūr prayer with the people on the Monday, and that he had withdrawn from them, not having gone out to them for three days.

We note that therefore the last prayer he performed with them was that of al-zuhr, as is clearly stated in the ḥadīth given above from Ā'isha. That would have been on the Thursday, not the Saturday, nor the Sunday, as al-Bayhaqī told it from the work on the military campaigns by Mūsā b. Uqba. That ḥadīth is weak, especially in light of the address he made following it, and of his having been absent from them on the Friday, Saturday and Sunday, these being those full days.

Al-Zuhri stated, quoting Abū Bakr b. Abū Sabra, that Abū Bakr led them in prayer 17 times. Others give that number as 20. God knows best.

Then his noble visage appeared before them early in the morning of the Monday, and he bade them farewell with a gaze that almost overwhelmed them with delight. That was the last occasion on which he gathered with them. One who might have spoken for them would have agreed with the poet, who said:

“I looked on as though death were only an hour away; how would it be if the time remaining were to end with Judgement Day!”

It is strange that al-Bayhaqī would give this ḥadīth from these two lines and then say, in effect, “Perhaps the Prophet (SAAS) remained secluded from them for the first raka‘a then emerged for the second raka‘a and performed the prayer behind Abū Bakr, as Īrwā and Mūsā b. Uqba stated, that fact not being apparent to Anas b. Mālik. Or perhaps he gave part of the information, but remained silent about the rest of it.”

This statement of his is all the more improbable because Anas said, “He remained incapacitated (thereafter) until he died.” In one account he stated, “That was his last contact with them.” Precedence is to be accorded to the statements of the al-ṣahīḥī, “a Companion”, over that of the al-tābi‘ī, “an authority of the following generation”.

But God knows best.

The outcome is that the Messenger of God (SAAS) did select Abū Bakr, “the trusting”, as imām for all the Companions in the prayer assembly, what is in actuality the most important of the pillars of Islam.

Sheikh Abū al-Ḥasan al-Ash‘arī stated, “This selection (of Abū Bakr) is a fact about the religion of Islam necessarily to be recognized.”

He went on, “The selection of him by the Prophet (SAAS) is proof that Abū Bakr was the Companion who was the most learned and the best reciter (of the Qur‘ān). This is established in that statement of the Prophet (SAAS), accepted as authentic by the scholars, in which he said, “The person to act as the people’s imām is to be the one who best recites the Book of God. Should several be equal in this, then the imām should be the one most knowledgeable in the sunna. If equal in this too, then the oldest of them. If equal in this, then the one of them who first accepted Islam."

I note that these words of al-Ash'ārī, may God have mercy upon him, ought to be inscribed in gold! All these qualities, moreover, were combined in Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him.

The fact that the Messenger of God (SAAS) himself prayed behind Abū Bakr at some of the prayers, as we have narrated above in authentic accounts, does not (of course) negate the statements recorded in the sahih collection to the effect that Abū Bakr in fact followed him (in prayer). This is because those occasions were at different prayer assemblies, as al-Shāfi‘ī and other imāms, may God the Almighty and Glorious have mercy upon them all, state.

In addition, Mālik, al-Shāfi‘ī and a group of scholars including al-Bukhārī drew evidence from the Messenger of God (SAAS) performing the prayer seated, as Abū Bakr imitated him while standing, the people meanwhile imitating Abū Bakr. This, they maintain, renders invalid the statement of the Messenger of God (SAAS), reported in the sahih hadith, which tells of when, while seated, he performed prayer with some of his Companions. He had fallen from a horse and his side had been injured. They then prayed while standing behind him. He gestured to them to sit. When he had completed (the prayer), he said, "Thus should you pray. By Him who bears my soul in His hand, would you behave like the practice in Persia and Byzantium? It is they who stand over their elite who sit!" He also said, "The imām is made solely to be imitated; if he says Allāhu Akbar! ‘God is most Great!', then you say it. If he performs a rak'ā, then you do so. If he gets up, you get up. If he prostrates, you prostrate too. If he prays seated, then you all pray seated."

They stated, "Then while he was ill, the Messenger of God (SAAS) was seated while acting as their imām and they remained standing."

This indicates the abrogation of what is stated above. But God knows best.

The scholarly community has responded in many and various ways to this evidence. The proper place to deal with it is in my large work al-A{zkamal-Kabir, if God so wills it, and in Him is all trust and reliance.

In summary, there are those who claim that the Companions sat in accord with his previous order while Abū Bakr only remained standing to report to them from him.

Others maintain that Abū Bakr was actually and essentially acting as the imām, as some of the narrators affirm, as was told above. And that Abū Bakr, due to extreme politeness with the Messenger of God (SAAS), would not act prior to him but imitated him. Thus it was as though the Prophet (SAAS) acted as the imām of the imām. This is why they did not sit — because of their imitating Abū Bakr while he stood. And Abū Bakr did not sit because he was an imām and because he was reporting to them the times of movement, being stationary and the transitions in which the Messenger of God (SAAS) was engaging. But God knows best.

Yet others maintain that there is a difference between a situation when the prayer begins behind the imām when he is standing and continues to do so, even if he might happen to sit during the prayer, as was the case here, and a situation when the prayer begins behind the imām when he is seated. In such a latter case it would be necessary to sit, because of the hadith narrated above. But God’s knows best.

THE MANNER OF HIS DYING, AND HIS ACTUAL DEATH.

Ismā’il Aḥmad stated that Abū Muḥāwiya related to him, quoting al-ʿAʾmash, from ʿĪbrāhīm al-Ṭayyīrī, from ʿAlī b. Sūwāydir, from ʿAbd Allāh, he being Ibn Māṣūd, who said, “I went in to the Prophet (SAAS), when he was ill and I touched him. I told him, ‘Messenger of God, you are seriously ill.’ ‘Yes,’ he replied. ‘I am ill enough for two!’ I commented, ‘You shall be doubly rewarded.’
‘Yes,’ he agreed, ‘by Him in whose hand is my soul, every single Muslim who suffers illness shall have God cast away his sins, just as a tree drops its leaves.’”

Al-Bukhārī and Muslim gave it through various lines from Sulaymān b.
Mahrān al-ʿAʾmash.

The ḥadīth Abū Yaḥṣa b. Mawsili stated in his musnad collection that Ishāq b.
Abū Isrāʾīl related to him, quoting ʿAbd al-Razzāq, quoting Maʾmar, from Zayd
b. Aslam, from “a man”, from Abū Saʿīd al-Khudrī (who said) that he placed his hand upon the Prophet (SAAS), and told him, “By God, I can’t bear to place my hand upon you, your fever is so severe!” The Prophet (SAAS) replied, “For us prophets affliction is doubled, just as our rewards are doubled. If one is a true prophet one might be afflicted unto death by lice. A man might be so afflicted by nakedness as to take his ʿabaʿa and make a jubba out of it.” People should rejoice in deprivation as they do in prosperity.”

The line of transmission for this hadith contains reference to “a man”, who is utterly unidentified. God knows best.

Al-Bukhārī and Muslim narrated it from a hadith of Sufyān al-Ṭahwīrī and Shuʾbā b. al-Ḥajjājī, to whom Muslim added Jarīr. All three quote from al-ʿAʾmash, from Abū Wālīl, the brother of Ibn Salāmā, from Ṣamrūq, from Ṣāʿīd, who said, “I never saw the pain of any person more intense than that of the Messenger of God (SAAS).”

In the saḥīḥ collection of al-Bukhārī, from a hadith of Yazīd b. al-Ḥādī, from ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. al-Qāsim, from his father, Ṣāʿīd is quoted as saying, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) died (while resting) his head between my breast and my chin. And I no longer abhor the death throes of anyone after (those of) the Prophet (SAAS).”

143. That is, turn a lightweight wrap into a long, wide-sleeved outer garment.
There is another hadith narrated by al-Bukhari in his sahih collection that states, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) said, ‘Those persons most suffering affliction are the prophets. Then come the pure, and then so on down. A man is afflicted to the degree of his faith; if firm in his faith, he will be severely afflicted.’”

Imām Ṭaḥaf stated that Ya’qūb related to him, quoting his father, quoting Muḥammad b. Iṣḥāq, quoting Sa’d b. ‘Ubayd b. al-Sabbāq from Muḥammad b. Usāma b. Ṣayd, from his father Usāma b. Ṣayd, who said, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) became severely ill, I came down, along with others, to Medina. I went in to the Messenger of God (SAAS), and found him totally silent, not speaking at all. He began raising his hands towards the sky, then dropped them down to me. I know that he was praying for me.”

Al-Ṭirimidhī narrated this from Abū Kurayb, from Yūnus b. Bukayr, from Ibl Iṣḥāq. He categorized it as ḥasan gharib.

In his work al-Muwatta’ Imām Mālik quoted Iṣmā‘īl b. Abū Bakr as saying that he heard ‘Umar b. Abī-‘Azzīz say, “The last of the statements made by the Messenger of God (SAAS) was, ‘May God destroy the Jews and the Christians! They have adopted the graves of their prophets as mosques. Two religions shall not remain on the land of the Arabs!’”

He narrated it thus in the mursal mode from the Commander of the Believers ‘Umar b. Abī-‘Azzīz, may God have mercy upon him.

Al-Bukhari and Muslim narrated from a hadith of al-Zuhārī, from ‘Ubayd Allāh b. ‘Abbās b. Utba, from ‘A‘ishah and Ibn ‘Abbās, both of whom stated, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) received revelation, he would immediately throw a khamisah1 over his face. If he felt depressed, he would take it off his face. While thus, he once said, ‘May God damn the Jews and the Christians! They have adopted the graves of their prophets as mosques!’ He was cautioning against what they did.”

In one hadith it is narrated by Muslim from al-‘Amarsh, from Abū Sufyān Ṭalḥa b. Nafī‘, who quoted Jābir as stating, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) said, ‘Let none of you die without thinking well of God, Almighty is He.’”

In another hadith narrated by Muslim, God Almighty is quoted as having stated, “I am as My worshippers regard Me; let them therefore think well of Me.”

144. A black-bordered cloak.
when his death approached was, '(Uphold) prayer; and (care for) what your right hands possess'. (He was saying this) until he began to gurgle over it and his tongue could not pronounce it clearly.'

Al-Nasāʻî narrated this from Ishāq b. Rāhawayh, from Jarir b. 'Abd al-Ḥamīd; Ibn Māja gave it from Abū al-Ash'ath, from Mu'tamir b. Sulaymān, who quoted it from his father.

Imām ʻAṭṭār stated that ʻAbdāt b. Muḥammad related to him, quoting al-Taaymi, from Qatāda, from Anas b. Mālik, who said, "The general testamentary statement made by the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), when his death approached was, '(Uphold) prayer; and (care for) what your right hands possess', until his chest began to gurgle as he spoke, and his tongue could scarcely express it.'

Al-Nasāʻî and Ibn Māja narrated it from a ḥadīth of Sulaymān b. Ṭārkhān, he being al-Taaymi, from Qatāda, from Anas.

It is also given by al-Nasāʻî from Qatāda, from a companion of his, from Anas.

ʻAbdullāh b. Muṣārīf b. 'Ishaq narrated to him, quoting Qatāda, from Abū Mūsā, from ʻAbd Allah b. Abū al-Aswad, from Anas, who said, "The general testamentary statement made by the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), when his death approached was, '(Uphold) prayer; and (care for) what your right hands possess' until he was gurgling with it in his chest and his tongue was not producing it.'

Al-Nasāʻî narrated it thus from ʻAbd Allah b. Mūsā, from Yazīd b. al-Khālid, from ʻAbd Allāh b. Abū al-Aswad, from Anas, who said, "He narrated it from ʻAbd Allah b. Abū al-Aswad, from Anas, who said, "He narrated it from ʻAbd Allah b. Mūsā who gave it similarly.'

Ahmad stated that Yūnus related to him, quoting al-Layth, from Zayd b. al-Ḥadd, from ʻAbd Allāh b. Mūhārak, from Yūnus b. Muḥammad, who said, "He narrated it from Saifina who gave it similarly.'

Ya'qūb b. Sufyān stated that Abū al-Nu'mān Muḥammad b. al-Fudayl related to him, quoting Abū ʻAwāna, from Qatāda, from Saifina, from Umm Salama, who said, "The general testamentary statement made by the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), at his death was, prayer and what your right hands possess' until he was gurgling with it in his chest and his tongue was not producing it.'

Al-Nasāʻî narrated it thus from ʻAbd Allah b. Mūsā, from Yazīd b. ZuRain, from Saifina, from Qatāda, from Anas, who said, "He narrated it from Saifina who gave it similarly.'

Al-Bayhaqī stated, "What is true is what ʻAffān narrated, from Hammām, from Qatāda, from Abū al-Khalīl, from Saifina, from Umm Salama.'

Al-Nasāʻî also narrated it thus, as did Ibn Māja, from a ḥadīth of Yazīd b. Ḥarīrī, from Hammām, from Qatāda, from Saifina, from Abū al-Khalīl, from Saifina, from Umm Salama.

Al-Nasāʻî also narrated it from Quṭayba, from Abū ʻAwāna, from Qatāda, from Saifina, from the Prophet (ṢAAS). He then narrated it from Muḥammad b. ʻAbd Allāh b. al-Muḥārak, from Yūnus b. Muḥammad, who said, "He narrated it from Saifina who gave it similarly.'

Ahmad stated that Yūnus related to him, quoting al-Layth, from Zayd b. al-Ḥadd, from ʻAbd Allāh b. Mūhārak, from Yūnus b. Muḥammad, who said, "I watched the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), while he was dying. With him there was a vessel containing water. He would put his hand into the vessel then wipe his face with the water. Then he would say, 'O God, spare me the pangs of death.'"
Al-Tirmidhi, al-Nasa’i and Ibn Maja narrated it from a hadith of al-Layth. Al-Tirmidhi categorized it as ghariib.

Imam Ahmad stated that Waki’ related to him, from Isma’il, from Mu‘aib b. Ishāq b. Ṭalḥa, from A‘īsha, who quoted the Prophet (SAAS) as saying, "It eases me that I have seen the whiteness of A‘īsha’s palm in paradise."

Ahmad is alone in giving this; its line of transmission is not bad.

This gives evidence of the intensity of the love of the Messenger of God (SAAS) for A‘īsha, may God be pleased with her.

People have made many comments relating to the magnitude of love, but none of them has reached this extent. They, moreover, exaggerate in their words that have no truth to them. These words are truth, definitely and unquestionably.

Ḥamād b. Zayd stated, from Ayyūb, from Ibn Abū Mulayka, who said, "A‘īsha stated, ‘The Messenger of God (SAAS) died in my house. And he died between my chest and my throat. Gabriel would protect him by saying a prayer when he was sick; I started to ask God to protect him, and he raised his sight to the sky. And he said, ‘With the Highest Companion! With the Highest Companion!’"

‘ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Abū Bakr came in carrying a fresh date-palm leaf. He looked at it, and I thought he needed it. So I took it and chewed on it and gave it to him. He cleaned his teeth with it with more care than he ever did. He then went to give it to me, but it fell from his hand. And so God mixed my saliva with his on his last day on earth, (which was) also his first day in the Hereafter.’"

Al-Bukhari narrated it from Sulaymān b. Ḥarb, from Ḥamād b. Zayd.

Al-Bayhaqi stated that Abū ‘ʿAbd Allāh al-Ḥafīz informed him, quoting Abū Nasr Ahmad b. Sahīl, the jurist at Bukhara, quoting Sāliḥ b. Muhammad al-Ḥafīz of Baghdaḏ, quoting Dā‘ūd, from ʿAmr b. Zuhayr al-Ḍabbi, quoting ʿIsā b. Yūnus, from ʿUmar b. Saʿīd b. Abū Ḥusayn, quoting Ibn Abū Mulayka (who said) that Abū ʿAmr Dhakwān, the freed-man of A‘īsha informed him that A‘īsha used to say, "It is one of God’s blessings to me that the Messenger of God (SAAS) died on the day of my turn, in my house, between my chest and my neck, and that he mixed my saliva with his at his death."

She went on, "My brother came in carrying a palm-wood toothpick. I was resting the Messenger of God (SAAS), on my chest and saw him looking at the toothpick. I knew that he was accustomed to and enjoyed using them. I asked him, ‘Shall I get it for you?’ He nodded in assent. I softened it for him and he used it in his mouth. Between his hands he was holding a pot or a tin containing water. He began putting his hand in the water and wiping his face with it. After that he raised his hands and said, ‘There is no god but God! Death has its pangs.’ Then he lifted his left (fore-finger) and began saying, ‘With the Highest Companion! With the Highest Companion!’ until he died and his hand slipped into the water."

Al-Bukhari narrated this from Muḥammad b. ʿUbayd), from ʿIsā b. Yūnus.
Abū Dā‘ūd al-Ṭayālīsī stated that Shu‘ba related to him, from Sa‘d b. Ibrahīm, who said that he heard Urwa quote ʿA‘īsha as having said, “We used to tell one another that a prophet would not die until given to choose between this world and the hereafter. And during the illness of the Messenger of God (SAAS), from which he died, I offered him a seed and heard him say, ‘With those prophets, holy men, martyrs and men of purity – they would be fine Companions.’ And we thought that he had been given to choose.”

Both compilers of the sāhiḥ collections gave this from Shu‘ba.

Al-Zuhri stated that Sa‘d b. al-Musayyab and ‘Urwa b. al-Zubayr were among various scholars who quoted ʿA‘īsha as having said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) used to say – while healthy – that no prophet would be taken by death until he had seen his resting place in heaven and had been asked to make a choice. When the Messenger of God (SAAS) put his head down upon my thigh, he lost consciousness for a period. Then he came to and fixed his gaze upon the ceiling. He said, ‘O God, the Highest Companion!’ I know it related to what we had been talking about when he was healthy, that a prophet would not be taken in death before he had seen his resting place in heaven and had been offered a choice. So I commented, ‘Then he is not choosing (to remain with) us.’ And those words, ‘the Highest Companion’ were the final words uttered by the Messenger of God (SAAS).”

Both compilers of the sāhiḥ collections gave them on more than one line of transmission from al-Zuhri. Sufyān – Sufyān al-Thawrī, that is – quoted from Ismā‘īl b. Abū Khalīd, from Abū Burda, from ʿA‘īsha, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) lost consciousness while he was in my lap. I set about wiping his face and praying for a cure for him. He said, ‘No; I ask God, the Most Gracious, the Highest Companion, with Gabriel, Mīkā‘il and Isrā‘īl.’”

Al-Nasā’ī narrated it from a ḥadīth of Sufyān al-Thawrī.

Al-Bayhaqī stated that Abū ‘Abd Allah al-Ḥafīz and others informed them that Abū al-ʿAbbās al-Aṣāmī related to them, quoting Muḥammad b. ʿAbbās b. ʿAbd al-Ḥakam, quoting Anas b. ʿİyād, from Hishām b. ʿUrwa, from ʿAbbād b. ʿAbd Allah b. al-Zubayr, that ʿA‘īsha narrated to him that she heard the Messenger of God (SAAS), and listened to him before he died while resting on her chest, saying, “O God, forgive and have mercy on me; and let me join the Highest Companion!”

Both compilers of the sāhiḥ collections gave it from a ḥadīth of Hishām b. ʿUrwa.

Imām Ahmad stated that ʿAqīb related to him, quoting his father, from Ibn Ishāq, quoting Ibn ʿAbbād b. ʿAbbās b. al-Zubayr, from his father ʿAbbād, who quoted ʿA‘īsha as saying, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) died between my chest and my neck and in my domain. And I did not do harm to anyone therein. And it is because of my comfort and my youth that the Messenger of God (SAAS) was taken while in my lap. Then I placed his head upon a pillow and arose to slap myself and strike my face along with the women.”
Imām Ahmad stated that Muḥammad b. ‘Abd Allāh b. al-Zubayr, quoted Kāthīr b. Zayd, from al-Muṭṭalib b. ‘Abd Allāh, who quoted ʿAṣira as having said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) used to say, ‘Every single prophet has his spirit taken, and he sees the reward and thereafter it is returned to him; and he is made to choose between having it returned to him or joining (God).’ I had learned that from him. As I rested him against my chest, I looked at him as he turned his neck and I said, ‘He has decided.’ I knew what he had said. I was looking right at him when he raised himself up and stared. I said, ‘Then, by God, he is not choosing us!’ He said, ‘With the Highest Companion, in paradise with those prophets, men of trust, martyrs and men of purity . . . fine, those men, as companions.’”

Ahmad is alone in giving this. They (the other major compilers of the traditions) did not include it.

Imām Ahmad stated that ʿAffān related to him, quoting Ḥammām, quoting Hishām b. Urwā, from his father, who quoted ʿAṣira as having said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died while his head was between my breast and my neck. And when his soul came forth, I had never experienced a finer scent than it.”

This line of transmission is saḥīh, according to the criteria of both saḥīh collections; not one of the compilers of the six (canonical) books of traditions gave it.

Al-Bayḥaqī narrated it from a ḥadīth of Ḥanbal b. Ḥishāq, from ʿAffān. Al-Bayḥaqī stated that Abū Ḥāfiẓ Abī al-ʿAbbas al-ʿAṣamm, quoting Ahmad b. ʿAbd al-Jabbār, quoting Yūnūs, from Abī Maʿṣhar, from Muhammad b. Qays, from Abūūrwa, from Umm Salama, who said, “I placed my hand upon the chest of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), the day he died, and a mouthful passed on to me. And (even though) I perform the ablutions the scent of musk never leaves my hand.”

Al-Bayḥaqī stated that both ʿAffān and Bahz stated to him, “Sulaymān b. al-Mughīra related to us, quoting Ḥumayd b. Hilāl, from Abū Burda, who said, ‘I went in to visit ʿAṣira and she brought out to us a coarse wrap like those made in Yemen and one of those garments they call al-mulābbada, “closely woven”. She said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died while wearing these.”’”

All the scholarly community narrated this, except for al-Nasāʾī, from several lines, back to Ḥumayd b. Hilāl. Al-Tirmidhī characterized it as hasan saḥīh.

Imām Ahmad stated that Bahz related to him, quoting Ḥammād b. Salām, quoting Abū Imrān al-Jawātī, from Yazīd b. Bāḥānūs, who said, “I and a companion went to ʿAṣira and asked if we could visit with her. She set down a cushion for us and threw a veil over herself. My companion asked, ‘Mother of the Believers, what do you have to say about the al-ʿirāk, “the death agony”? She replied, ‘What do you imply with that word, al-ʿirāk? I knocked against my companion’s shoulder and she commented, ‘Careful! You hurt your brother!’ She went on, ‘By al-ʿirāk do you mean al-mahīd, “menstruation”? Speak what God, Almighty and Glorious is He, said about menstruation! Well, the Messenger of God (SAAS) would put a cloak over me and touch my head. There would be a blanket between myself and him when I was menstruating.

"Whenever the Messenger of God (SAAS) passed by my door, he would speak words with which God would help me. One day he went by without saying anything. Then he passed by again twice or thrice without speaking. I told my servant girl, "Put out a cushion for me at the door." I then bandaged up my head. He passed by and asked, "What is wrong with you, 'A'isha?" "My head hurts," I replied. He commented, "And mine too!"

"Soon after that he was brought back, being borne in a cloth. He entered my quarters and sent a message to the (other) wives saying, "I am ill and unable to make my round to you. Permit me to remain with 'A'isha." I would nurse him, though I had never nursed anyone before. One day, while he was resting on my shoulder, he turned his head towards mine. I thought he wanted something from my head, but a cold discharge came from inside his mouth and fell at the opening of my neck. My skin shivered at it, and I thought he had fainted. So I covered him with a blanket.

"'Umar and al-Mughira arrived and asked to come in; I invited them in, drawing the veil over myself. 'Umar then looked at him and exclaimed, "What a faint! The Messenger of God is totally unconscious!" They both arose, and when they drew near the door, al-Mughira said, "'Umar, the Messenger of God has died." I exclaimed, "You're lying! You must be planning some mischief! The Messenger of God would not die before God had wiped out the hypocrites!"

"'Abu Bakr came. I drew aside the veil and he looked at him. Then he said, "To God we belong, and to Him we return! The Messenger of God has died!" He then moved towards his head, lowered his own mouth and kissed his forehead. He then said, "Alas for a prophet! He raised his head, lowered his mouth and kissed his forehead, saying, "Alas for a man of purity!" Again he raised his head, lowered his mouth and kissed his forehead, saying, "Alas for a bosom friend. The Messenger of God (SAAS) is dead."

"'Abu Bakr then spoke, praising and thanking God and went on to say, "God states, 'You (will be) dead and they (will be) dead' (surat al-Zumar; XXXIX, v.30), reciting the verse to its conclusion. He went on to recite, "Muhammad is no more than a messenger. And the messengers have passed away before him. If he were to die or be killed, would you turn on your heels? And those who turn on their heels" ... (surat Al 'Imrān; III, v.143).

"'He continued, "To those of you who have been worshipping God, (I say) God is alive and will not die. To those of you who have been worshipping Muhammad, (I say) Muhammad is dead."
“Umar asked, “And is that in God’s Book? I never was aware that that was in God’s Book!” He went on, “People, this is Abū Bakr. He is the most prominent of all the Muslims. Pledge allegiance to him!” And they did pledge allegiance to him.”

Abū Da’ūd and al-Tirmidhī narrated it in al-Shamlīl, from a ḥadīth of Marhum b. ‘Abd al-‘Azīz al-‘Aţîr, from Abū ʿĪmān al-Jawntī, who gave it in part.

The ḥāfīz al-Bayhaqī stated that Abū ʿAbd Allāh al-Ḥāfīz, quoting Abū Bakr b. Ishaq, quoting Aḥmad b. Ibrāhīm b. Maḥṭān, quoting Yahyā b. Bukāyir, quoting al-Layth, from Aqīl, from Ibn Shihāb, quoting Abū Salama, from Abū Raḥmān, who stated that ʿAṭīsha told him that Abū Bakr rode in on his horse from his house in al-Sunh. He dismounted and entered the mosque, but did not speak to the people before he went in to see ʿAṭīsha. He went over to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), who was shrouded in a striped cloak. He uncovered his face, bent over him, kissed him and wept. He then said, “How I wish I could ransom you with my father and mother! I swear by God, God will not ever lay upon you two deaths, and you have now suffered the death decreed for you.”

Al-Zuhri stated that Abū Salama related to him, from Ibn ʿAbbās, that Abū Bakr came out while ʿUmar was speaking with the people. He said, “Sit down, ʿUmar.” But ʿUmar declined to sit. Again he said, “Sit down, ʿUmar!” but again ʿUmar declined to sit. Abū Bakr made the invocation, “I testify that there is no god but God and that Muḥammad is the Messenger of God” and the people assembled around him. He then said, “To proceed, to those of you who have been worshipping Muḥammad, Muḥammad has died. To those of you who have been worshipping God, God will not die. God, Almighty is he, recited, ‘Muḥammad is no more than a messenger. And the messengers have passed away before him. If he were to die or be killed, would you turn on your heels?’” (ṣūrat Aṭ-ʾĪmān; III, v.143).

Ibn ʿAbbās went on, “And I swear by God, it was as though the people did not know that God had revealed this verse until Abū Bakr recited it. The people all learned it from him and that was all you could hear, people reciting it.”

Al-Zuhri stated, “Saʿīd b. al-Musayyab informed me that ʿUmar said, ‘I swear by God, no sooner did I hear Abū Bakr reciting it than I knew that it was the truth and I was so awe-struck that my legs would not bear me, and I fell to the ground. And I knew, when I heard him recite it, that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had died.’”

Al-Bukhārī narrated it from Yahyā b. Bukāyir.

The ḥāfīz al-Bayhaqī narrated through Ibn Lahiṭa, quoting Abū al-Aswad, from ʿUrwa b. al-Zubayr concerning the death of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), as follows, “ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb then got up to address the people, threatening anyone who might say that he died by violence. He was saying, ‘The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) would be under a covering if there had been any violence.’ ʿAmr b. Qays b. Zāʿīda b. al-ʿĀṣamm b. Umm Maktūm was at the back of the mosque, 145. A suburb of Upper Medina. reciting, ‘Muhammad is no more than a messenger. And the messengers have passed away before him’ while the people there in the mosque were weeping in confusion, not listening.

“'Abbas b. 'Abd al-Mut'alaib then went out to the people and said, ‘People, does any one of you have any agreement from the Messenger of God (SAAS), relating to his death about which he should tell us?’ ‘No,’ they replied. He then asked, ‘Umar, do you have (any such) knowledge?’ ‘No,’ he replied.

‘Al-'Abbas went on, ‘Bear witness, people, that no one is testifying that they have any claim against the Messenger of God (SAAS), due upon his death. I swear by the God than whom there is no other, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) has tasted death.’

‘Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him, then arrived on his camel from al-Sun'ūl and dismounted at the door of the mosque. He came in looking grief-stricken and depressed. He asked permission to enter the apartment of his daughter ‘A>isha and she invited him in. He entered. The Messenger of God (SAAS) had died on the mattress, and the women were all around him. They veiled their faces, concealing themselves from Abū Bakr, except in the case of ‘A'isha. He uncovered the Messenger of God (SAAS), and bent over him, kissing him and weeping, saying, ‘Whatever Ibn al-Khaṭṭāb says is nothing; the Messenger of God (SAAS) is dead, by Him who holds my life in His hands! May God have mercy upon you, Messenger of God! How fine you are, alive or dead!’ He then covered him with the cloth.

Thereafter he hurried into the mosque, passing through the throng of people, and reached the minbar. ‘Umar sat down when he saw Abū Bakr approaching. Abū Bakr stood beside the minbar and called out to the people, who sat down and listened. He reiterated the shahāda several times, then said, ‘God, Almighty and Glorious is He, has announced to His Prophet his own death. Yet He is alive among you and is making announcement to you too, of death. Eventually none of you will remain – (all will die) except God, Almighty and Glorious is He. The Almighty stated, “Muhammad is no more than a messenger. And the messengers have passed away before him.”’

‘Umar asked, ‘And this verse is in the Qur'ān? By God, I never knew before today that this verse had been revealed! God Almighty did say to Muhammad, “You (will be) dead and they (will be) dead” (sūrat al-Zumar; XXXIX, v.30). And He did say, “Every thing perishes except for His face. Judgement is His, and to Him you shall be returned” (sūrat al-Qāṣās; XXVIII, v.88). And He said, “Every one upon it will pass away; and the face of Your Lord, Possessor of glory and honour, shall endure” (sūrat al-Rahmān; LV, v.26, 7). And he also said, “Every soul shall taste death and you will only receive your rewards in full on Judgement Day”’ (sūrat Āl-ʿImrān; III, v.184).

‘He (Abū Bakr) went on, ‘God gave life to Muhammad (SAAS), and kept him alive until he had established God’s religion, made God’s orders plain, delivered His message and fought in His cause. Thereafter God took him to Himself and left you upon the path. And none shall perish except after clear signs and pain. Those whose Lord is God (shall know) that God is alive and will not die. For those who worshipped Muhammad and treated him as a god (should know) that their god has expired. Fear God, people! Hold fast to your religion and put your trust in your Lord. God’s religion is established. God’s word is complete. God will help those who support Him and who revere His religion. God’s Book is among us. It is both the light and the cure. By it God led Muhammad (SAAS). In it it states what God considers ḥalāl, “permissible”, and what ḥaram, “prohibited”. And, by God, we will not care who of God’s creation descend upon us. God’s swords are still unsheathed; we have not yet put them down. We will fight vigorously against those who oppose us, just as we fought with the Messenger of God (SAAS). Let no one depend upon other than himself.”

The muhajirun then left with him for the Messenger of God (SAAS). The ḥadīth proceeds to relate his being washed, and placed in a shroud, how prayers were spoken over him and he was buried.

I note that we will relate all this in full detail and all evidence hereafter, if God Almighty so wills it.

Al-Waqidi narrated from his sheikhs. They stated, "When there was doubt about the death of the Prophet (SAAS), some people said, ‘He is dead!’ Others said, ‘He is not dead.’ Asmā’, daughter of ‘Umayr, then placed her hand between the shoulders of the Messenger of God (SAAS), and said, ‘The Messenger of God (SAAS) is dead. And the “seal” has been removed from between his shoulders!’ It was by this that his death was known.”

The ḥadīth proceeds to relate his being washed, and placed in a shroud, how prayers were spoken over him and he was buried.

Al-Waqidi and others have given many reports about the death that are very strange and objectionable. We have omitted most of these, due to the weakness of their lines of transmission or the objectionable nature of their content, especially material given by many of the tellers of narratives, and others; much of that is definitely invented.

In the authentic and good ahādīth related in the famous works, material containing untruths and of unknown lines of transmission are avoided. And God knows best.

Section: An account of important events that occurred after the death of the Messenger of God (SAAS), and before his burial.

One of the most important and significant of these in consequence for Islam and its followers was the pledging of allegiance to Abū Bakr, “the trusting”, may God be pleased with him.
What happened was that on the day of the death of the Messenger of God (SAAS), Abu Bakr had performed the al-suhb prayer with the people. At that time the Messenger of God (SAAS) had briefly recovered from the throes of the illness from which he was suffering; he had drawn aside the curtain to his apartment and had looked out at the Muslims lined up in prayer behind Abu Bakr. This sight delighted him and he smiled at the Muslims, who, in their pleasure at seeing him, were almost distracted from the prayer in which they were engaged. And Abu Bakr had been about to return to the line of worshippers, but the Messenger of God (SAAS) signalled to them to remain where they were and let down the curtain. This was their last experience of him.

When Abu Bakr had completed the prayer, he came in to him and said to ‘A’isha, “I see that the illness of the Messenger of God (SAAS) is somewhat alleviated. This is the day assigned to Bint Kharija.” He was referring to one of his two wives, who resided in al-Sunh, over towards the east side of Medina. He then mounted a horse he owned and went to his house there.

The Messenger of God (SAAS) died in the late morning of that day; some say after the sun had passed the zenith. But God knows best.

Upon his death, the Companions fell into disagreement. Some said he had died, some that he had not. Salim b. Ubayd went after Abu Bakr in al-Sunh and told him of the death of the Messenger of God (SAAS). The latter left his house when he received the news and went in to the apartment of the Messenger of God (SAAS). He drew back the covering from over his face, kissed him and established that he had died.

Then he went out to the people and, from the side of the minbar addressed them. He told them about the death of the Messenger of God (SAAS), as we have related above, and put an end to their confusion and doubt. All the people came back around him, and a number of the Companions pledged their allegiance to him in the mosque.

Some of the ansar had doubts and it occurred to certain of them that it would be acceptable to appoint one of the ansar as khalifa, “caliph”, “successor”. Others of them compromised and suggested that one leader be appointed for the muhajirin and one for the ansar. Eventually Abu Bakr made clear to them that the caliphate could only be from Quraysh. They therefore came back to him and resolved unanimously on him, as we will narrate and elucidate.

The Story of the hall of Banu Sa’ida.

Imam Ahmad stated that Isa al-Tabba related to him, quoting Malik b. Anas, quoting Ibn Shihab, from ‘Ubayd Allah b. ‘Utba b. Mas‘ud, who said that Ibn ‘Abbas reported to him that ‘Abd al-Rahman b. ‘Awf returned to his baggage. Ibn ‘Abbás stated, “I had been teaching ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. ‘Awf to recite and (on his return) he found me waiting for him; that was at Minâ, during the last hajj performed by ‘Umar b. al-Khattab. ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. ‘Awf said, 'A man came to 'Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb and said, "So-and-so is saying that if 'Umar were to have died, I would have pledged allegiance to so-and-so." At this 'Umar said, "I intend to stand up among the people this evening, if God so wills it, and I will warn them against that band who wish to seize power over them!"

"‘Abd al-Raḥmān went on, 'I told him, "Commander of the Believers, don't do that; the pilgrimage brings together all kinds of low-class riff-raff and they will be in the majority in your assembly should you rise to address the people. I am afraid you may say something they will report all over the place without understanding or placing in the right context. You should first arrive in Medina, the seat of the Hijra and the home of the sunna, and which only consists of scholars and the leading men. Say (in Medina) whatever you want in security. They will understand and properly interpret your words.""

"'Umar replied, "If I reach Medina safely, I certainly will tell the people of it at the first assembly I hold.""

"After reaching Medina, at the end of Dhī al-Ḥijja, when it was Friday, I hurried over in (a state of) ṣalāh. [I, (Isāq b. 'Isā al-Ṭabāt) asked Mālik, "What did the narrator mean by ṣalāh?" He replied, "It means approximately when one doesn't care what the time is or how hot or cold it may be."]

"‘Abd al-Raḥmān b. 'Awf went on, 'I found Saʿd b. Zayd at the right corner of the minbar, he having preceded me there. I sat down facing him, my knee touching his. 'Umar was there right away. When I saw him, I said, "This evening he is going to speak on this minbar what no one has ever expressed before.""

"Saʿd b. 'Umar disputed this, saying, 'What might he say that no one has said before?"

"‘Umar sat on the minbar and when the muezzin had finished making the call to prayer, he got up and gave appropriate praise to God. Then he said, "To proceed, I am about to speak what it was decreed for me to say. I do not know whether it will prove to be immediately before my death. Those who listen and understand it should talk about it wherever they may travel. Those who do not understand it I do not permit to tell lies about me."

"'God sent Muhammad with the truth and revealed the Book to him. One part of what He revealed to him was the verse relating to stoning. We recited it and fully appreciated and understood it. The Messenger of God (SAAS) cast stones, and we did so after him. I fear that eventually people may say, 'We don't find any verse referring to the stoning to be present in God's Book.' And so they will go astray by abandoning an ordinance revealed by God the Almighty and Glorious. The stoning in God's Book is a punishment upon married men and women who commit adultery when proof is present, or there is a pregnancy or a confession.'"

"Moreover, we used to recite, 'Do not deny your own forebears, for it is unbelief for you to deny your forebears.' And the Messenger of God (SAAS) also said, 'Do not praise me to excess as people would do about Jesus, son of Mary. I am only a servant; say (he is), "The servant and Messenger of God."'"
"It has reached me that one of you is saying, 'If Umar had died, I would have pledged allegiance to so-and-so.' Let no man deceive himself by saying,
'The allegiance paid to Abū Bakr was accidental and then became established.'
Indeed, it was that way, except that God prevented it causing evil. There is none among you today who could command such allegiance as was the case for Abū Bakr. He was the best of us when the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died."

"Ali, al-Zubayr and their associates withdrew to the house of Fātimah, daughter of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) while all the ansār went off in opposition to the hall of Banū Sa'īda. The muhājīrūn assembled around Abū Bakr.

"I told him, 'Abū Bakr, let us go and join our ansār brothers.' We set off to join them and were met by two fine men. They reported to us what the people were doing. They asked, 'Where are you muhājīrūn going?' I replied, 'We want to join our ansār brothers.' They replied, 'No; you should not go near them.
Make your own decision, you muhājīrūn.' I told them, 'I swear by God, we will go to them!'

"We proceeded further and joined them in the hall of Banū Saqīfā. They were assembled there and among them was one man heavily shrouded. I asked,
'Who is that?' They replied, 'That is Sa'd b. 'Ubāda.' I asked, 'What's wrong with him?' They replied, 'He is ill.'

"When we sat down, their speaker arose, spoke appropriate praise for God, and went on, 'To proceed, we are the ansār of God, the “squadron of Islam” and you muhājīrūn are the people of the Prophet (ṢAAS). But apparently a group of you wish to sever us from our origins and block us from gaining authority.'

"Umar continued, "When he had finished, I wanted to speak, for I had readied a speech I much liked that I wanted to deliver before Abū Bakr and mitigate some of his tartsness. But he was wiser and more dignified than myself, and, by God, when I remained silent he did not omit a word that I would have wished to utter, and he did so better.

"What he said was, 'To proceed, you fully deserve every credit of which you spoke. However, the Arabs will recognize this authority only in this tribe of Quraysh, for they are the finest of the Arabs in descent and residence. I therefore recommend to you either of these two men you might prefer.' He then took my hand and that of Abū 'Ubayda b. al-Jarrāḥ. This was the only thing he had said that I disliked. I would rather have been taken off to be beheaded without having committed a sin, or when dying, to have had my soul succumb to temptation, than to be given command of those that included Abū Bakr!

"One of the ansār then arose and said, 'I am, as it were, my people's rubbing post, and their fruitful, propped-up date-palm. One ruler should come from us, and another from you, Quraysh.'

"I asked Mālik, 'What does he mean by “rubbing post” and “fruitful, propped up date-palm”?' He replied, 'He's saying, 'I am their most clever man'.
“Voices rose in heated debate so that we feared a break-up. I then said, ‘Hold out your hand, Abū Bakr!’ He did so, and I pledged allegiance to him, as did all the muhājirūn and then the anṣār did so too. And we leaped upon Sa’d b. Ubāda.”

Someone shouted, ‘You have killed Sa’d!’ I responded, ‘(May) God kill Sa’d!’”

“Umar went on, ‘We felt we could not have been more successful than we had been, in having allegiance pledged to Abū Bakr. We had feared that if we had left them without there having been a pledge, one would have been made after we had left; either we would have had to accept their decision that we did not want, or we would have had to oppose them, which would have meant disaster. Allegiance made to a leader without consultation with the Muslim community is invalid for the person making it, as is that of someone who so pledges out of fear of being killed.’”

Mālik stated, “Ibn Shihāb quoted Urwa as having said, ‘The two men who met them were Uwaym b. Sā‘īda and Mā‘n b. ‘Adī.’”

Ibn Shihāb stated, “Sa’d b. al-Musayyab reported to me that the ‘rubbing post’ was al-Ḥubab b. al-Mundhir.”

The scholarly community all gave this hadith in their works, along various lines from Mālik and others, all of whom drew it from al-Zuhri.

Imām Ahmad stated that Mu‘āwiyah related to him from ‘A’mr, quoting Zā‘ida, quoting ‘Āṣim, and I have also been informed by Ḥusayn b. ‘Alī, from Zā‘ida, from ‘Āṣim, from Zā‘ir, from ‘Abd Allāh – he being Ibn Mas‘ūd – who said, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) died, the anṣār said, ‘A leader from us and a leader from you.’ Umar went to them and said, ‘Anṣār, do you not know that the Messenger of God (SAAS) ordered Abū Bakr to act as the people’s imām? Who of you would feel at ease taking precedence over Abū Bakr?’”

“The anṣār responded, ‘We seek refuge in God from ever taking precedence over Abū Bakr!’”

Al-Nasāʿī narrated it from Ishāq b. Rāhawayh and Ḥannād b. al-Sarrī, from Ḥusayn b. ‘Alī al-Ju‘fī, from Zā‘ida.

‘Alī b. al-Madīnī narrated it from Ḥusayn b. ‘Alī, who said, “It is saḥīh. I know it only from a hadith of Zā‘ida, from ‘Āṣim.”

Al-Nasāʿī also narrated it from a hadith of Salama b. Nubayṭ, from Nubaym b. Abī Hind, from Nubayt b. Shariṭ, from Sālim b. ‘Ubayd, from ‘Umar similarly. It is also narrated from ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb similarly through another line of transmission.

146. The Arabic phrase given is wa nazawa‘allī Sa‘d, that is, we “jumped upon”, “mounted!” or “served” Sa‘d. Sa‘d had offered an anṣārī candidate for Caliph. The text suggests that the muhājirūn had thwarted Sa‘d’s plans, rather than done violence to him. In any case, Sa‘d, an important figure in the early history of Islam, went into retirement thereafter and died some two years after ‘Umar’s accession to the caliphate.
said, ‘Muslims, the one most worthy of the authority of the Prophet of God should be the second of the two who were in the cave;’ and Abū Bakr is the foremost and the senior (candidate).’

‘I then went to take his hand but an anṣār anticipated me and touched his hand before I did. I then took his hand and the (other) people followed.’

Muḥammad b. Sa’d narrated it from ʻĀrim b. al-Faḍl, from ʻHammād b. Zayd, from Yahyā b. Sa’d, from al-Qāsim b. Muḥammad. His account is similar to the above; he gave the name of the man who preceded ʻUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb in pledging allegiance to Abū Bakr as Bashīr b. Sa’d, the father of al-Nu‘mān b. Bashīr.

An Account of the recognition by Sa’d b. ʻUbāda of the truth of what Abū Bakr stated that day at the hall.

Imām Aḥmad stated that ʻAffān related to him, quoting Abū ʻAwana, from Dā‘ūd b. ʻAbd Allāh al-Azdi, from Ḥumayd b. ʻAbd al-Raḥmān, who said, ‘The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died while Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him, was in his summer residence outside Medina.

‘He arrived, uncovered his face and kissed him, saying, ‘Would that my mother and my father could ransom you! There was none finer than you, alive or dead! Muḥammad has died, by the lord of the ka’ba.’”

He went on to narrate the ḥadīth as above and stated, “Abū Bakr and ʻUmar hurried off and joined them. Abū Bakr spoke, omitting nothing that had been revealed about the anṣār or that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had said about them. He stated, ‘You well know that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, ‘If the people were to take a path along a valley while the anṣār followed a different one, I would take that of the anṣār.’ You well know, Sa’d, that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said – while you were seated – ‘Quraysh are those entrusted with this authority. Those of the people who are righteous are but followers of the righteous (of Quraysh), while the sinners would do the same.’ Sa’d said to him, ‘You are right; we are the viziers, you the princes!’”

Imām Aḥmad stated that ʻĀlī b. ʻAbbās related to him, quoting al-Walid b. Muslim, quoting Yazīd b. Sa’d b. Dhū ʻĀdwan al-ʻAbst, from ʻAbd al-Malik b. ʻUmayr al-Lakhmi, from Rāfī al-Ṭāhī, the companion of Abū Bakr, “the trusting”, on the expedition to Dhū al-Salāsil, who said, “I asked him what had been said when allegiance was pledged to him. He replied, (while telling him what the anṣār had been discussing, what he had said to them and what ʻUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb had said to the anṣār) and he reminded them of my being appointed their imām by order of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), during his illness. And they therefore pledged allegiance to me, and I accepted this from them. I was worried that (otherwise) there would be unrest after which would come secession.’”

The line of transmission for this is excellent and strong.

The implication of this is that Abū Bakr only accepted the appointment as imām due to his concern that there would be unrest worse than if he had refused to accept it.

I note that this activity took place during the remainder of that Monday. On the morning of the following day, Tuesday, the people gathered in the mosque where the pledge of allegiance was made by the entire body of the muhājirīn and the anṣār. This preceded the burial of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).

Al-Bukhārī stated that Ibrāhīm b. Mūsā related to him, quoting Hishām, from Maʿmar, from al-Zuhrt, who quoted Anas b. Malik as having said that he heard the final address when ‘Umar sat upon the minbar. That was the day following that of the death of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). Abū Bakr was there, not speaking. ‘Umar said, “What I wanted was for the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), to live on until he dabbarana” — by this word” he meant until he was the last one of them alive — “however, even if he has died, God has placed among you a light by which you may be guided. God led Muḥammad (ṢAAS) aright; Abū Bakr, his Companion and ‘the second of two’ is the Muslim most fitted to have authority over you. Come forward and pledge allegiance to him.”

A group had pledged allegiance to him before that, in the hall of Banū Sāʿīda; the general pledge occurred at the minbar.

Al-Zuhrt quoted Anas b. Malik as having said, “I heard ‘Umar say that day to Abū Bakr, ‘Mount the minbar.’ And he kept on saying this until Abū Bakr did mount the minbar and there was a general pledge of allegiance made to him.”

Muḥammad b. Ishāq stated that al-Zuhrt quoted to him Anas b. Malik as having said, “When Abū Bakr received the pledge of allegiance in the hall, it being the day after (the death of the Prophet (ṢAAS)), Abū Bakr was seated on the minbar. ‘Umar arose and spoke prior to Abū Bakr. He spoke appropriate words of praise and thanks to God, then he said, ‘People, I made a new address to you yesterday, one I did not find in God’s Book, and one that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had not authorized me to deliver. However, I had thought that he would dabbara us’ — he meant ‘be the last of us’. ‘God has preserved among you His Book by which He gave guidance to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). If you adhere to it, then God will lead you to that to which He led him. God has given responsibility for your affairs to the very best man among you, the Companion of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), the second of two when they were together in the cave; arise and pledge allegiance to him.’

“And the people did make a general pledge of allegiance to Abū Bakr after the pledge made at the hall.

“Abū Bakr then spoke. He gave appropriate praise and thanks to God, then said, ‘To proceed: people, I have assumed authority over you, even though I am not the best of you. If I do well, then help me. If I err, then set me straight.

148. The word can also, more normally, mean “organize”, “arrange”.
Honesty is loyalty; dishonesty is perfidy. It is the weak among you who are powerful in my view until I can do away with their infirmity. It is the strong among you who are weak until I can draw forth from them the right, if God so wills it. No people abandons the fight for God’s cause without God afflicting them with degradation. Depravity never spreads over a people without God making them experience calamity. Obey me for as long as I obey God and His Messenger. If I disobey God and His Messenger, then I should expect no obedience from you. Proceed with your prayer, and may God have mercy upon you!”

This has a line of transmission that is sahih.

His statement, “I have assumed authority over you, even though I am not the best of you” stems from (a sense) of forbearance and modesty. They were united in belief that he was the most virtuous and best of them, may God be pleased with them all.

‘‘The spokesman for the anṣār arose and said, “You should know that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was one of the muhājarīn and that his successor will be from the muhājarīn. We have been the anṣār, ‘the Helpers’, of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and we will be the anṣār of his caliph, just as we were his anṣār.’

ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb then arose and said, “Your speaker is correct. If you had said anything other than this, we would not have agreed with you.” He then took the hand of Abū Bakr and said, “This is your leader; pledge allegiance to him.” ʿUmar pledged allegiance to him, as did the muhājarīn and the anṣār.’

He went on, “Abū Bakr mounted the minbar and, looking out into their faces, he did not see al-Zubayr. And so he summoned al-Zubayr and said, ‘I ask, would you, the nephew of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and his disciple, wish to break asunder the staff of the Muslims?’ He replied, ‘Let there be no reproof, Caliph of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).’ And he arose and made his pledge of allegiance to him.

“Abū Bakr then looked out into the faces of the people and did not see ʿAlī. He then summoned ʿAlī b. Abū Ṭalīb, and he came. Abū Bakr said, ‘I ask, would the nephew of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and his son-in-law, wish to break asunder the staff of the Muslims?’ He replied, ‘Let there be no reproof, Caliph of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).’ And he pledged to him his allegiance. This is approximately what was said.”
Abū Ḍali al-Ḥafīẓ stated, “I heard Muḥammad b. Iṣḥāq b. Khuzayma say, ‘Muslim b. Ḍalāl came to me and asked me about this ḥadīth; I wrote it down for him on a scrap (of cloth) and read it aloud to him.’

“This ḥadīth is worth a camel offered in sacrifice.”

I say it certainly is; indeed, it is worth a whole hoard of cash!

Al-Bayhaqī then narrated it from al-Ḥakīm and Abū Muḥammad b. Ḥāmid al-Maṣḥūrī, both of whom quoted from Abū al-ʿAbbāṣ Muḥammad b. Yaʿqūb al-ʿĀshāmī, from Jāfār b. Muḥammad b. Shākir, from ʿAffān b. Ṣalām, from Wuhayb. However, he reported that it was Abū Bakr, not ʿUmar, who responded to the ʿanṣār spokesman. And in that account he stated that it was Zayd b. Thābit who took the hand of Abū Bakr and said, “This is your leader; pledge him allegiance.” He stated that, “They then left, and when Abū Bakr mounted the minbar, he looked out into the faces of the people there and, not seeing ʿAlī, asked after him. Some of the ʿanṣār then got up and brought him.” He proceeded thereafter to refer to the account relating to al-Ẓubayr. God knows best.

Imām ʿAḥmad b. Ḥanbal narrated it from trusted authorities from Wuhayb, in abbreviated form. ʿAlī b. ʿAṣīm narrated it from al-Jaʿārī, from Abū ʿNaḍra, from Abū Saʿīd al-Khudrī. His account is similar to the above.

This account has clear value; it refers to the pledge of allegiance made by ʿAlī b. Abū Ṭālīb, either on the first day or the second following the death. This is true. For ʿAlī b. Abū Ṭālīb never once, at any time, opposed Abū Bakr and never failed to be present behind him at any one of the prayers, as we will relate. He also went out with him to Dhu ʿQiṣṣa when Abū Bakr proceeded forth, his sword unsheathed, to do battle with those in secession from Islam.

However, when it so happened that Fāṭima, may God be pleased with her, criticized Abū Bakr because she fancied that she had rights to inherit from the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), this was due to her not having known what Abū Bakr told her of the latter’s statement, “What we leave shall not be inherited but will become a ṣadaqa, ‘a charitable trust’”. He therefore blocked her and others of the wives of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), as well as his uncle from the inheritance, due to this clear statement as we will explain in its proper place. She then asked him that ʿAlī look into the land at Khaybar and Fadak made into a ṣadaqa. Abū Bakr did not, however, respond favourably in this because he – that man who was truthful, pious, upright and virtuous – thought it his duty to administer all those matters entrusted to him by the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). She, a very human woman with no aspirations for infallibility, felt resentful and angry and never again spoke to Abū Bakr before she died. ʿAlī was obliged to respect her feelings somewhat. When she died, some six months following the death of her father (ṢAAS), ʿAlī thought it best to renew his pledge of allegiance to Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him, in addition to the pledge he had made earlier, prior to the burial of the Messenger of God (SAAS).

The authenticity of all this is further established by the statement made by Musa b. Uqba in his work on the military expeditions of the Prophet (SAAS). In it he quotes from Sa'd b. Ibrāhīm, quoting his father, to the effect that his father, Ābd al-Raḥmān b. Āwff, was with Umar and that Muḥammad b. Maslama broke the sword of al-Zubayr.

(The hadith states) “Abū Bakr then made an address in which he apologized to the people, saying, ‘I was never ambitious for power, not for a single day or night; I never asked for it, secretly or openly.’ And the muhājirūn accepted his statement.”

‘Alī and al-Zubayr both stated, “The only thing that angered us is that we were too late for the mashūrā, ‘the consultation activity’. We consider that Abū Bakr is the most deserving of the people for power. He is the ‘companion of the cave’ and we well know his nobility and goodness. And the Messenger of God (SAAS) did, while alive, appoint him to lead the people in prayer.”

The line of transmission for this is excellent. And to God be all praise and credit.

DIVISION

Anyone contemplating what we have been reporting will clearly recognize that the precedence awarded by both the muhājirūn and the anṣūr to Abū Bakr was unanimous. They will see in this proof of the statement made by the Messenger of God (SAAS) that “God and the Believers would reject anyone but Abū Bakr”.

It will be apparent to them, nevertheless, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) did not assign the caliphate to any specific person, not to Abū Bakr, as one group of the orthodox maintain, nor to ‘Alī, as a group of the al-rafi‘ū, “the rejectionists”, argue.

He did, however, make an indication (of preference) so strong that any person of perception and intelligence would recognize, for Abū Bakr, as we have shown above and will refer to hereafter. And to God be praise.

It is similarly established in both hadith collections from a hadith of Hishām b. ‘Urwa, from his father, from Ibn ‘Umar, that when ‘Umar was stabbed, he was asked, “Will you not appoint a successor, Commander of the Believers?” He replied, “If I were to appoint a successor, someone better than myself did so” — meaning Abū Bakr — “and if I do not, someone else better than myself did not” — meaning the Messenger of God (SAAS).

Ibn ‘Umar went on, “I knew, when he mentioned the Messenger of God (SAAS), that he was not going to appoint a successor.”

149. From the verb rafī‘a, “reject”, the term, sometimes used perjoratively, is applied to the Shi‘i community of Islam who “rejected” the legitimacy of the succession to the caliphate of al-shaykhayn, “the two elders”, Abū Bakr and ‘Umar.
Sufyān al-Thawrī stated that ‘Amr b. Qays quoted ‘Amr b. Sufyān as having said, “When ‘Ali took command over the people, he said, ‘People, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) left us no instructions regarding power. We considered it appropriate to appoint Abū Bakr as his successor. And he took various action, and so it went until he passed away. Then Abū Bakr decided to appoint ‘Umar as his successor. And he took various actions and so it went till he passed away’ — or he said, ‘until his authority was formally established’. And so on.”

Imām Ahmad stated that Abū Nu‘aym related to him, quoting Shurayk, from al-Aswād b. Qays, from ‘Amr b. Sufyān, who said, “A man made an address at the battle of Basra at which ‘Ali was victorious and ‘Ali spoke, saying, ‘(Regarding) this uneven speaker, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) came first, Abū Bakr came second and ‘Umar came third. After them we were rocked by disorders in which God performed His will.’”

The ḥāfiz al-Bayhaqī stated that Abū ‘Abd Allah al-Hāfiz informed him, quoting Abū Bakr Muḥammad b. Ahmad al-Zakī of Merv, quoting ‘Abd Allah b. Rawlī al-Madīm, quoting Shabāb b. Sawwār, quoting Shu‘ayb b. Maymūn, from Ḥuṣayn b. ‘Abd al-Rahmān, from al-Shābī, from Abū Wā’il, who said, “‘Ali b. Abū Ṭalib was asked, ‘Will you not appoint a successor over us?’ He replied, ‘The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) did not appoint a successor, so should I appoint one? If God wishes the people well, He will unite them, after me, behind the best man among them, as He united them behind the best man among them after their prophet.’”

The line of transmission for this is excellent; the compilers of the sahih collections did not give it.

We have quoted hereabove al-Bukhārī’s account of the ḥadīth of al-Zuhri, from ‘Abd Allah b. Ka‘b b. Mālik, from Ibn ‘Abbas, to the effect that when ‘Abbas and ‘Ali came away from the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), a man asked them, “How is the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) this morning?” ‘Ali responded, “Thanks be to God, he is recovered.” Al-‘Abbas then said, “Three days from now, I swear by God, you will be ‘slave of the staff’. I well know how members of Banu Hashim look when near death. And I see death in the face of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). Let us go to him and ask him to whom rule will go. If to us, then we will know it; if to someone other than us, we can tell him and he (the Prophet (ṢAAS)) can tell him to care for us,” ‘Ali said, “I’ll not ask him that, I swear by God. If he refused it to us, the people would never give it to us after him.”

Muḥammad b. Ishāq gave this from al-Zuhri. That account, “They both went in to him the day the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died”, ends with the words “and he died when the heat grew intense of the late morning of that day”.

I note that this was a Monday, the day on which he died; this is evidence that the Prophet (ṢAAS) died without leaving a testamentary statement concerning the leadership.
In both sahih collections Ibn 'Abbās is quoted as having stated, "It was truly disastrous that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was prevented from writing that document."

We have narrated above how the Prophet (ṢAAS) sought to write a document for them after which they would not go astray, and how, when disputes and differences were expressed in his presence, he said, "Leave me alone; my present condition is better than that to which you invite me."

We also quoted him above as having stated thereafter, "God and the Believers would reject anyone but Abu Bakr."

In both sahih collections it is stated from a hadith of 'Abd Allah b. 'Awn, from Ibrahim al-Taymi, that al-Aswad is quoted as having said, "Someone told 'A'isha that people were saying that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) made a testamentary statement appointing 'Ali as his successor. She asked, 'Regarding what?' He did ask for a bowl in which to urinate while I was resting him against my chest, and he then turned aside and died, without my sensing it. How is it they say he made a testamentary statement appointing 'Ali as his successor?""

In both sahih collections it is stated from a hadith of Malik b. Mighwāl which quotes Talha b. Muṣrif as saying, "I asked 'Abd Allah b. Abu Awfā whether the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had made a testamentary statement. He replied, 'No.' I asked, 'So he made us no testamentary statement?' He replied, 'He commended to us the Book of God, Almighty and Glorious is He.'"

Talha b. Muṣrif stated that Hudhayl b. Shuraqāl said, "Abū Bakr is behaving like a ruler on the basis of a testamentary statement made by the Messenger of God (ṢAAS)! Abū Bakr wishes he had found some (written) testament from the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), but the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died (without doing so)." Abū Bakr would have been delighted – if he had found a testament from the Prophet (ṢAAS) to have applied it diligently.

It is also stated in both sahih collections, from a hadith of al-A'mash, from Ibrahim al-Taymi, who quotes his father as having said, "'Ali b. Abū Ṭalib, may God be pleased with him, made an address to us in which he said, 'Whoever claims that we have anything to read that is not in God's Book and on this sheet' – referring to a sheet suspended on his sword that contained some camel's teeth and items taken from wounds – 'is telling lies!'"

Concerning it (the sheet) he said, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) stated (in it), 'Medina is sacrosanct, from Mt. Ayr to Mt. Thawr. Whoever commits a sin inside it or provides sanctuary for someone who has sinned shall have upon him the curses of God, the angels and the people combined. God will not accept from him on Judgement Day any repentance or compensation. Anyone claiming descent from someone not his father or who claims connection to those not his protectors shall have upon him the curses of God, the angels and the people combined. God will not accept from him on Judgement Day any repentance or compensation. Inviolability of Muslims, even those of the lowest ranks, is all one; any person who violates his pact with a Muslim shall be cursed by God, the angels and the people combined. God will not accept from him on Judgement Day any repentance or compensation.”

This ḥadīth established in both ṣaḥīḥ collections and elsewhere from ‘All, may God be pleased with him, refutes the claim of the ‘rejectionist’ faction that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) made a testamentary statement appointing him to the succession. Were it to have been as they claim, none of the Companions would have rejected it. They were too obedient to God and to His Messenger, both during his life and after his death, to use their own judgement contrary to his and to give their preference to someone other than his choice, or to downgrade someone to whom he had given preference in his own test. Far from it, definitely, and why ever?

Whoever would think that of the Companions, may God be pleased with them, any would have ascribed to them sinfulness and collusion in resistance to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and opposition to his decision and his document? Anyone who reaches this point has taken off the mantle of Islam and expressed disbelief in the concensus of the famous imāms. Spilling the blood of such persons would be more permissible than the spilling of wine!

Moreover, if ‘All b. Abu Talib, may God be pleased with him, did in fact possess a document why did he not use it to argue against the Companions to establish his power over them and his role as their imām?

If he could not put into effect that document, then he was weak, and a weakling is not fit for power. If he were able and did not act, then he was a traitor; and such a sinful traitor should be denied and kept away from power. If he did not know of the existence of the document, then he was ignorant.

And then could others after him have known of it? This is impossible – a lie, foolishness and error.

This would only seem appropriate to persons of ignorance and depravity, human beings who are totally misled. Satan provides embellishment for them without evidence or proof but with mere use of imagination, irrationality, mendacity and false accusations.

Refuge is to be sought with God from the delirium, inadequacy, madness and disbelief they suffer, refuse with God by adherence to the sunna, the Qurʾān, fidelity to Islam and to faith, by reliance upon certainty, the weight of evidence, to escape the flames and to attain heaven. And God is Munificent, Benign, Merciful and Compassionate.

In this ḥadīth from ‘All, firmly based in both ṣaḥīḥ collections that we have given above, there is refutation of the claims made by those numerous ignorant cultists and storytellers who claim that the Prophet (ṢAAS) made a testamentary statement awarding him power. Their statements asserting this are many and various, claiming that the Prophet (ṢAAS) told him, “‘All, do this!”’; “‘All, do not do that”’. “‘All, anyone doing this and that would be such-and-such.” They employ phraseology that is weak and express concepts that are largely absurd.
Many of their statements are on paper and are not worth the ink! But God knows best.

The ḥāfiz al-Bayhaqi gave a hadith through Hammād b. 'Amr al-Naṣībī – he being one of those unmitigated liars – from al-Sarrt b. Khallād, from Jāfār b. Muhammad, from his father, from his grandfather, from 'Ali b. Abū Ṭalīb, who quoted the Prophet (ṢAAS), as having said, "'Ali, I am entrusting a commandment to you; honour it and you will be well for as long as you keep to it. 'Ali, the believer is distinguished by three characteristics – prayer, fasting and payment of the zakāt."

Al-Bayhaqi went on, "He proceeded to give a lengthy hadith concerning motivations and morals. The hadith is fabricated. And I stipulated at the beginning of the book that I would not include any hadith I know to be fabricated."

He proceeded to relate through Hammād b. 'Umar, this being from Zayd b. Rufay', from Makhūl al-Shāmī, who said, "This is what the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) stated to 'Ali b. Abū Ṭalīb when he returned from the military expedition to Ḥunayn and surat al-Nāsir (CX) was revealed to him."

Al-Bayhaqi stated, "He went on to relate a long hadith concerning al-fīma, 'civil disorder'; this too is an objectionable hadith that is without proper foundation. Yet there are enough authentic aḥādīth; success is through God."

Let us here offer comments made upon the life of Hammād b. 'Amr b. Abū Ismā'īl al-Nasībī. It is narrated from al-A'mash and others, as well as from Ibrahim b. Musa, Muhammad b. Māhrūn, Mūsā b. Ayyūb and others. Yahyā b. Maʻān stated, "He is one of those who lie and who fabricate aḥādīth." 'Amr b. 'Ali al-Fallas and Abū Jātīm stated, "His aḥādīth are objectionable; very weak." Ibrahim b. Ya'qūb al-Jawzānī said, "He would lie." Al-Bukhārī stated, "His aḥādīth are objectionable." Abū Zur'a said, "His aḥādīth are feeble." Al-Nasa'ī stated, "To be ignored." Ibn Hibbān said, "Completely fabricates aḥādīth." Ibn ʻAdi stated, "His whole body of aḥādīth are such that none of the trustworthy authorities quote him." Al-Dārquṭnī said, "Weak." Al-Ḥakīm Abū ʻAbd Allāh commented, "He narrates from the trustworthy authorities aḥādīth that are fabricated; he is simply notorious."

And then there is the hadith given by the ḥāfiz al-Bayhaqī, who stated that Abū ʻAbd Allāh Muḥammad b. ʻAbd Allāh al-ʻ Ḥāfīz related, quoting ʻAmīn b. al-ʻAbbās al-ʻAQābī of Baghdād, quoting ʻAbd Allāh b. Rawḥ al-Madāfīnī, quoting Sallām b. Sulaymān al-Madāfīnī, quoting Sallām b. Sulaym al-Ṭawīl, from ʻAbd al-Malik b. ʻAbd al-ʻRahmān, from al-ʻHasān al-Maqbūrī, from al-ʻAshāth b. Ṭalq, from Murra b. Ṣhārāhīl, from ʻAbd Allāh b. Masʻūd, who said, "When the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) became seriously ill, we gathered in Ṭiṣa's home. As the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) looked over at us, his eyes welled with tears. He then told us, 'The time for the parting is near.' And he went on to tell us of his impending death. He then said, 'Welcome to you all; may God give you long life. May He give you guidance, help, benefit, success, instruction, protection, support and acceptance. I commend you to fear of God; I commend you to God and ask Him to take charge of you. I am to you all a clear harbinger, warning you not to go against God by being haughty towards His worshippers and His land. God said to me and to you, "That abode, the Hereafter, We assign to those who do not seek self-agrandisement on earth or iniquity; reward shall come to the pious" (sūrat al-Qaṣaṣ; XXVIII, v.83). He also stated, "Is there not in hell an abode for the conceited?" (sūrat al-Zumar; XXXIX, v.60).

'We asked him, 'When will your death come, Messenger of God?' He replied, 'It is near; as is the return to God, to the al-sidrat al-muntahā,' to the most bountiful cup and the highest furnishings.' We asked, 'Who is it who will wash you (after death), Messenger of God?' He replied, 'The very closest menfolk of my household, along with many angels who see you from where you do not see them.' We asked, 'In what should we shroud you, Messenger of God?' He replied, 'In these clothes of mine, if you wish, or in a Yemeni cloth or a white one from Egypt.'

'We asked, 'Who will pray over you, Messenger of God?' He wept and we did so too. He said, 'Easy! May God forgive you and reward you well on behalf of your Prophet! When you have washed me, embalmed me, wound me in a shroud and placed me at the edge of my grave, then depart from me for a while. The first person to pray for me shall be my two Companions and friends, Gabriel and Mikaʾil, then Isrāʾīl, then the angel of death, along with troops of angels, upon whom be peace. Let the men of my own household begin prayers for me; then the women, then let others come in groups and as individuals. Do not harm me by weeping, lamenting or screaming. Give my greetings to those of my Companions who are absent. I ask you to bear witness that I send greetings to all who have entered into Islam and to those who have followed me in this faith of mine, from this day and on to the Day of Judgement.' We said, 'Who will place you in your grave, Messenger of God?' He replied, 'The very closest of the men of my household, along with many angels who see you from where you do not see them.'"

Al-Bayhaqi then stated, "Aḥmad b. Yūnus concurred with him, quoting from Sallām al-Ṭawīl. Sallām al-Ṭawīl is the only person who gave this."

I note that his refers to Sallām b. Ṣalam, known as Ibn Ṣalīm and also as Ibn Sulaymān. The first version is more correct – (in full) al-Ṭamīmī al-Sağīr al-Ṭawīl. It is narrated from Jaʿfar al-Ṣadīq, Ḥumayd al-Ṭawīl and Zayd al-ʿĀmir and a group. From Sallām a group of persons quote, including Aḥmad b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Yūnus, Asad b. Mūsā, Khalaf b. Ḥishām al-Bazzār, ʿAlī b. al-Jaʾd and Qaḥīs b. ʿAqība.

150. The reference is to a lote tree that grows to the right side of the throne of God.
However, the ḥāfīz Abū Bakr al-Bazzār narrated this hadīth with this entire text from a line that does not include this Sallām. He stated that Muhammad b. Ismā'īl al-ʿAlmasi narrated it to him, quoting ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Muḥammad al-Muhārib, from Ibn al-Isbahānī, who quoted it from Murra, from ʿAbd Allāh. He gives the hadīth in full.

Al-Bazzār then stated that this hadīth was narrated from Murra, from several closely similar lines, and that ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. al-Isbahānī did not hear this from Murra. However, it is given from those who related it from Murra. I know of no one who narrated it from ʿAbd Allāh quoting from Murra.

Section: Accounts of the time at which the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died, his age at the time of his death, how he was washed, placed in a shroud and buried, and the site of his grave.

There is no disagreement over the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) having died on a Monday.

Ibn ʿAbbās stated, “Your Prophet (ṢAAS) was born, became a prophet, left Mecca as a muhājir, entered Medina and died, all on Mondays.”

Imām ʿĀlim and al-Bayḥaṭī both narrated this.

Sufyān al-Thawrī stated, from Hishām b. Urwa, from his father, who quoted ʿAʾisha as having said, “Abū Bakr asked me, ‘On what day did the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) die?’ I answered, ‘On Monday.’ ‘I hope I die on that day,’ he commented. And he did so.”

Al-Bayḥaṭī narrated this from a hadīth of al-Thawrī.

Imām ʿĀlim stated that Aswād b. ʿAmīr narrated to him, quoting Ḥuraym, quoting Ibn Isḥāq, from Ābd al-Raḥmān b. al-Qāsim, from his father, who quoted ʿAʾisha as having said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died on Monday; he was buried on the night of the Wednesday.”

ʿĀlim is alone in giving this.

Urwa b. al-Zubayr stated in his work on the military campaigns, as did Mūsā b. Uqba from Ibn Shihab (who said), “When the pain of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) became severe, ʿAʾisha sent a message to Abū Bakr, and she dispatched Ḥafṣa to ʿUmar and Fāṭima to ʿAlī. However, they did not gather together until the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had died, while resting on ʿAʾisha’s chest and on the day scheduled for his visit to her. This was on Monday, as the sun passed its zenith, early in the month of Rabīʿ al-Awwal.”

Abū Yaḥḥāf stated that Abū Khayyāma related to him, quoting Ibn ʿUyayna, from al-Zuhri, from Anas, who said, “The last look I had at the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was on the Monday. He withdrew the screen; there were people behind the screen and others behind Abū Bakr. His face appeared to me like a sheet of a document. The people wanted to move away, but he gestured to them to stay. He then drew the screen across. He died late in that day.”
This hadith is in the * Sahih * collections; it provides evidence that the death occurred after the sun had passed the zenith. But God knows best.

Ya'qūb b. Sufyān narrated, from ʿAbd al-Ḥamīd b. Bakkār, from Muḥammad b. Shuʿayb, and from ʿAṣfāwīn, from ʿUmr b. ʿAbd al-ʿWāḥid, both of whom quoted from al-Awzāʿī, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died on Monday before the middle of the daytime.”

Al-Waqidi stated that Abū Maʿṣhar related to him, from Muḥammad b. Qays, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died on Monday, before the middle of the daytime.”

This was the assertion made by Muḥammad b. Saʿd, his scribe. He added, “And he was buried on the Tuesday.”

Al-Waqidi stated that Saʿd b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū al-ʿAbyāq related to him, from al-Maqbūrī, from ʿAbd Allāh b. Rāfiʿ, from Umm Salama, who said that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died on Monday, before the middle of the daytime. While the pain was light, he continued to perform the prayer; when it became severe, Abū Bakr performed it in his stead.”

Muḥammad b. Iṣḥāq stated, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died on Monday, before the middle of the daytime. While the pain was light, he continued to perform the prayer; when it became severe, Abū Bakr performed it in his stead.”

Al-Waqidi stated, “That is what is fully established among us. Muḥammad b. Saʿd, his scribe, asserted it.”

Yaʿqūb b. Sufyān quoted Yahyā b. Bukayr as having said that al-Layth stated, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died on Monday, before the middle of the daytime.”
Sa’d b. Ibrāhīm al-Zuhri stated, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) died on Monday, two days after the beginning of Rabi‘ al-Awwal, at the end of ten years after his arrival in Medina.”

Ibn ‘Asakir narrated this. Al-Waqidī narrated it from Abū Ma‘ṣhar, from Muḥammad b. Qays, exactly as above. Khalīfa b. Khayyāt also stated this.

Abū Nu‘aym al-Fadl b. Dukayn stated that the Messenger of God (SAAS) died on Monday at the beginning of Rabi‘ al-Awwal in 11 AH, the year of his arrival in Medina. Ibn ‘Asakir narrated it also.

It was narrated above from Urwa and Mūsā b. ʿUqba and al-Zuhri also, as we quoted from the works of the military expeditions. But God knows best.

What is most widely known is the statements made by Ibn Ishaq and al-Waqidī. Al-Waqidī narrated it from Ibn ʿAbbas and ʿA‘isha, may God be pleased with them both. He stated that Ibrāhīm b. Yāzīd related to him, from Ibn Ṭāwnts, from his father, from Ibn ʿAbbas, and Muḥammad b. ʿAbd Allāh related to him from al-Zuhri, from Urwa, from ʿA‘isha. Both accounts stated that the Messenger of God (SAAS) died on Monday, twelve days following the beginning of Rabi‘ al-Awwal.

Ibn Ishaq narrated it from ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Bakr b. Ḥazm, from his father in similar words; he added, “and he was buried on the night of Wednesday”.

Saʿīd b. ʿUmar narrated, from Muḥammad b. ʿUbayd Allāh al-ʿArzami, from al-Ḥakam, from Miqsam, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) had completed his farewell pilgrimage, he travelled back to Medina, where he remained for the rest of Dhū al-Ḥijja, al-Muḥarram and Ṣafar. He died on a Monday, ten days after the beginning of Rabi‘ al-Awwal.”

It is also narrated from Muḥammad b. Ishaq, from al-Zuhri, from Urwa. In a hadith of Fāṭima from Urwa, from ʿA‘isha, the statement is similar, except that Ibn ʿAbbās initially stated, “some days having passed since its beginning”. And ʿA‘isha’s wording given was, “after some days of it had passed”.

Abū al-Qāsim al-Suhaylī stated in his work al-Rawād words to the effect that it is impossible to conceive of him (the Prophet (SAAS)) having died on Monday, the 12th of Rabi‘ al-Awwal of 11 AH. That is because the Messenger of God (SAAS) was present at one of the stations on the ḥijjat al-wādi‘ of 10 AH on a Friday. The first day of Dhū al-Ḥijja was a Thursday. On the basis of calculating the months thereafter either as full in length or shortened, or any combination of these, it is unimaginable that the 12th of Rabi‘ al-Awwal could have been a Monday.

This conclusion, made in these words, has become widely known.

A number of scholars have attempted to refute this. It can only, however, be refuted in one way, by there having been a difference in the moon’s rising. This view required the people of Mecca to have seen the new moon of Dhū al-Ḥijja on the night of the Thursday, while the people of Medina did not see it until the night of the Friday.
This is supported by the statement of 'A'isha, and others as well, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) left Medina on the hijjat al-wadā five days prior to the end of Dhū al-Qa'da.

It is clearly established, as we noted above, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) set forth (on the pilgrimage) on Saturday, not on Thursday as Ibn Ḥazm asserted, for he remained (away) for more than five days, without doubt. It is not possible that he left on the Friday, because Anas stated, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) performed the al-zuhr prayer of four rakā'at in Medina and the al-fajr prayer of two rakā'at at Dhu al-Ḥulayfah. It is well established that he left (there) on Saturday, five days before the end of that month.”

In light of this, the people of Medina saw the new moon of Dhū al-Ḥijjah on the eve of Friday. If that was on the first day of Dhū al-Ḥijjah, a Friday, with the people of Medina and the months thereafter are calculated in full, then the first day of Rabi' al-Awwal would be a Thursday, and the twelfth day would be a Monday. But God knows best.

It is established in both ṣaḥiḥ collections from a ḥadīth of Mālik, from Rabī‘a b. Abū al-Raḥmān, from Anas b. Mālik, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) was neither very tall, nor short. He was neither pure white nor deep brown. His hair was neither curly nor straight. God, the Almighty and Glorious, gave him His mission when he was forty years old. He resided in Mecca ten (more) years and then for ten years in Medina. God took him to Himself early in his sixtieth year. At that time he did not have twenty white hairs in his head and beard.”

Ibn Wahb narrated it thus, from ‘Urwa, from al-Zuhri, from Anas, and from Qurra b. Rabī‘a, from Anas, similarly to the above.

The ḥadīth Ibn ‘Abdīlkhâr stated, “The ḥadīth of Qurra from al-Zuhri is gharib. However, the account of Rabī‘a from Anas is narrated thus by a group (of scholars).”

He then gave it with a line of transmission through Sulaymān b. Bilāl, from Yāḥyā b. Sa‘īd and Rabī‘a from Anas, (who said) that the Messenger of God (SAAS), was sixty-three years old when he died.

He then gave it through Malik; al-Awza‘ī, Mis‘ar, Ibrāhīm b. Ṭahmān, ‘Abd Allāh b. ‘Umar, Sulaymān b. Bilāl, Anas b. Bilāl, Anas b. Ayād, al-Dārāwīdī and Muhammad b. Qays al-Madānī all gave it from Rabī‘a, from Anas, who stated, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) died when he was sixty years of age.”

Al-Bayhaqī stated that Abū al-Ḥusayn b. Bishrūn reported to him, quoting Abū ‘Amr b. al-Sammāk, quoting Ḥanbāl b. Iḥṣāq, quoting Abū Ma‘mar ‘Abd Allāh b. ‘Amr, quoting ʿAbd al-Wārīth, quoting Abū Ḥalīl b. al-Bahlī, who said, “I asked Anas b. Malik, ‘How old was the Messenger of God (SAAS), when he received his mission?’ He replied, ‘He was forty years of age.’ ‘What happened then?’ I asked. He replied, ‘He was in Mecca for ten years and then ten in Medina. He had reached sixty by the time he was taken by God, the Almighty and Glorious. He was the strongest, finest, most handsome and well-built of men.’”
Imām Aḥmad narrated it from ʿAbd al-Ṣamad b. ʿAbd al-Wārizh, from his father. Muslim narrated from Abū Ghassān Muḥammad b. ʿAmr al-Ražī, known as Rubayy, from Ḥakkām b. Salm, from ʿUṯmān b. Zāʿīda, from al-Zubayr b. ʿAdī, from Anas b. Mālik, who said, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) died when he was sixty-three; Abū Bakr died when he was sixty-three, and ʿUmar similarly, when he too was sixty-three.”

It is established in both sahīh collections from a ḥadīth of al-Layth b. Saʿd, from Ṭaʿlīl, from al-Zuhri, who quoted ʿAʾisha as having said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died at age sixty-three.”

Al-Zuhri stated that it was reported to him similarly by Saʿd b. al-Musayyab. Mūsā b. Uqba, ʿUqayl, Yūnus b. Yazīd and Ibn Jurayj narrated it from al-Zuhri, from Urwa, from ʿAʾisha. She said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died when he was sixty-three.” Al-Zuhri stated, “And Saʿd b. al-Musayyab told it to me similarly.”

Al-Bukhārī stated that Abū Nuʿaym narrated to him, quoting Shaybān, from Yahyā b. Abū Katthir, from Abū Salāmā, from ʿAʾisha, and Ibn ʿAbbas, who said that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) remained in Mecca for ten years receiving revelation of the Qurān, and also ten years in Medina. Muslim did not include it.

Abū Dāʿūd al-Tayālīst stated in his musnad collection that Shuʿba related to him, from Abū ʿIṣḥāq, from ʿĀmīr b. Saʿd, from Jarīr b. ʿAbd Allāh, from Muʿāwiya b. Abū Suʿfān, who said, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) died when he was sixty-three years old. Abū Bakr also died at age sixty-three, as did ʿUmar.”

Muslim narrated it thus from a ḥadīth of Gḥundar, from Shuʿba. It is one of the ḥadīths that he alone gives, one not included by al-Bukhārī. Some give its line of transmission from ʿĀmīr b. Saʿd, from Muʿāwiya. The correct line is as we have given it, from ʿĀmīr b. Saʿd, from Jarīr, from Muʿāwiya.

We also narrated it through ʿĀmīr b. ʿAṣārīl, from al-Shaʿbtī, from Jarīr b. ʿAbd Allāh al-Bajālī, from Muʿāwiya.

The ḥāṣīb Ibn ʿAṣākir gave it through al-Qaṣīd Abū Yūsuf, from Yahyā b. Saʿd al-Anṣārī, from Anas, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died at age sixty-three. Abū Bakr died when he was sixty-three, as did ʿUmar.”

Ibn Lāḥūṣī stated, from Abū al-ʿAswād, from Urwa, from ʿAʾisha, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) and Abū Bakr made mention of their ages at my home. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was older than Abū Bakr. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died at the age of sixty-three; Abū Bakr died after him, also at the age of sixty-three.”

Al-Thawrī stated that al-Aʿmash quoted al-Qāsim b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān as having said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS), along with Abū Bakr and ʿUmar, died at the age of sixty-three.”

Ḥanbal stated that Imām Aḥmad related to him quoting Yahyā b. Saʿd, from Saʿd b. al-Musayyab, who said, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) (first) received revelation at the age of forty-three. He stayed ten more years in Mecca and lived on in Medina for ten.”

This (line of transmission) is ghariib from him, but sathib, “authentic” up to him. Ahmad stated that Hushaym related to him, quoting Da’ud b. Abu Hind, from al-Sha’bi, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) became a prophet at age forty; he stayed there for three years, then Gabriel was sent to him with his mission. Thereafter he remained there for ten years, then went into exile to Medina. He died at age sixty-three.”

Imam Abu Al-Abd Allah Ahmad b. Hanbal stated, “What is clearly established in our view is (that he died) at age sixty-three.”

I note that it was thus that Mujahid narrated it, from al-Sha’bi; it was also narrated from a hadith of Ismail b. Abu Khalid.

In both sathib collections it is stated from a hadith of Rawth b. Ubada, from Zakariyyah b. Isabq, from ‘Amr b. Dinar, from Ibn Abbas (who stated) that the Messenger of God (SAAS) remained in Mecca thirteen years and died when he was sixty-three years of age.

In the sathib collection of al-Bukhari it is stated, from a hadith of Rawth b. Ubada also, from Hisham, from Ikrama, from Ibn Abbas, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) received his mission at the age of forty. He remained in Mecca for thirteen years and then was ordered to go into exile; he did so for ten years. Then he died at the age of sixty-three.”

Imam Ahmad narrated it from Rawth b. Ubada, as did Yahya b. Sa’id and Yazid b. Harun, all of these quoting from Hisham b. Hassun, from Ikrama, from Ibn Abbas.

Abu Ya’la al-Mawsili narrated it from al-Hasan b. Umar b. Sufyan, from Ja’far b. Sualayman, from Hisham b. Hassun, from Muhammad b. Surt, from Ibn Abbas, in similar words. He then gave it similarly through several lines from Ibn Abbas.

Muslim narrated it from a hadith of Hammad b. Salama, from Abu Jamra, from Ibn Abbas (who said) that the Messenger of God (SAAS) remained in Mecca receiving revelation for thirteen years. He lived on for ten years in Medina and died at age sixty-three.

The hadith Ibn Asakir gave its line of transmission through Muslim b. Junada, from Abul-Abd Allah b. Umar, from Kurayb, from Ibn Abbas, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) died when he was sixty-three.” He gave this in the hadith of Abu Naqra from Sa’id b. al-Musayyab, from Ibn Abbas.

This statement is the most widely accepted and promulgated.

Imam Ahmad stated that Ismail related to him, from Khalid al-Hadhah, quoting ‘Ammar, the freed-man of Banu Hashim, who said he heard Ibn Abbas say, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) died when he was sixty-five years of age.”

Muslim narrated it from a hadith of Khalid al-Hadhah.
Ahmad stated that Hasan b. Mūsā related to him, quoting Hammād b. Salama, from 'Amār b. Abī 'Ammār, from Ibn 'Abbās (who said), “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) stayed in Mecca for fifteen, eight or seven years, during which he saw the light or heard the sound and then eight or seven more receiving revelation. And he lived thereafter in Medina for ten years.”

Muslim narrated it from a ḥadīth of Hammād b. Salama.

Ahmad also stated that ‘Affān related to him, quoting Yazīd b. Zuray‘, quoting Yūnus, from ‘Ammār, the freed-man of Banū Hashim, who said, “I asked Ibn ‘Abbās how old the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was the day he died. He replied, ‘I did not know there was anyone in your tribe unaware of this.’ I replied, ‘I have asked people but received different replies. I wanted to know what you would say about it.’ He asked, ‘Can you count?’ ‘Yes,’ I replied. ‘Then take forty years at which point he received his mission. Then add fifteen he stayed on in Mecca feeling both secure and afraid, and ten more for his life in exile in Medina.’” Muslim narrated it thus from a ḥadīth of Yazīd b. Zuray‘ and Shu‘bā b. al-Ḥajāj, both of whom quoted Yūnus b. Uqayl, from ‘Amr, from Ibn ‘Abbās in similar words.

Imām Ahmad stated that Ibn Numayr related to him, quoting al-‘Ala b. Ṣāliḥ, quoting al-Minhāl b. ‘Amr, from Sa‘īd b. Jubayr, who said that a man came to Ibn ‘Abbās, asking, “Did the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) receive revelation for ten years in Mecca and ten in Medina?” “Who says so?” he asked. “He received revelation for fifteen years in Mecca and ten in Medina; and (he died at) over sixty years of age.”

This is one of the ḥadīths unique to Ahmad both in its line of transmission and in its content.

Imām Ahmad stated that Hushaym related to him, quoting Ṭālḥ b. Zayd, from Ynsuf b. Mahran, from Ibn ‘Abbās, who said, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) died at age sixty-five.”

Ahmad is alone in giving this.

Al-Tirmidhī narrated in his book al-Shamīl, as did Abū Ya‘lā al-Mawsīlī and al-Bayhaqī, from a ḥadīth of Qatūdā, from al-Ḥasan al-Baṣrī, from Daghfāl b. Ḥanḍzalā al-Shaybānī al-Nasībā, that the Prophet (ṢAAS) died at age sixty-five.

Al-Tirmidhī commented, “We do not know of any quotation Daghfāl cited from the Prophet; he was a man during his time.”

Al-Bayhaqī stated, “This accords with the account of ‘Ammār and those who quoted him, from Ibn ‘Abbās.”

The account of the group quoting from Ibn ‘Abbās that his age was sixty-three are more correct. They are more reliable and more numerous, their account according with the authentic statement given from ‘Urwā who quoted ‘A‘ishah. They agree with one of the accounts quoting from Anas and the authentic account from Mu‘āwiya. That is the statement of Sa‘īd b. al-Musayyab, ʿAmir al-Sha‘bānī and Abū Ja‘far Muḥammad b. ‘Alī, may God be pleased with them all.”
I note that this also applies to 'Abd Allah b. Uqba, al-Qāsim b. 'Abd al-Rahmān, al-Ḥasan al-بغش, ʿAlī b. al-Ḥusayn and others.

One of the strange statements given is that narrated by Khalīfa b. Khayyāt, from Muṣād b. Hīshām, quoting his father, from Qatāda, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died at age sixty-two.”

Yaʿqūb b. Sufyān narrated it from Muḥammad b. al-Muthannā, from Muṣād b. Hīshām, from his father, from Qatāda, similarly. Zayd al-ʿUmā also narrated it, from Yazīd, from Anas.

Also similar is the account of Muḥammad b. ʿĀmir, from al-Qāsim b. Hūmayd, from al-Nūmān b. al-Mundhir b. al-Ghassāni, from Makhlūl, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died at age sixty-two and several months.”

Even stranger than all the above is what is narrated by Imam Al-mad from Rawḥ, from ʿAṣād b. Abū ʿArūba, from Qatāda, from al-Ḥasan, who said, “The Qurʾān was revealed to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), over a period of eight years in Mecca and ten after he went into exile.”

Although this al-Ḥasan agrees with the majority who state that the Prophet (ṢAAS), received revelation at the age of forty, he held the view that he lived to the age of fifty-eight. This is very strange.

However, we have narrated through Musaddad, from Hīshām b. ʿAbbās, from al-Ḥasan, who stated that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died at age sixty.

Khalīfa b. Khayyāt stated that Abū ʿĀsim related to him, from Ashʿath, from al-Ḥasan, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) received his mission at age forty-five. He remained in Mecca for ten years and for eight in Medina. He died at age sixty-three.”

This information, so stated, is very strange.

DESCRIPTIONS OF HOW THE PROPHET (ṢAAS) WAS WASHED (PRIOR TO HIS BURIAL).

We have stated above that the Companions, may God be pleased with them, were engaged in making their pledge of allegiance to Abū Bakr for the remainder of the Monday and part of the Tuesday. Having gone through all the preliminary stages of this and brought it to completion, they began to prepare for the burial of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), relying in all this upon Abū Bakr in what he directed them.

Ibn ʿIṣḥāq stated, “When Abū Bakr had received the pledge of allegiance, the people began preparing, on the Tuesday, for the burial of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).”
It has been narrated above, from the hadith of Ibn Ishaq, from 'Abd al-Rahman b. al-Qasim, from his father, from A'isha, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) died on Monday and was buried on Wednesday night.

Abu Bakr b. Abu Shayba stated that Abu Muawiya related to him, quoting Abu Burda, from Alqama b. Yazid, from Sulayman b. Burayda, from his father, who said, "When they set about washing the Messenger of God (SAAS), a voice cried out to them from inside, saying, 'Do not remove the shirt of the Messenger of God!'"

Ibn Majah narrated it from the hadith of Abu Muawiya, from Abu Burda — his full name being 'Amr b. Yazid al-Tamimi Kufi.

Muhammad b. Ishaq stated that Yahya b. 'Abbad b. 'Abd Allah b. al-Zubayr related to him, from his father, who stated that he heard A'isha say, "When they wished to wash the Prophet (SAAS), they said, 'We don't know whether we should remove the clothes from the Messenger of God (SAAS), as we do from our dead, or should we wash him with his clothes on?'

"When they differed over this, God cast sleep over them, so that everyone of them soon had his chin on his chest! Then a voice that they could not recognize addressed them from the direction of the house, saying, 'Wash the Messenger of God (SAAS), with his clothes on.'"

"They got up and went over to the Messenger of God (SAAS), and washed him while he was still in his shirt. They poured water on the shirt and rubbed with the shirt, not their hands. A'isha used to say, 'Had I known first what I later learned, only the wives would have washed the Messenger of God (SAAS)."

Abu Da'ud narrated this from a hadith of Ibn Ishaq.

Imam Ahmad stated that Ya'qub related to him, quoting his father, from Ibn Ishaq, quoting Husayn b. 'Abd Allah, from Ikrara, from Ibn Abbas, who said, "The people gathered to wash the Messenger of God (SAAS); there were only his own family in the house — his uncle al-'Abbas b. 'Abd al-Mutallib, Ali b. Abu Talib, al-Hashim b. al-'Abbas, Uthman b. Zayd b. Haritha and Salih, freed-man of the Messenger of God (SAAS).

"When they gathered to wash him, Aws b. Khawla b. Banu 'Awf b. al-Khazraj, who had fought at Badr, called out from the back of the crowd to Ali b. Abu Talib, 'Ali, we plead with you, by God and our fine experience of the Messenger of God (SAAS)! 'Ali replied to him, 'Come inside.' He did so and was present at the washing of the Messenger of God (SAAS); he did not participate at all in washing him.

"Ali rested him (the Prophet (SAAS), who was still dressed in his shirt, upon his own chest, while al-Hashim and Qutham, along with 'Ali were turning him over, while Usama b. Zayd and Salih, his freed-man, both poured water upon him. As 'Ali set about washing him, not seeing from the Messenger of God (SAAS), any of what usually is emitted from the dead, he called out, 'By my father and my mother! How sweet-smelling you are, alive or dead!'"
"When they had finished washing the Messenger of God (SAAS), having done so using water and lote-tree balm, they dried him. Then there was done to him what is normally done to the dead. After that he was wrapped in three cloths, two white and one striped cloak.

"Al-'Abbas then summoned two men. He told them, ‘One of you should go to Abū 'Ubayda b. al-Jarraḥ. ’ Abū 'Ubayda would make graves for the Meccans. Al-'Abbas went on, ‘The other of you should go to Abū Ṭalḥa b. Sahl al-Anṣārī. ’ Abū Ṭalḥa would make the burial niche for the people of Medina.

"Al-'Abbas then said, as he dispatched the two men, ‘O God, choose for your messenger!’

"The two men left. However, the one looking for Abū 'Ubayda could not find him; the man seeking Abū Ṭalḥa did locate him and he came and prepared the niche for the Messenger of God (SAAS).”

Abū Dā‘ud is alone in giving this.

Yūnus b. Bukayr stated, from al-Mundhir b. Tha‘labah, from al-Salih, from al-'Albār b. Abhmar, who said, “As 'Ali and al-Fadl were washing the Messenger of God (SAAS), a voice called out to 'Ali, 'Raise your sight to the sky!’”

This is munqat,' "incomplete in its chain".

I note that the ahl al-sunan quote 'Ali as having said that the Messenger of God (SAAS), had told him, "'Ali, do not make your thigh visible. And do not look at the thigh of anyone, alive or dead.’"

This implies that he was issuing him an order relating to himself. But God knows best.

The ḥadīth Abū Bakr al-Bayhaqi stated that Abū ‘Abd Allah al-Ḥāfiz informed him, quoting Muhammad b. Ya'qūb, quoting Yahyā b. Muḥammad b. Yahyā, quoting Dāmrah, quoting 'Abd al-Wāḥid b. Ziyād, quoting Ma'mar, from al-Zuhri, from Sa'īd b. al-Musayyab, who said, “'Ali stated, ‘As I washed the Messenger of God (SAAS), I watched for any discharge such as comes from a dead person, but saw nothing. He was sweet-smelling alive and dead (SAAS).’”

Abū Dā‘ud narrated it in his work al-Marāṣīl.

In the account from which he quotes the above, al-Bayhaqi adds the following words from Sa'īd b. al-Musayyab: “Four persons took charge of the burial of the Messenger of God (SAAS). These were: 'Ali, al-'Abbas, al-Fadl and Sāliḥ, the freed-man of the Messenger of God (SAAS). They placed him in his niche and erected bricks over it as a marker.”

A number of the tabi‘Un, including 'Amr al-Sha‘bī, Muḥammad b. Qays, ‘Abd Allah b. al-Ḥārith, narrate approximately the same in various phraseology; it would be too lengthy to give them here.

Al-Bayhaqi stated that it was narrated by Abū 'Amr Kaysān, from Yazīd b. Bilāl, who stated that he heard ‘Ali say, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) instructed that no one but myself should wash him and that ‘anyone who sees my private parts will have his eyes lose their sight’.

‘Ali said, ‘Al-‘Abbās and Usāma would hand me the water from behind the curtain. Whenever I took hold of a limb it was as if there were 30 men turning it over along with me, until I had finished washing him.’”

The ḥāfiz Abū Bakr al-Bazzār gave the following line of transmission for this in his musnad collection. He stated that Muḥammad b. ‘Abd al-Raḥmān related to him, quoting ʿAbd al-Ṣamad b. al-Nuʿmān, quoting Kaysān Abū ‘Amr, from Yazīd b. Bilāl, who said, “‘Ali b. Abū Ṭalīb stated, ‘The Prophet (SAAS), instructed me that no one but myself should wash him and said, “anyone who sees my private parts will have his eyes lose their sight”.’

“‘Ali went on, ‘Al-ʿAbbās and Usāma were handing me the water from behind the curtain.’”

I observe that this is very strange.

Al-Bayhaqī stated that Muḥammad b. Mūsā b. al- Faḍl informed us, quoting Abū al-ʿAbbās al-Āṣamī, quoting ʿUsayd b. ʿĀṣim, quoting al-Ḥusayn b. Ḥafṣ, from Ṣufyān, from ʿAbd al-Malik b. Jūrāy, who said he heard Muḥammad b. ʿAlī Abū Jaʿfar say, “The Prophet (SAAS) was washed three times with lote-tree balm. He was washed while he still wore his shirt. The water came from a well called al-Ghars at Qubāʾ that was the property of Saʿd b. Khaythama. The Messenger of God (SAAS) used to drink from it. ʿAlī and al- Faḍl took charge of washing him; al- Faḍl cradled him, while al-ʿAbbās poured the water. Al- Faḍl began crying, ‘Relieve me! You’re cutting my heart artery! Something is making me feel faint!’”

Al-Waqīdī stated that ʿĀṣim b. ʿAbd Allāh al-Ḥakamī related to him, from ʿUmar b. ʿAbd al-Ḥakam, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) said, ‘Yes; that well, the well called Gharas is one of the water-sources of heaven. Its water is the very sweetest.’ The Messenger of God (SAAS) would have its sweet water drawn for him, and he was washed with water from the Gharas well.”

Sayf b. ʿUrāma stated, from Muḥammad b. ʿAdī, from Ḥikrama, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “When the grave had been completed and the people had performed the al-ṣuḥr prayer, al-ʿAbbās proceeded to wash the Messenger of God (SAAS), and a sheet of close-woven netting made in Yemen was placed above him. He was positioned in the middle of the house, inside the netting. Al-ʿAbbās then called for ʿAlī and al- Faḍl. When he left for the well to bring water for the two men, he called for Abū Sufyān b. al- Ḥarith and brought him inside, along with men of Banū Ḥashim positioned behind the netting, and some of the anṣār who had requested entry from my father. These men included Aws b. Khwālī, may God be pleased with them all.”

Sayf (b. ʿUmar) went on to quote from al-Daḥhāk b. Yarbuʿ al- Ḥanāfi, from Māḥān al- Ḥanāfi, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who related the construction of the cover of netting, how al-ʿAbbās brought ʿAlī, al- Faḍl, Abū Sufyān and Usāma inside it, and men of Banū Ḥashim; all stood inside the house behind the netting. He.
narrated, “A drowsiness overcame them and they heard a voice saying, ‘Do not wash the Messenger of God; he was unsullied.’ Al-‘Abbās responded, ‘No; we must.’ The members of the household said, ‘The voice spoke the truth, so do not wash him.’ But al-‘Abbās said, ‘We can’t give up a hallowed sunna practice because of some voice we can’t identify.’

“Then drowsiness overcame them a second time and a voice called out, ‘Wash him with his clothes on!’ The members of the household responded, ‘No; no!’ Al-‘Abbās said, ‘I certainly will.’ They then set about washing him, while he was still dressed in his shirt and an open mijwal. They washed him in the clear water, perfumed him with camphor on the parts of his body which he would prostrate in prayer and on his joints. His shirt and his mijwal were squeezed dry. He was then wrapped in his winding-sheet and they burned incense and perfumes over him. They picked him up, placed him on his bed and shrouded him.”

This text is very strange.

DESCRIPTION OF THE SHROUD OF THE MESSENGER OF GOD (SAAS).

Imām Ahmad stated that al-Walīd b. Muslim related to him, quoting al-Awza‘ī, quoting al-Zuhri, from al-Qāsim, who quoted ʻĀ’ishah as having said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) was wrapped in a striped cloth, but then it was removed from him.”

Al-Qāsim stated, “The remains of that cloth are still with us.”

This line of transmission meets the criteria of the compilers of the two sahih collections; Abū Da‘ūd, however, narrated it from Ahmad b. Ḥanbal, al-Nasā‘ī from Muḥammad b. Muthanna. Muṣāfī differentiated between these two men. All quoted from al-Walīd b. Muslim.

Imām Abū ʻAbd Allāh Muḥammad b. Idris al-Shāfi‘ī stated that Mālik related to him, from Hishām b. ʻUrwa, from his father, who quoted ʻĀ’ishah as having said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) was shrouded in seven white cloths from Saḥāl; these did not include a shirt or a turban.”

Al-Bukhārī narrated it from Ismā‘īl b. Abū ʻUways, from Mālik.

Imām Abū ʻAbd Allāh Muḥammad b. Idris al-Shāfi‘ī stated that Malik related to him, from Hishām b. ʻUrwa, from his father, who quoted ʻĀ’ishah as having said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) was wrapped in a striped cloth, but then it was removed from him.”

Al-Bukhārī stated that Qutayba related to him, quoting al-Aswāq b. Ghiyāth, from Hishām b. ʻUrwa, from his father, who quoted ʻĀ’ishah as having said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) was wrapped in a striped cloth, but then it was removed from him.”

Muslim gave it from a hadith of Sufyān b. ʻUyayna. Al-Bukhārī gave it from Abū Na‘aym, from Sufyān al-Thawrī. Both authorities gave it from Hishām b. ʻUrwa.

Abū Da‘ūd stated that Qutayba related to him, quoting Ḥafṣ b. Ghiyāth, from Hishām b. ʻUrwa, from his father, who quoted ʻĀ’ishah as having said, “The

152. The word may be interpreted, as in a footnote to the Arabic printed text, as a white cloth placed over the hand of the person shuffling the arrows in the ancient Arabian gambling game of maysur. Dictionaries also have the word as referring to a short skirt-like garment.

153. Located in Yemen.
Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was shrouded in three white Yemeni cloths made of cotton; these did not include a shirt or a turban."

'Urwa went on, "It was reported to 'Aṣīha that he was shrouded in two cloths and a striped cloak. She commented, "The cloak was brought to him, but they rejected it and did not shroud him in it.""

Muslim also narrated it thus, from Abū Bakr b. Abī Shayba, from Ḥafṣ b. Ghiyath.

Al-Bayhaqi stated that Abū ʿAbd Allāh al-Ḥafīẓ informed him, quoting Abū al- Faḍl Muhammad b. Ḫibrāhīm, quoting ʿAḥmad b. Salāma, quoting Ḥannād b. al-Ṣarrī, quoting Abū Muḥāwiya, from Ḥishām b. ʿUrwa, from his father, who quoted 'Aṣīha as having said, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was shrouded in three cotton white cloths from Ṣaḥūl; these did not include a shirt, nor a turban. The ceremonial gown people had doubts about. It had been bought especially as a shroud for him, but it was put aside. ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Bakr took it, saying, 'I'm going to keep it for myself to be buried in!' He added, 'If God had been pleased with it for His Prophet (ṢAAS), He would have buried him in it.' He sold it, giving its price to charity."

Muslim narrated it in his Ṣaḥīḥ collection from Yaḥyā b. Yaḥyā and others, from Abū Muḥāwiya.

Al-Bayhaqi then narrated it from al-Ḥakīm, from al-Ąṣāmm, from ʿAḥmad b. ʿAbd al-Jabbar, from Abū Muḥāwiya, from Ḥishām, from his father, who quoted 'Aṣīha as having said, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was shrouded in a striped cloak that belonged to ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Bakr. He was wrapped up in it, but it was then removed. ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Bakr had obtained that ceremonial gown to be buried in himself when he died. He commented, after he received it back, 'I'd not keep for myself something that God kept from being used as the shroud of His Messenger.' ʿAbd Allāh donated its cost to charity."

Imām ʿAḥmad stated that ʿAbd al- Ṭawāẓ related to him, quoting Māʿmar, from al-Zuhri, from ʿUrwa who quoted 'Aṣīha as having said, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was shrouded in three white cloths from Ṣaḥūl."

Al-Nāṣrī narrated it from ʿIṣaḥ b. Rāhawayh, from ʿAbd al- Razzāq.

Imām ʿAḥmad stated that Miskīn b. Bakr related to him, from Saʿīd - meaning Ibn ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz - who quoted Makhūl as quoting ʿUrwa that 'Aṣīha said, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was shrouded in three Yemeni fine-mesh cloths."

ʿAḥmad is alone in giving this.

Abū Yaḥyā al- Māwṣūlī stated that Sahī b. Ḥabbīb al- Anṣārī related to him, quoting 'Aṣīm b. Hilāl, the imām of the mosque of Ayyūb, quoting Ayyūb, from Najīf, from Ibn 'Umar, who said, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was shrouded in three white cloths from Ṣaḥūl."

Sufyān stated, from 'Aṣīm b. ʿUbayd Allāh, from Sālim, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was shrouded in three pieces of clothing.
In some accounts the wording is given as, “two pieces of clothing of Suḥrār, and a striped cloak”.

Imām ʿĀhmād stated that Ibn Idrīs related to him, quoting Yazīd, from Miqṣām, from Ibn ʿAbdās, who said that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was shrouded in three pieces of clothing – the shirt in which he died, and a ceremonial gown from Najrān, the latter consisting of two garments.

Abū Daʿūd narrated it from ʿĀhmād b. Ḥanbal, while ʿUthmān b. Abū Shayba and Ibn Mājī did so from ʿAllī b. Muḥammad, all three further quoting from ʿAbd Allāh b. Idrīs, from Yazīd b. Abū Ziyād, from Miqṣām, from Ibn ʿAbdās, as above.

This is very strange.

Imām ʿĀlmad stated also that ʿAbd al-Razzāq related to him, quoting Ṣafyān, from Ibn Abū Laylā, from al-Ḥakam, from Miqṣām, from Ibn ʿAbdās, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was shrouded in two white garments and a red cloak.”

ʿĀhmād is alone in giving this.

Abū Yaʿṣā related that Sulaymān al-Shadhkāni related to him, quoting Yaḥyā b. Abī al-Ḥaytham, quoting ʿUthmān b. ʿAṭī, from his father, from Ibn ʿAbdās, from al-Fāḍl, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was shrouded in two white garments from Saḥṭūl.”

Muḥammad b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Abū Laylā added, “and a red cloak”.

Several authorities narrated it from Ismāʿīl al-Muʿadib, from Yaʿqūb b. ʿAṭī, from his father, from Ibn ʿAbdās, from al-Fāḍl, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was shrouded in two white garments.” And in one account the garments were stated to be from Saḥṭūl. But God knows best.

The ḥāfīẓ Ibn ʿAsākir narrated through Abū Taḥīr al-Mukhallīṣ, quoting ʿĀhmād b. Ishāq, from al-Bahlūl, quoting Abābīd b. Yaʿqūb, quoting Sharīk, from Abū Ishāq, who said, “I happened to attend a meeting of Banū ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalib, many of them being present. I asked them, ‘In how many pieces of cloth was the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) shrouded?’ They stated, ‘In three garments, without a shirt, a qībāṣ, “a long-sleeved outer garment”, or a turban.’ I asked them, ‘How many of you were taken prisoner at the battle of Badr?’ ‘Al-ʿAbbās, Nawfāl and ʿAqīl,’ they replied.”

Al-Bayhaqī narrated through al-Zuhūrī, from ʿAlī b. al-Ḥusayn Zayn al-ʿĀbidīn, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was shrouded in three garments, one being a striped cloak.”

154. A footnote in the Arabic printed text suggests that the word refers to the mountain by that name above ʿArmān.
The hadith narrated above by al-Bayhaqi, quoting from al-Ash'ath Q. Taliq and al-Bazzar from a hadith of al-Ishbañ, both quoting from Murra, from Ibn Mas'ud, tells of the instruction made by the Prophet (SAAS), that he should be washed by the men of his household. In it he is also quoted as having said, “Shroud me in these clothes of mine, or in a Yemeni cloth, or a white one from Egypt.” After placing him in his shroud, they were to place him on the edge of his grave, then leave him until the angels had prayed over him, after which the men of his household were to pray over him, with the other people to follow thereafter individually.

The hadith is given above in full. There is some dispute over its authenticity, as we have stated. God knows best.

Muhammad b. Ishâq stated that al-Husayn b. ʿAbd Allah b. ʿUbayd Allah b. ʿAbbás related to him, quoting Ikrama, from Ibn ʿAbbás, who said, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) died, the men were brought in and they prayed over him in groups and without an imām. When the men had finished, the women were brought in and they prayed over him. Then the children came and prayed, then the slaves. All these prayed over him in groups, without anyone acting as imám."

Al-Waqidi stated that Ubayy b. ‘Ayyāsh b. Sahl b. Sa’d related to him, from his father, from his grandfather, who said, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) had been wrapped in his shroud, he was placed on his bed. After that he was placed on the edge of his grave and the people came in (to pray) over him in groups, without anyone acting as their imám.”

Al-Waqidi also stated that Musa b. Muhammad b. Ibrahim related to him, that, “I have discovered a document in the handwriting of my father. In it it states that when the Messenger of God (SAAS) was wrapped in his shroud and placed on his bed, Abū Bakr and ʿUmar, may God be pleased with them, arrived, accompanied by a group of muhājirūn and ansār as large as the house could contain. The two men said, ‘Peace be upon you, Prophet, along with God’s mercy and blessings.’ The muhājirūn and the ansār made the same salutation as had Abū Bakr and ʿUmar, and then they arranged in lines, though without anyone acting as their imám.

“Abū Bakr and ʿUmar – they being in the first line – then spoke, facing towards the Messenger of God (SAAS), saying, ‘O God, we bear witness that he has delivered the message that was revealed to him and that he has properly advised his nation. He strove hard in God’s cause until God made His religion firm and completed His word; He has become worshipped alone and without associate. Make us, O God, of those who follow the words revealed with him. Unite us with him, letting him know us, and making us know him. He was always forgiving and merciful towards the believers. We seek no alternative to having faith in him, and we would never exchange it at any price.’

“At this, those present called out Amen! Amen! They then left and others came in. This went on until all the men had prayed, then the women and then the children.”

It has been said that they prayed over him following the sun’s passing its zenith on Monday until the same time on the Tuesday, and also that they continued praying over him for three days, as will be explained shortly. But God knows best.

This practice, their having prayed over him individually without anyone acting as their imám is accepted unanimously, without any disagreement.

However, there is dispute over interpreting this. If the hadīth we have given from Ibn Masʿūd is authentic, then it constitutes documentary evidence. This (behaviour) would constitute ʿal-taʿabbud “an act of religious devotion”, the purpose of which is difficult to explain. It is not up to anyone to say, “This was because they had no imám”, because we have explained above that they only began preparing him for burial after completion of the pledge of allegiance made to Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him.

Some scholars have stated that no one acted as their imám only in order that each person might engage in direct, personal prayer over him. This was also because of the constant repetition of the prayers of the Muslims over him, one following the other, each of the Companions, the men, their women, their children and their slaves, both male and female, acting as individuals.

Al-Suhayl stated, in essence, that God had informed him (the Prophet (SAAS)) that He and His angels would pray over him, and ordered that each individual Muslim should pray directly for him after his death in this way. He stated, “And also the angels act for Us as \textit{imāms} in that.” But God knows best.

Later adherents of the Shafī‘ school differ over the question of the legality of others than the Companions subsequently praying over his grave. Some assert the positive, because his body remained fresh in his grave, because God forbad the earth to spoil the bodies of prophets, as is stated in the \textit{hadith} in the \textit{al-sunan} collections of the traditions as well as elsewhere; he is still just as a person dead today would be. Others disagreed, saying that this should not be done, because the early Muslims who came directly after the Companions did not do this. If it had been in accord with the \textit{sharī‘a}, they would have done this early on and kept up the practice. But God knows best.

\section*{Descriptions of the Burial of the Messenger of God (SAAS), and Where He Was Buried. Reference to the Differences Over Whether He Was Buried by Night or by Day.}

Imām Ahmad stated that Abū al-Ruzzāq reported that Ibn Jurayj, quoting his father, Abū Azīz b. Jurayj, as having said, “The Companions of the Prophet (SAAS) did not know where to bury him until Abū Bakr stated, “I heard the Prophet (SAAS) say, ‘Every prophet has been buried wherever he died.’ And so they took away his bed and dug a grave beneath it.”

This \textit{hadith} has a link missing between Abū Azīz b. Jurayj and Abū Bakr, the former not having met the latter. However, the \textit{hadīth} Abū Ya‘ṣīṣ narrated it from a \textit{hadīth} of Ibn ‘Abbās and A‘īsha, from Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with them all. He stated that Abū Mūsā al-Harawi related to him, quoting Abū Mu‘āwiyah, quoting Abū l-Raḥmān b. Abū Bakr, from Ibn Abū Mula’ikha, who quoted A‘īsha as having said, “There was disagreement over the burial of the Prophet (SAAS), after his death. Abū Bakr stated, ‘I heard the Prophet (SAAS) say, “A prophet only dies in the places most loved by him.” He went on, ‘Bury him where he died.’”

Al-Tirmidhī related this similarly, from Abū Kurayb, from Abū Mu‘āwiyah, from Abī l-Raḥmān b. Abū Bakr, from Ibn Abū Mula’ikha, who quoted A‘īsha as having said, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) died, there was disagreement over his burial. Abū Bakr stated, ‘I heard from the Messenger of God (SAAS) something I have not forgotten. He said, “A prophet always dies in that place where he wishes to be buried.” Bury him where his bed is positioned.””

Al-Tirmidhī classified Abi-Mula’ikha as a weak source and then stated, “This \textit{hadith} is also narrated from a different line. Ibn ‘Abbās related that Abū Bakr quoted this statement from the Messenger of God (SAAS).”
Al-Umawi quoted his father, from Ibn Ishaq, from a man who quoted from Urwa, from Aisha, who said that Abu Bakr stated, “I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say, ‘No prophet has ever been buried in any place other than that where he died.’”

Abu Bakr b. Abū al-Dunya stated that Muhammad b. Sahl al-Tamimi related to him, quoting Hishām b. 'Abd al-Malik al-Tayālīsī, from Hammād b. Salama, from Hishām b. Urwa, from his father, who quoted Aisha as having said, “There were two grave diggers in Medina, and when the Prophet (SAAS) died, people asked, ‘Where should we bury him?’ Abu Bakr, may God be pleased with him, said, ‘In the place where he died.’ One of the grave-diggers would make a niche, the other would dig a pit. The one who made niches did arrive, and he did so for the Prophet (SAAS).”

Mālik b. Anas narrated it from Hishām b. Urwa, from his father, with a line of authorities that was minqāi.

Abū Ya'la stated that Ja'far b. Mahrān related to him, quoting Abū al-'Aṣār, from Muḥammad b. Ishaq, quoting ʿUsayn b. ʿAbd Allāh, from ʿIkrama, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “When they wanted to dig a grave for the Prophet (SAAS), there was Abū Ubayda b. al-Jarrāḥ who would dig down a pit as the Meccans favoured and Abū Ṭalḥa Zayd b. Sahl, who would dig for the Medinans and would make a niche. Al-Abbās called to two men. To one he said, ‘Go and fetch Abū Ubayda.’ To the other he said, ‘Go and fetch Abū Ṭalḥa.’ (He then said) ‘O God, choose for Your messenger!’”

He went on, “The man sent to Abū Ṭalḥa did locate him. He came and made a grave with a niche for the Messenger of God (SAAS).”

“When the Messenger of God (SAAS) had been prepared for burial on Tuesday, he was placed on his bed in his house. The Muslims were in disagreement about his burial. One said, ‘We should bury him in his mosque.’ Another suggested, ‘We should bury him with his Companions.’ Abū Bakr said, ‘I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say, “Every prophet who died was buried where he died.”’

“The bed of the Messenger of God (SAAS), on which he had died, was taken away and they dug a grave beneath it. The people were then brought in to pray over him in groups. When the men had finished, the women were brought in. When they had finished the children were brought. No one acted as imām for the people over the Messenger of God (SAAS). He was buried in the middle of Wednesday night.”

Ibn Māja narrated it similarly from ʿAbd al-Jahdāmi, from Wahb b. Jarir, from his father, from Muḥammad b. Ishaq; that account has the same line of transmission. At its end, he added, “ʿAlī b. Abū Ṭalib, and al- Faḍl b. Qutham, the two sons of ʿAbbās, along with Shuqra, the freed-man of the Messenger of God (SAAS) went down into his tomb. And Aws b. Khuwālā—Abū Laylā, that is—asked ʿAlī b. Abū Ṭalib, ‘I charge you by God and our fine experience of the Messenger of God (SAAS).’ ‘Alī told him, ‘Come down then.’
“Shuqran, the freed-man of the Prophet (SAAS), took a cloak the Messenger of God (SAAS) would wear and put it in the grave. He said, ‘I swear by God, no one will ever wear it after you!’ And it was buried with him.”

Imam Ahmad narrated it from Uthaysan b. Muhammed, from Jarir b. Hazim, from Ibn Ishaq, in abbreviated form. Yunos b. Bukayr and others narrated it similarly from (Ibn) Ishaq.

Al-Waqidi narrated from Ibn Abi Habiba, from Da’ud b. al-Husayn, from Ikrama, from Ibn Abbas, from Abu Bakr, “the trusting”, who quoted from the Messenger of God (SAAS) as having said, “Every prophet who died was buried where he died.”

Al-Bayhaqi narrated from al-Hakim, from al-Ashamm, from Ahmad b. Abd al-Jabbar, from Yunus b. Bukayr, from Muhammed b. Ishaq, from Muhammed b. Abd al-Rahman b. Abd Allah b. al-Husayn or Muhammed b. Ja’far b. al-Zubayr, who said, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) died there was disagreement over his burial. People asked, ‘How should we bury him? With the people? Or in his apartments?’

“Abu Bakr said, ‘I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say, “Every prophet who died was buried where he died.” And so he was buried where his bed had been; the bed was lifted away and a (grave) was dug beneath it.’”

Al-Waqidi stated that ‘Abd al-Hamid b. Ja’far al-Akhnasi quoted from ‘Abd al-Rahman b. Sa’id - he being Ibn Yarb – who said, “When the Prophet (SAAS) died, there was disagreement over the position of his grave. One person said, ‘In al-Baqi’; he made many prayers for (God’s) forgiveness for them (buried) there.’ Another said, ‘At his minbar.’ Another said, ‘In his own chapel.’

“Abu Bakr came and said, ‘I have knowledge and a comment about that. I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say, “Every prophet who died was buried where he died.”’”

The hafiz al-Bayhaqi stated, “It is also given in a hadith of Yahya b. Sa’id, from al-Qasim b. Muhammed, and in a hadith of Ibn Jurayj, from his father, both of whom quote from Abu Bakr, who quoted the Prophet (SAAS). The hadith is mursalan.”

Al-Bayhaqi also stated, quoting al-Hakim, from al-Ashamm, from Ahmad b. Abd al-Jabbar, from Yunus b. Bukayr, from Salama b. Nubayt b. Shurayt, from his father, from Salim b. Ubayd – one of those who had resided at al-Ṣuffa – who said, “Abu Bakr went in to the Messenger of God (SAAS), when he died, and then he left again. He was asked ‘Has the Messenger of God died?’ ‘Yes,’ he replied. And people knew it to be as he said.

“He was asked, ‘Should we pray over him? And how should we pray?’ He replied, ‘You should come in in groups and then pray.’ And they knew it should be as he said.

155. A shelter that was attached to the Prophet’s mosque in Medina that was used by guests and homeless people.
“They asked, ‘Will he be buried, and where?’ He replied, ‘In the place where his soul was taken. His soul would only have been taken in a good place.’ And they knew it should be as he said.”

Al-Bayhaqi narrated from a hadith of Sufyân b. ‘Uyayna, from Yahya b. Sa’îd al-Ansârî, from Sa’îd b. al-Musayyab, who said, “‘A’ishah described to her father a vision she had seen; he was one of the most highly skilled of men in interpretation. She said, ‘I saw three moons fall into my lap.’ He responded, ‘If your vision is accurate, then three of the finest men on earth will be buried in your house.’

“When the Messenger of God (SAAS) died, he told her, ‘‘A’ishah, this is the best of your moons!’”

Mâlik narrated this with an incomplete chain, from Yahya b. Sa’îd, from ‘A’ishah.

She is quoted in both sâhib collections as having said, “The Prophet (SAAS) died in my house, on the day of his visit to me, and resting between my chest and neck. And God joined my saliva with his in his last moments on earth and his first in the Hereafter.”

In the sâhib collection of al-Bukhârî, it is related from a hadith of Abû ‘Awâna, from Hîlal al-Warrâq, from ‘Urwa, who quoted ‘A’ishah as having said, “I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say during the illness from which he died, ‘May God curse the Jews and the Christians who adopt the graves of their prophets as places of worship.’”

‘A’ishah went on, “Had it not been for that, he would have made a prominent tomb; he feared, however, that it would be adopted as a mosque.”

Ibn Mâja stated that Ma’mûd b. Ghaylân related to him, quoting Hâshim b. al-Qâtîm, quoting Mubârak b. Fadîla, quoting Hûmayd al-‘Tawîl, from Anas b. Mâlik, who said, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) died, there was in Medina one man who specialized in making wall niches in graves and another who dug trench graves. People said, ‘We will let God choose; we will send for both. And we’ll let the one do it who arrives first.’ They were sent for and the one who made the niches arrived first. And so they dug for him a grave with a niche.”

Ibn Mâja is alone in giving this. Imâm Ahmad narrated it from Abû al-Nâdir Hâshim b. al-Qâtîm.

Ibn Mâja also stated that ‘Umar b. Shâbba b. Ubaydîa b. Zayd related to him, quoting Ubayd b. Tufayl, quoting ‘Abd al-Raḥmân b. Abû Mulayka, quoting Ibn Abû Mulayka, from ‘A’ishah, who said, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) died, there was disagreement over whether he should be buried in a niche or in a trench grave. The dispute became intense, with voices raised. ‘Umar said, ‘You shouldn’t make a hubbub near the Messenger of God (SAAS), whether dead or alive’—or words to that effect. So they summoned both a man who dug trench graves and another who dug graves with niches. The man who made the niches arrived and so he dug one for the Messenger of God (SAAS), who was then buried.”
Ibn Maja was alone in giving this.

Imām Ahmad stated that Wāki' related to him, quoting al-'Umar, from Nāfi', from Ibn ʿUmar, and also from ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. al-Qāsim, from his father, who quoted ʿAḥṣa as having said that a grave with a niche was dug for the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).

Al-Jahiz is alone in giving this from both these lines.

Imām Ahmad also stated that Yahyā b. Shuʿba and Ibn Jaʿfar related to him, quoting Shuʿba, quoting Abū Jamra, who said that Ibn ʿAbbās stated, “A red velvet cloth was placed in the grave of the Prophet (ṢAAS).”

Muslim, al-Tirmidhī and al-Nasaḥī narrated this from several lines, from Shuʿba. Wāki narrated it from Shuʿba.

Wāki stated, “This was done exclusively for the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).”

Ibn ʿAsakir narrated this.

Ibn Saʿd stated that Muhammad b. ʿAbd Allāh al-Anṣārī informed him, quoting Ashʿath b. ʿAbd al-Malik al-Ḥumrānī, from al-Ḥasan, that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was laid out with a red velvet garment beneath him that he had used to wear. Al-Ḥasan said, “The earth was damp.” Ḥushaym b. Manṣūr quoted al-Ḥasan as having said, “A cloth of red velvet was placed in the grave of the Prophet; he had won it at the battle of ʿHunayn.”

Al-Ḥasan went on, “This was done because the ground at Medina is marsh-like.”

Muḥammad b. Saʿd stated that Ḥammād b. Khalid al-Khayyāt related to him, from ʿUqba b. ʿAbū al-Šaḥbāb who said that he heard al-Ḥasan say, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, ‘Lay out for me a piece of velvet in my niche, for the earth should not be given power over the bodies of prophets.’”

The ḥāfīṣ al-Bayhaqī narrated from a ḥadīth of Musaddad, quoting ʿAbd al-Wahīd, quoting Maʿmar, from al-Zuhri, from Saʿd b. al-Musayyab, who said, “ʿAlī stated, ‘I washed the Prophet (ṢAAS), and I set about looking for any such discharge as comes from the dead, but I saw nothing; he was sweet-smelling both alive and dead.’”

He went on, “There were four persons who, more than the other people, took charge of the burial and refilling the grave of the Prophet (ṢAAS). These men were ʿAlī, al-ʿAbbās, al-Fadl and ʿAlī, the freed-man of the Prophet (ṢAAS). A niche was dug in his grave and unburnt bricks were placed over it as a marker.”

Al-Bayhaqī reported, from some sources, that nine bricks were placed as a marker over his grave.

Al-Wāqīḍī narrated from Ibn Abū Sabra, from ʿAbd Allāh b. Maʿbad, from ʿIkrama, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was placed upon his bed from when the sun had begun to decline on the Monday until it began to decline on the Tuesday. The people prayed over him while his bed was positioned at the edge of his grave. When they wished to bury him, they turned the bed towards his feet and placed him in from there. ʿAlī, ʿAlī, Qutham, al-Fadl and Shuqrān went into his grave.”
Al-Bayhaqi narrated from a hadith of Ismā’īl al-Suddi, from Îkrama, from Ibn ‘Abbās, who said, “Those who entered the grave of the Messenger of God (SAAS) were al-‘Abbās, ‘All, and al-Fadl. An ansāri arranged the grave-niche; it was he who had arranged the niches of the graves of the martyrs killed at the battle of Badr.”

Ibn ‘Asākir stated, “The correct wording should be ‘at the battle of Uhud’.”

Here above we have given the account of Ibn Ishāq from Ḥusayn b. ‘Abd Allah, from Îkrama, from Ibn ‘Abbās, who said, “Those who went down into the grave of the Messenger of God (SAAS) were ‘All, al-Fadl, Qutham and Shuqrān.” He also mentioned the fifth person, who was Aws b. Khawlī and went on to report the story of the (red) velvet cloak that Shuqrān placed in the grave.

The hāfiz al-Bayhaqi stated that Abu Tahir al-Khudaibadhi informed him, quoting Abu Qūāba, quoting Abu Gāfin, quoting Sufyan b. Sa’īd - al-Thawri, that is - from Ismā’īl b. Abu Khalid, from al-Sha’bi, who quoted Abu Marhāb as having said, “It’s as if I can still see them now, those four men in the grave of the Prophet (SAAS). And one of them was ‘Abd al-Raḥman b. ‘Awf.”

Abū Da’īd narrated it thus from Muḥammad b. al-Sabāḥ, from Sufyan, from Ismā’īl b. Abu Khalid.

He then went on to narrate it from Aḥmad b. Yūnus, from Zuhayr, from Ismā’īl, from al-Sha’bī, quoting Marhāb or Ibn ‘Amīn Marhāb (who said), “They took with them ‘Abd al-Raḥmān b. ‘Awf. When ‘All had finished, he said, ‘Only a man’s family should follow him.’”

This hadith is extremely strange. Its line of transmission is very strong, and we know of it only from this line.

Abū ʿUmar b. ‘Abd al-Barr stated in his study, “The given name of Abū Marhāb is Suwayd b. Qays.” He also mentioned another Abū Marhāb, saying, “But I don’t know anything about him.”

Ibn al-Athir stated in his work al-Ghi’aba, “It is likely that the narrator of this hadith is the first of these two men; or it could be a third person, someone other than either of these. And to God be praise.”

Accounts of who was the last person to be with the Messenger of God (SAAS).

Imám Aḥmad stated that Yaʿqūb related to him, quoting his father, from Ibn Iṣḥāq, quoting his father, Iṣḥāq b. Yaṣār, from Miqsam Abū al-Qāsim, the freedman of ‘Abd Allāh b. al-Ḥārith b. Nawfāl, from his freed-man, ‘Abd Allāh b. al-Ḥārith, who said, “I went on the ‘umra pilgrimage with ‘All in the reign of ‘Umar – or ‘Uthmān – and ‘Ali stopped to visit his sister Umm Hanāʾ, daughter of Abu Ṭalib. When he had finished performing the ‘umra, he returned (to her home) and she poured out water for him with which he washed.
"When he had finished washing, a group of men from Iraq came in to see him and asked, 'Abū Ḥasan, we have come to ask you to tell us about something.' He responded, 'I imagine al-Mughira b. Shu'ba is telling you how he was the last person to be with the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).' 'Yes, that's right', they answered. 'That's what we have come to ask you about.' He replied, 'The last person to be with the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), was Qutham b. 'Abbās.'"

Ahmad is alone in giving this from this line.

Yūnus b. Bukayr narrated it from Muḥammad b. İshāq exactly the same, except that he added to the beginning (of the chain) Muḥammad b. İshāq, who said, "Al-Mughira b. Shu'ba used to say, 'I took my ring and threw it into the grave of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and said, when the people left, 'My ring has fallen into the grave.' I dropped it there deliberately so that I would touch the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) with it and so be the last person to be with him.'"

 Ibn İsḥaq went on, "My father İsḥaq b. Yasar related to me, from Miqṣam who quoted his freed-man 'Abd Allāh b. al-İjarīth as having said, 'I went on the 'umra pilgrimage with 'Alī . . .'" and he proceeded to narrate the hadīth as above.

This material narrated from al-Mughira b. Shu'ba does not necessarily mean that it occurred as he had hoped. It could be that 'Alī, may God be pleased with him, did not permit him to go down into the grave and that he directed someone else to do so, and the latter gave it to him (al-Mughira). According to the information given above, it would have been Qutham b. 'Abbās whom he asked to take it.

Al-Waqīdī stated that 'Abd al-Raḥmān b. Abū al-Zinnād related to him, from his father, who quoted Ubayd Allāh b. 'Abd Allāh b. 'Utbā as having said, "Al-Mughira b. Shu'ba threw his ring down into the grave of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). And 'Alī commented, 'You only did that to say, "I went down into the grave of the Prophet (ṢAAS)."' And he then went down himself and gave it back to him — or he told another man to do so, who returned it."

İmām Ahmad stated that Bahz and Abū Kāmil related to him that İmām b. Salama related to them both, from Abū Umrān al-Jawnī, from Abū 'Aṣīb — or Abū 'Aṣīm — who quoted Bahz as having said that he witnessed the prayers being spoken over the Prophet (ṢAAS), and that people asked, "How should we pray?" He (presumably Abū Bakr) replied, "Go in in groups." And they entered from one door, prayed over him and then went out through the other door.

Bahz went on, "When he had been placed in his niche, al-Mughira said, 'You did not properly arrange (the shroud over) part of his feet.' They told him, 'Well, you go down and do it.' So he did enter the grave and placed his hand inside (the shroud) and touched both his feet. He then said, 'Now pass down some earth to me.' They did so until it was covering half his legs. He then came out. He used to say, 'I was later than any of you to be with the Messenger of God (ṢAAS)!'"
WHEN THE BURIAL OF THE MESSENGER OF GOD (SAAS) TOOK PLACE.

Yunus quoted Ibn Ishāq as having stated, “Fatimah told me, she being the daughter of Muḥammad, the wife of ‘Abd Allah b. Abū Bakr, who let me in to visit her so that I heard it from her. She cited from ‘Amra, who quoted ‘A’isha as having said, ‘We did not know about the burial of the Prophet (SAAS), until we heard the sound of the spades in the middle of the Wednesday night.’”

Al-Waqidi stated that Ibn Abū Sabra related to him, from al-Ḥalāys b. Hishām, from ‘Abd Allah b. Wahb, who quoted Umm Salama to say, “While we were gathered together we wept; we did not sleep while the Messenger of God (SAAS) was there in our apartments. We took comfort in seeing him on the bed. Then we heard the sound of the pickaxes in the pre-dawn night. We screamed in lament and those in the mosque did so too. The whole town was screaming with one voice. Then Bilal made the dawn call to prayer. When he mentioned the Prophet (SAAS), he wept and lamented. His pain increased our own. Then people began going in to his grave, but they were shut out. What a disaster that was! Any later tragedy we came to suffer was alleviated when we recalled our disastrous loss of the Messenger of God (SAAS).”

Imām Ahmad narrated from a ḥadīth of Muḥammad b. Ishaq, from ‘Abd al-Raḥmān b. al-Qāsim, from his father, from ‘A’isha, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) died on Monday and was buried on the night of Wednesday.

Several narrations similar to this have been given above. This represents the view accepted by many of the imāms, both early and later. These include Sulaymān b. Ṭarkhān al-Taymi, Ja’far b. Muḥammad al-Ṣadiq, Ibn Ishaq, Mūsā b. Uqba and others.

Ya’qūb b. Sufyān narrated from ‘Abd al-Ḥamīd, from Bakkār, from Muḥammad b. Shu‘ayb, from al-Awza‘ī, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) died on Monday before the middle of the day, and he was buried on Tuesday.”

Imām Ahmad narrated this similarly from ‘Abd al-Razzāq, from Ibn Jurayj, who said, “I was told that the Messenger of God (SAAS) died in the forenoon of Monday and was buried in the forenoon of the next day.”

Ya’qūb stated that Sufyān related to him, quoting Sa‘īd b. Mansūr, quoting Sufyān, from Ja’far b. Muḥammad, from his father and from Ibn Jurayj, from Abū Ja’far, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) died on Monday and that he remained (unburied) for that day, that night and up to the end of the daytime of Tuesday.

This statement is strange. What is most widely accepted is, as we have given above, that he died on Monday and was buried on the Wednesday night.

One other strange statement made in this regard is that narrated by Ya’qūb b. Sufyān from ‘Abd al-Ḥamīd b. Bakkār, from Muḥammad b. Shu‘ayb, from Abū al-Nu‘mān, from Makhfūl, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) was born on Monday, received revelation on Monday, went into exile on Monday and died on Monday at age sixty-two and a half. He remained unburied for three days, with people coming in and praying in groups, not standing in lines and without imams to lead them.

His words, “He remained unburied for three days”, is strange. What is factual is that he remained unburied for the remainder of Monday and all of Tuesday and was buried on the eve of Wednesday, as we have stated above. But God knows best.

An opposing view is that narrated by Sayf, from Hisham, from his father, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) died on Monday, was also washed on Monday and was buried on the night of Tuesday.”

Sayf went on, “Ya'laya b. Sa'id on one occasion related all this to me from 'A'ishah.”

This is very strange.

Al-Waqidi stated that 'Abd Allah b. Ja'far related to him, from Ibn Abu 'Awn, from Abū 'Attāq, from Jabir b. 'Abd Allāh, who said, “The grave of the Messenger of God (SAAS) was sprayed with water. The person who did this was Bilal b. Rabbaḥ, using a water-skin. He began at his head, from his right side, and finished with his legs. He then struck the water on the wall, but was not able to turn around from the wall.”

Sa'id b. Mansūr stated, from al-Darāwīdī, from Yazīd b. 'Abd Allāh b. 'Abū Yaman, from Umm Salama, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) died on Monday and was buried on Tuesday.”

Ibn Khuzayma stated that Muslim b. Ḫammād related to him, from his father, from 'Abd Allāh b. 'Umar, from Kurayb, from Ibn 'Abbās, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) died on Monday and was buried on Tuesday.”

Al-Waqidi stated that Ubayd b. 'Ayyāsh b. Sahl b. Sa’id related to him, quoting his father as having said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) died on Monday and was buried on Tuesday.”

Abū Bakr b. Abū al-Dunyā quoted Muḥammad b. Sa’id as having said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) died on Monday, 12 days after the beginning of Rābi‘ al-Awwal, and he was buried on Tuesday.”

Sa’id b. al-Musayyab said the same, as did Abū Salama b. 'Abd al-Rahmān and Abū Ja'far al-Bāqir.

Section: On the descriptions of the grave of the Prophet (SAAS).

It has been reiterated that the Messenger of God (SAAS) was buried in the apartment of 'A'ishah which had been set aside for her to the east of the mosque, in the south-west corner of the room. Later on, after him, Abu Bakr and then 'Umar, may God be pleased with them both, were also buried there.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Muḥammad b. Muqatil related to him, quoting Abu Bakr b. Ayyāsh, who stated to him that Sufyān al-Tammār narrated to him that he had seen the grave of the Prophet (ṢAAS), as a convex pile.

Abū Da’ūd stated that Aḥmad b. Sāliḥ narrated to him, quoting Ibn Abū Fudayk, quoting ‘Amr b. ‘Uthmān b. Hāmī, from al-Qāsim, who said, “I went in to ‘A’isha and asked her, ‘Expose for me the grave of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and those of his two Companions.’ She then exposed three graves that were neither elevated nor recessed and inscribed on the red surface of the floor were (the words) ‘The Prophet’, (ṢAAS), ‘Abū Bakr’, may God be pleased with him, and ‘Umar’, may God be pleased with him.”

Abū Da’ūd is alone in giving this.

Al-Ijākīm and al-Bayhaqī narrated this from a ḥadīth of Ibn Abū Fudayk, from ‘Amr b. Uthmān, from al-Qāsim, who said, “I saw the Prophet (ṢAAS) in front; the head of Abū Bakr was resting between the shoulders of the Prophet (ṢAAS). The head of ‘Umar was at the leg of the Prophet (ṢAAS).”

Al-Bayhaqī stated, “This narrative shows that their graves were flat, because gravel only remains stable on what is flat.”

This is a strange comment for al-Bayhaqī, may God have mercy upon him, to make. For there is no mention in the account whatsoever of gravel. In that regard, it could well have been made convex, with the gravel buried in the clay and other earth.

Abū Wāqīdī narrated from al-Darawardi, from Ja‘far b. Muḥammad, from his father, who said, “The grave of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was flat.”

Al-Bukhārī stated that Farwa b. Abu al-Maghra’ related to him, quoting ‘Alī b. Mushir, from Hishām, from ‘Urwa, who quoted his father as having said, “When the wall collapsed in the era of al-Walīd b. ‘Abd al-Malik, they set about rebuilding it. A foot became visible to them and they were extremely shocked, thinking it to be the foot of the Prophet (ṢAAS). No one could be found who knew about it, but eventually ‘Urwa told them, ‘No, I swear by God, that’s not the foot of the Prophet (ṢAAS); that’s ‘Umar’s foot.’”

It is also given from Hishām, from his father, who said that Ḥāsīna instructed ‘Abd Allah b. al-Zubayr, saying, “Don’t bury me with them. Bury me with my companions in (the cemetery of) al-Baqī’. There I’ll never receive inappropriate praise.”

I note that when al-Walīd b. ‘Abd al-Malik came to power, in the year 86 AH, he began building the Damascus mosque. He wrote to his governor in Medina, his cousin ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-‘Aṭīz, telling him to expand the Medina mosque. He did so, including its eastern side, and so the apartment of the Prophet (ṢAAS) became encompassed within it.

Ibn ‘Asākir narrated the ḥāfīz with a line of transmission from Zādān, the freed-man of al-Farrāfīṣa, who built the Mosque of the Prophet (ṢAAS), during Accounts of the great afflictions that befell the Muslims upon the death of the Prophet (SAAS).

Al-Bukhari stated that Sulayman b. Ḥarb related to him, quoting Ḥammād b. Zayd, quoting Thabit, from Anas, who said, “When the illness of the Messenger of God (SAAS) grew intense, he was overwhelmed by agony. Fāṭima exclaimed, ‘What agony, father!’ He responded, ‘Your father will suffer no more agony after today.’

“When he died, she said, ‘O for father! He has responded to a Lord Who has summoned him! O father, whose abode is (now) the garden of paradise! O father, we make Gabriel aware of your death.’

“When he was buried, Fāṭima asked, ‘Anas, are you men pleased to be piling earth over the Messenger of God (SAAS)?’”

Al-Bukhari, may God have mercy upon him, was alone in giving this.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Yazīd related to him, quoting Ḥammād b. Zayd, quoting Thabit al-Banāṭ, who quoted Anas as having said, “When the Prophet (SAAS) was buried, Fāṭima said, ‘Anas, are you men now pleased that you have buried the Messenger of God (SAAS), in the earth and have come back?’"

Ibn Māja narrated it thus, in abbreviated form from a ḥadīth of Ḥammād b. Zayd. According to him, Ḥammād stated, “When Thabit related this ḥadīth he would weep so hard his chest would heave.”

This should not be considered tantamount to lamentation. It is, rather, the expression of just admiration for him, may he receive the very best of prayers and salutations. We have made this comment only because the Messenger of God (SAAS) forbade lamentation.

Imām Aḥmad and al-Nasāʾī narrated from a ḥadīth of Shu’bā, who quoted Qatāda, quoting Muṭarrif, from Ḥakīm b. Qays b. Ṭāsim, from his father who, leaving instructions for his children, said, “Do not lament over me; no lamentation was made over the Messenger of God (SAAS).”

Ismā’īl b. Iṣḥāq al-Qadi narrated it in his al-Nawādir, from ʿAmr b. Maymūn, from Shuʾbā. He then narrated it from ‘Ali b. al-Madīnī, from al-Mughīra b. ʿSalama, from al-Ṣaʿīd b. Ḥasan, from al-Qasīm b. Muṭṭayyab, from al-Ḥasan al-Baṣrī, from Qays b. Ṭāsim, who said, “Do not lament for me. Lamentation was not made for the Messenger of God (SAAS), and I heard him forbid lamentation.”

He then narrated it from ‘Ali b. Muḥammad b. al-Faḍl, from al-Sāʾīd, from al-Qasīm, from Yūnus b. ʿUbayd, from al-Ḥasan, from ʿĀsim.

The ḥadīth of Abu Bakr al-Bazzār stated that ʿUqba b. Sīnān related to him, quoting ʿUthmān b. ʿUthmān, quoting Muḥammad b. ʿAmr, from Abū Salama, from Abū Hurayra, that no lamentation was made for the Messenger of God (SAAS).

Imām Ahmad stated that ʿAffān related to him, quoting Jaʿfar b. Sulaymān, quoting Thabit, from Anas, who said, "On the occasion of the return of the Messenger of God (SAAS) to Medina, everything was brightly lit up. The day he died everything there became dark."

"And no sooner had we finished with the Messenger of God (SAAS), than we were overcome by doubts."

Both al-Ṭirmidhī and Ibn Maja narrated it thus, from Bishr b. Hilāl al-Ṣawwaf, from Jaʿfar b. Sulaymān al-Ḍabī.

Al-Ṭirmidhī stated, "This hadith is sahīh gharib."

I note that its line of transmission satisfies the criteria of the sahīh collections. And it is correct from a hadith of Jaʿfar b. Sulaymān. The scholastic community gave it from him, and the people at large do so similarly.

Al-Kudaymī, he being Muḥammad b. Yūnus, may God have mercy upon him, narrated a hadith that could be considered gharib, in this regard. He stated that Abū Walīd Hisām b. ʿAbd al-Malik al-Ṭayalīsī, quoted Jaʿfar b. Sulaymān al-Ḍabī, from Thabit, from Anas, who said, "When the Messenger of God (SAAS) died, Medina became so dark that we could not see one another. One would stretch out one's hand but not see it" – or "not catch sight of it". "No sooner had we completed his burial than we were overcome by doubts."

Al-Bayhaqī narrated it similarly through that line.

He also narrated it similarly through a different line of ḥujja, from Abū Walīd al-Ṭayalīsī, as we have given it above. It is the correct version, but God knows best.

Ibn Maja stated that Ishaq b. Maṣūr related to us, quoting ʿAbd al-Wahhab b. ʿAṭāʾ al-Tحلīlī, from Ibn ʿAwn, from al-Ḥasan, from Ubayy b. Kaʿb, who said, "While we were with the Messenger of God (SAAS), we were (united) in one direction, and when he died, we looked (disunited) here and there."

He also stated that Ibrahim b. al-Mundhir al-Ḥizāmī related to us, quoting his uncle Muḥammad b. Ibrāhīm b. al-Muṭṭalīb b. al-Saʿīb b. Abū Wadāʿa al-Saḥmī, quoting Muṣā b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Umayya al-Makhṭūmī, quoting Muṣāb b. ʿAbd Allāh, who quoted Umm Salama, daughter of Abū Umayya, the wife of the Prophet (SAAS), as having said, "At the time of the Messenger of God (SAAS), if someone arose to pray he would do so without allowing his sight to rise from the position of his feet. Then he died and there was Abū Bakr (in command) and if someone arose to pray, he would not allow his sight to move from the spot where his head rested (during prostration). Then Abū Bakr died and there was 'Umar (in command) and if someone arose to pray he would not allow his sight to move away from the qibla. Then 'Umar died and there was 'Uthmān (in command) and dissension arose, and at that time people would look everywhere, to right and to left.”

Imām Ahmad stated that 'Abd al-Samad related to him, quoting Ḥarmād, from Thābit, from Anas, that Umm Ayman wept when the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died. She was asked, “Why are you weeping over the Prophet (ṢAAS)?” She replied, “I knew the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) would die; what I'm lamenting for is the revelation that was taken from us.”

He narrated it thus, in a condensed form.

Al-Bayhaqī stated that Abū 'Abd Allāh al-Ḥafiz informed us, quoting Abū 'Abd Allāh Muḥammad b. Ya'qūb, quoting Muḥammad b. Nūṣaym and Muḥammad b. al-Nāḍir al-Jārūḥī, both of whom said, “Al-Ḥasan b. ʿAlī al-Khulānī related to us, quoting ʿAmr b. Ḵālīf al-Kīlābī, quoting Sulaymān b. al-Mughīrā, from Thābit, from Anas, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) went to visit Umm Ayman and I accompanied him. She brought him a cordial. He was either fasting or did not want it, and he refused it. She then went over to him to make him laugh. After the death of the Prophet (ṢAAS), Abū Bakr said to 'Umar, ‘Let’s go and visit Umm Ayman.’ When we arrived to see her, she wept. The two men asked her, ‘What is making you weep? Being with God is good for His Messenger.’ She replied, ‘I swear by God, I’m not weeping because I don’t realize that to be with God is good for His Messenger, I’m weeping that revelation from heaven has ceased.”’

“She aroused them to tears, and they began weeping.”

Muslim alone (of the major scholars) narrated it, from Zuhayr b. Ḵālīf, from ʿAmr b. ʿĀṣīm.

Mūsā b. ʿUqba stated, in his account of the death of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and of Abū Bakr’s address on that occasion, as follows, “And the people came back after Abū Bakr had finished the address and there was Umm Ayman sitting weeping. She was asked, ‘What is making you cry? God has honoured His Prophet (ṢAAS), taken him into His garden and given him rest from worldly cares.’ She responded, ‘I am only weeping for that news of heaven that used to come to us like a fresh fruit every day and night. Now it has been cut off and ended, and I weep for it.’

“People were much impressed by her words.”

Muslim b. al-Ḥajjāj stated in his saḥīḥ collection that it was related to him from Abū Usāma, by, among others, Ibrāhīm b. Saʿīd al-Jawhari, quoting Abū Usāma, quoting Burayd b. ʿAbd Allāh, from Abū Burda, from Abū Mūsā, from the Prophet (ṢAAS), who said, “When God wished to grant mercy to some nation of his worshippers, he would first take away their prophet and make of him a precursor and forerunner who could bear witness for them. If God wished to destroy a nation, He would chastise them while His Prophet was still alive; He would destroy them while His Prophet looked on. And this destruction of them would please the latter since they would have disbelieved him and disobeyed his commands."

Muslim is alone in giving this, both in regard to its line of transmission and its content.

The ḥāfīz Abū Bakr al-Bazzār stated that Yusuf b. Mūsā related to him, quoting ʿAbd al-Majīd b. ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz b. Abū Rawwād, from Sufyān, from ʿAbd Allah b. al-Sāḥīb, from Zadhān, from ʿAbd Allah – he being Ibn Masʿūd – who quoted the Prophet (ṢAAS), as having said, "God has angels who will travel all around and pass on to me greetings from my nation."

The went on, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, ‘My life is a good thing for you; you take action and it comes to pass for you. And my death is a good thing for you; your actions will be shown to me. For that which I have seen to be good I have praised God. For that which I have seen to be evil, I have asked God’s forgiveness for you.’”

Abū Bakr al-Bazzār then stated, “We know of the latter part of this hadith being narrated from ʿAbd Allah only from this line.”

I note that the first part of this hadith consists of the words of the Prophet (ṢAAS), “God has angels who will travel all around and pass on to me greetings from my nation.” Al-Nasāʾī narrated it from several lines, from Sufyān al-Thawrī and from aI-Aʾmash, both of whom gave it from ʿAbd Allah b. al-Sāḥīb, who quoted it from his father.

Imām Ahmad stated that Ḥusayn b. ʿAlī al-Juʿfī related to him, from ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Yazīd b. Jābir, from Abū al-Ashʿath al-Ṣanʿānī, from Aws b. Aws, who said that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) stated, “Friday is one of the best of your days. On it Adam was created and on it he died. On it (life began with) a breath, and on it (life will end with) a thunderbolt. Pray for me often on that day, for your prayer will be made known to me.”

People asked, “Messenger of God, how will our prayers be made known to you when you will have arimtā, ‘disintegrated’?” By this word he meant balīta, “decayed”. He replied, “God has forbidden the earth to eat the bodies of prophets, may peace be upon them.”

Abū Daʿūd narrated it thus from Hārūn b. ʿAbd Allah, and from al-Ḥasan b. ʿAlī. Al-Nasāʾī gave it from Iṣḥāq b. Manṣūr, all three of them quoting it from Ḥusayn b. ʿAlī. Ibn Māja narrated it from Abū Bakr b. Abū Shaybah, from Ḥusayn b. ʿAlī, from Ibn Jābir, from Abū al-Ashʿath, from Shaddād b. Aws.

Our teacher, Sheikh Abū al-Hajjāj al-Mīzzi stated, “That line of transmission quoted by Ibn Māja is imagined; the correct name is Aws b. Aws, he being known as ‘al-Thaqafi’, may God be pleased with him.”
I note that this is confirmed as widely known to be correct by a copy of the line of transmission I have in my possession, just as Ahmad, Abū Da‘ūd and al-Nasāʻī narrated it – from Aws b. Aws, that is.

Ibn Māja confirmed that ‘Amr b. Sawwād al-Miṣrī narrated to him, quoting ‘Abd Allāh b. Wāḥib, from ‘Amr b. al-Ḥārith, from Sa‘d b. Abū Hīlāl, from Zayd b. Ayman, from ‘Ubādah b. Nusayy, who quoted Abū al-Daráḥ as having said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, ‘Pray for me often on Friday, for it will be witnessed by the angels. Whenever anyone shall pray for me his prayer will be made known to me, right on until he finishes it.’ And what about after (your death)?’ He replied, ‘God has forbidden the earth to eat the bodies of prophets, may peace be upon them.’ The Prophet of God is alive and sustained (in his grave).”

This is one of the ḥadīths that are given only by Ibn Māja, may God have mercy upon him.

At this point in his work the Ḥaḍīth Ibn ‘Asākir gives a section presenting those ḥadīths narrated about visitation to his sacred grave, may God’s prayers and salutations be for him until Judgement Day! The proper place to examine this is in my work al-Abkāmah, if God so wills it.

REFERENCE TO THE EXPRESSIONS OF CONSOLATION MADE REGARDING THE DEATH OF THE MESSENGER OF GOD (ṢAAS).

Ibn Māja stated that al-Walīd b. ‘Amr b. al-Sukayn related to him, quoting Abū Ḥammām, he being Muhammad b. al-Zibraqān al-Ahwāzī, quoting Mūsā b. ‘Ubayya, quoting Muṣṭafā b. Muḥammad, from Abū Salama b. ‘Abd al-Raḥmān, who quoted ‘Aīsha as having said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) opened a door between himself and the people” – or lifted aside a screen – “and there they were praying behind Abū Bakr. He gave praise at having seen them in such fine condition, and hoping that he would be succeeded by the one he was looking at. He said, ‘People, should any person, any believer, suffer some disaster, let him derive strength from the suffering he was made to endure because of (my departure). For none of my nation will suffer after myself any disaster more severe than that caused by (my departure).’”

Ibn Māja is alone in giving this.

The Ḥaḍīth al-Bayḥaqī stated that Abū Iṣḥāq Ibrāhīm b. Muḥammad al-Faqrī informed him, quoting Shāfi‘ī b. Muḥammad, quoting Abū Ja‘far b. Sālama al-Taḥawī, quoting al-Mīzzi, quoting al-Shāfi‘ī, from al-Qāsim b. ‘Abd Allāh b. ʿUmar b. Ḥafs, from Ja‘far b. Muḥammad, from his father, that some men of Quraysh went in to visit his father, ʿAlī b. al-Ḥusayn. The latter said, “Should I talk to you about the Messenger of God (ṢAAS)?” Please do, they asked. And so he related to us about Abū al-Qāsim – the Prophet (ṢAAS) – saying, “When the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) became ill, Gabriel came to him and said, ‘Muḥammad, God has dispatched me to you to express special honour and respect for you, to ask you about what He knows better than yourself: How are you?’ ‘Gabriel, I am much afflicted. Gabriel, I am in agony.’

‘Gabriel returned to him the second day, asked him the same and the Prophet (SAAS) responded to him as he had on the first day. Gabriel then came to him a third day, asking as he had on the first, and the response was the same. Then he came to him accompanied by an angel named Isma’il, who had charge of 100,000 angels, each angel in charge of another 100,000 angels. He asked to introduce him, and he (the Prophet (SAAS)) asked about him. Gabriel told him, ‘This is the angel of death who asks permission to visit you, having never asked such permission of any human being before yourself, and never will of any person after you.’ The Prophet (SAAS) responded, ‘Allow him in’, and Gabriel did so.

‘He (Isma’il) entered and said, ‘Muḥammad, God has sent me to you. If you order me to take your soul, I will do so. If you order me to leave you alone, I will do so.’ ‘Would you really do that, angel of death?’ he asked. ‘Yes,’ he replied. ‘That was what I was ordered, and I was ordered to obey you.’

‘The Prophet (SAAS) looked over at Gabriel and Gabriel said to him, ‘God is longing to meet you.’ The Messenger of God (SAAS) then said to the angel of death, ‘Proceed as you were ordered.’ And he took away his soul.

“When the Prophet (SAAS) died, and condolences came, people heard a voice from the direction of the house, saying, ‘Peace be upon you all, people of the house, and the mercy and blessings of God. In God there is consolation from all disaster, substitute for all that perishes, permanence from all transience. And so, put in God your trust and in Him hope. Those truly afflicted are those forbidden reward.’

“Ali, may God be pleased with him, asked, ‘Do you know who that is? This is al-Khidr, may peace be upon him.’

This hadīth is mursal. There is weakness in its line of transmission with regard to al-Qāsim al-Umari. Several of the imāms have categorized him as a weak source, while others of them totally exclude him. Al-Rabī’ narrated it from al-Shāfi‘ī, from al-Qāsim, from Ja‘far, from his father, from his grandfather, from whom he narrated only the story of the consolation with a full line of transmission. In that line there is reference to the aforementioned al-Umari. We mention him here so that there be no delusion about him.

However, the ḥāfiz al-Bayhaqī did narrate it, from al-Hākim, from Abū Ja‘far al-Baghdādī, quoting ‘Abd Allah b. al-Ḥarīth, or ‘Abd al-Raḥmān b. al-Murtāzīd al-Ṣaghānī, quoting Abū al-Walīd al-Mahzūmī, quoting Anas b. Ḥuyyā‘, from Ja‘far b. Muḥammad, Ja‘bir b. ‘Abd Allah, who said, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) died, a voice called out to people; they could hear the voice but not see the speaker. It said, ‘Peace be upon you, people of the house, and mercy, and His blessings. In God there is consolation from all disaster and permanence from all transience. Put your trust in God and in Him hope. Those truly deprived are those deprived of reward. Peace be upon you all, and God's mercy and blessings.'"

Al-Bayhaqi then stated, "Even though one of these two lines of transmission is weak, the one does substantiate the other, and shows that it originates from the hadith of Ja'far. But God knows best."

Abū 'Abd Allah al-Hāfiz informed us, quoting Abū Bakr Ahmad b. Bälawayh, quoting Muhammad b. Bishr b. Maṭar, quoting Kāmil b. Ṭalḥa, quoting 'Abbād b. 'Abd aI-Samad, from Anas b. Malik, who said, "When the Messenger of God (SAAS) died, his Companions stared at him and gathered around him weeping. Then a large, handsome man with a white beard arrived who watched them and wept. He then turned to the Companions of the Messenger of God (SAAS), and said, 'There is in God consolation for every disaster, compensation for everything that passes away, and substitute for all that perishes. Return to God and express to Him your wishes. His gaze is towards you in your distress, so look. The afflicted are those not restored.' He then left."

"They asked one another, 'Do you know this man?' Abū Bakr and 'Āli replied, 'Yes; this is al-Khīqr, the brother of the Messenger of God (SAAS)."

Al-Bayhaqi then stated, "'Ayyād b. 'Abd aI-Samad is a weak source. And this (tradition) is extremely objectionable."

Al-Hārīth b. Abū Usāma narrated from Muḥammad b. Sa'd, quoting Ḥāshim b. al-Qāsim, quoting Ṣāliḥ al-Mizzi, from ʿAbū Ḥāzim al-Madani, that when the Messenger of God (SAAS) was taken away by God, the Almighty and Glorious, the muhājirūn went in in groups, praying over him and then leaving. The anṣār would go in next and do the same, then the people of Medina followed. After the men had finished, the women went in. From among them there came cries of the kind that occurred in the past.

Then they heard a thud inside the house and knew and kept silent. Suddenly a voice spoke, "In God there is consolation from all that passes away and compensation from all disaster, substitute for all that perishes. The person restored is one whom the reward (of God) has restored; the one (truly) afflicted is he whom the reward does not restore.'"

Section: Narratives telling of the knowledge of 'The People of the Book' (the Christians and the Jews) of the death of the Messenger of God (SAAS).

Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba stated that 'Abd Allah b. Idrīs related to him, from Ismā'īl b. Abū Khalīd, from Qays b. Abū Ḥāzim, from Jarir b. 'Abd Allah al-Ba'jāh, who said, "I was in Yemen and met two men from there, (one named) Dhū Kalā', the other Dhū 'Amr. I began talking with them about the Messenger of God (SAAS). They told me, 'If what you say is true, your master passed away three days ago.'"

"I continued on, as did they with me. On the road a party travelling from Medina appeared before us. We questioned them and they told us, "The Messenger of God (SAAS) has passed away and Abu Bakr was appointed his successor; the people are fine."

He went on, "The two Yemenis then said to me, 'Tell your master that we came; perhaps we will return, if God the Almighty and Glorious so wills it.'"

"The two men did return to Yemen. When I arrived, I informed Abu Bakr what they had said. He asked, 'Why did you not bring them?'

"Later, Dhu 'Amr said to me, 'Jarir, I owe you a favour; I'm going to inform you of something. You Arab people will continue to be fine for so long as whenever one of your leaders dies you appoint another to power. If, however, it happens by the sword, you'll end up a kingdom, enduring the rage of the kings and being pleased when they so please.'"

Imām Ahmad narrated it thus, as did al-Bukhārī, from Abu Bakr b. Abu Shayba. Al-Bayhaqi also narrated it thus, from al-Hākim, from 'Abd Allāh b. Ja'far, from Ya'qūb b. Sufyān.

Al-Bayhaqi stated that al-Hākim informed him, quoting 'Ali b. al-Mutawakkil, quoting Muḥammad b. Yūsuf, quoting Ya'qūb b. Ishaq al-Hāḍrami, quoting Za'īda, from Ziyād b. 'Alaqa, from Jarir, who said, "A high priest met me in Yemen and told me, 'If your master was a prophet, he died on Monday.'"

That is how al-Bayhaqi narrated it.

Imām Ahmad stated that Abū Sa'īd related to him, quoting Za'īda, quoting Ziyād b. 'Alaqa, from Jarir, who said, "A high priest in Yemen told me, 'If your master was a prophet, he died today.'" Jarir added, "And he died on Monday."

Al-Bayhaqi stated that Abū al-Husayn b. Bishrān al-Mu'addil of Baghdad informed him, quoting Abu Ja'far Muḥammad b. 'Amr, quoting Muḥammad b. al-Haytham, quoting Sa'īd b. Kathîr b. Uffayr, quoting 'Abd al-Ḥamīd b. Ka'b b. 'Alaqa b. Ka'b b. 'Adi al-Tantūkhī, from 'Amr b. al-Ḥārith, from Nasīm b. Ajbal, from Ka'b b. 'Adi, who said, "I arrived in a delegation from the people of al-Hira to the Prophet (SAAS), and he explained Islam to us. We accepted Islam and then left for al-Hira."

"Soon news reached us of the death of the Prophet (SAAS). My friends were confused by this and said, 'Well, if he were a prophet, he would not have died!' I replied, 'The prophets before him died.' So I remained firm in my Islam. Later I left for Medina and passed by a monk without whose advice we never decided anything. I asked him, 'Would you advise me about something that is bothering me?' He replied, 'Bring me some name.' I brought him a bone dice." He said, 'Cast it into this text', referring to a text he had brought out. So I cast the bone into it. He then leafed through the text and came upon the description of the Prophet (SAAS), just as I had seen him. And it was foretold that he would die at the time his death actually occurred.

156. The word used is kāb,' an oblong bone from an animal's foot that was used as a dice. The game of kāb' was forbidden in the Qur'ān. The narrator's name is also "Ka'b", so it is possible that he brought the monk, who had asked for a name, something that bore his own name.
“And so my conviction in my faith was strengthened. I went to Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him, and told him of this, then I remained there with him. After that he dispatched me to Chosroes, and I later returned. Ūmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb also dispatched me to him and I delivered to him his (Ŭmar’s) letter. Then the battle of Yarmūk took place, without my having knowledge of it. He (Chosroes) asked me, ‘Do you know that the Byzantines have killed and routed the Arabs?’ I replied, ‘Not possible!’ ‘Why not?’ he asked. I replied, ‘God promised His Prophet that he would give him victory over all religions, and He is not one to break His promise.’ He told me, ‘Your Prophet spoke the truth to you. The Byzantines were killed. And God did kill ʿĀd.’ He then asked me about the most important Companions of the Messenger of God (SAAS), and I told him of them. He gave gifts to Ūmar and to them also. Those to whom he made gifts were ʿAlī, ʿĀbd al-Ḥamīm and al-Zubayr.”

The sub-narrator stated, “And I think he also named ʿAlī b. ʿAbd al-Rasūl.”

Ka’b went on, “I had been a partner of Ūmar in a cloth business during the jāhiyya. When Ūmar imposed the diwān system, he put me in charge of Banū ʿAd b. Ka’b.”

This is a strange tradition and contains surprising information. It meets the criteria for the category of sabih.

DIVISION

Muhammad b. Ishāq stated, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) died, the Arab tribes seceded. Judaism and Christianity became arrogant and hypocrisy spread. The Muslims became like sheep in the rain on a winter’s night at loss of their Prophet (SAAS), until God united them around Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him.”

Ibn Ḥishām stated, “Abū ʿUbayda and other scholars related to me that when the Messenger of God (SAAS) died, most of the Meccans considered leaving Islam — and indeed were intending to do so. ʿAttāb b. Usayd,” may God be pleased with him, was afraid of them and went into hiding. But then Suhayl b. ʿAmr, may God be pleased with him, arose, gave praise and thanks to God, then made reference to the death of the Messenger of God (SAAS). He said, ‘That event has only increased the strength of Islam; and we will behead anyone doubting it!’ And so the Meccans reconsidered and gave up what they had been considering. ʿAttāb b. Usayd reappeared. This is the position the Messenger of God (SAAS) prophesied that Suhayl would take, as shown by his words to Ūmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb. When, that is, ’Ūmar made reference to pulling out Suhayl’s two front teeth when he was among the prisoners at the battle of Badr, the Messenger...

157. The system instituted by the Caliph Ūmar that regulated both taxation and payments for governmental employees, both civilian and military.
158. Ibn Ishāq is apparently quoting ʿAbī Ḥāṣa in these words. See Guillaume, op. cit. page 689.
159. The Muslim governor of Mecca.
of God (SAAS), had said, ‘He may well take a position for which you certainly won’t blame him!’”

We have recounted elsewhere the apostacy that occurred in many Arab tribes after the death of the Messenger of God (SAAS), and events involving Musaylima b. Ḥabib, the self-professed prophet in al-Yamāma, and the uprising of al-Aswād al-‘Ānsī in Yemen. We have there shown what became of these people, until they retracted and came back to God, expressing repentance and regret for the great stupidity and ignorance they had displayed in seceding, attitudes to which they had been seduced by Satan. God then gave them aid and settled them down, restoring them to His true religion at the hands of his caliph, Abū Bakr, “the trusting”, may God be pleased with him.

DIVISION

Ibn Iṣṭaqq and others quote poems by Ḥassān b. Thābit, may God be pleased with him, on the death of the Messenger of God (SAAS). One of the finest and most eloquent of these is that narrated by ‘Abd al-Malik b. Hishām, may God be pleased with him, from Abū Zayd al-Anṣārī, in which Ḥassān b. Thābit, may God be pleased with him, mourns the Messenger of God (SAAS):

“At Tayba traces remain of the Messenger, and a light-emitting locality, though traces may often fade and disappear.

The signs of a sacred building with the minbar the guide would mount will never disappear.

It signs are clear, its features lasting, and that home with a chapel and a mosque.

There are chambers amidst which light from God would descend, giving illumination and fire,

Knowledge that will never be effaced, signs which, if removed become renewed.

There I knew the Messenger’s design and commission and a grave in whose dust he was hidden and buried.

I remained there weeping for the Messenger, though the eyes of the spirits were delighted, Recalling those blessings of the Messenger. I see my soul unable to enumerate and so is confused.

My spirit is tormented, drained by loss of Āḥmad, as it goes on enumerating the wonders of the Messenger.

It cannot manage to account for one-tenth of all his deeds, and my soul has still more to suffer.

I stood long there at the mound of that grave containing Āḥmad, my eyes weeping all they could.

160. In Ibn Kathīr’s work al-Bidāya wa al-Nihāya.
You are blessed indeed, grave of the Messenger, and blessed you, that land where the wise and rightly-guided one resided.

Blessed be that grave that contains a good man, over which stands a structure of broad stones in tiers.

Hands poured earth over him, eyes their tears, and at that the stars set.

They sent away wisdom, knowledge and mercy, that night they covered him, pillowless, with dirt.

Then they left sadly, their Prophet not among them, their backs and arms feeling weak, Weeping for one whose death-day the heavens and the earth mourn, and the people were more sad.

Could ever mourning for a dead man equal that of the day when Muhammad died?

A day when the site of revelation was taken from them, a source of light that gave benefit and help.

Leading to the Merciful One those who imitated him, saving them from the horror of shame, guiding aright,

An imam for them energetically leading them to the truth, a teacher of truth; those obeying him found happiness,

Forgiving their errors, accepting their excuse; if they behaved well, God was very generous with reward.

If disaster struck them too hard to bear, from Him came ease for what pained them

While they enjoyed God's favour, a guide amidst them to show the way to be followed.

It hurt him if they strayed from the true path, and he was eager that they go straight in right guidance.

He was sympathetic towards them, not excluding any from his protection, leading them towards shelter.

While there in that light an arrow sent by death struck into their light,

And so Muhammad was sent back to God while the angels mourned him while giving praise.

The sites in the land of the sacred places became desolate at the absence of the revelation it had known,

Deserted, except for that spot with the grave where our long-lost friend rests, between Balat and Gharqad

And his mosque and those places deserted at his loss are an empty area where once he stood and prostrated.

And the great stoning mound there, the houses, vacant land, encampments and birth-sites miss him.

161. Balat was the area between Medina's mosque and the market, and Gharqad was its graveyard. The words mean, respectively, “even ground” and “box tree”.

Weep tears, eye, for the Messenger of God, and may I never know you with your tears dried up!

What is wrong with you, eye, that you do not weep for that generous man whose ample robe encompassed the people?

Shed tears copiously and mourn aloud at loss of him the like of whom will never again exist.

The ancients never lost the like of Muhammad, and his like will never be mourned again till Judgement Day.

Nor any one more kind or trustworthy in obligation after obligation, nor anyone more generous, one never ill-tempered.

Nor anyone more munificent with wealth both newly acquired and long-held; while others are generous, some are niggardly with their inheritance.

Nor anyone more noble in descent in the clans when ancestry is checked, not more noble in ancestry to leaders of the (Mecca) valley,

Nor anyone more fortified by eminence, nor more secure in a prominence that is supported by towering supports.

Nor anyone more firm in his roots and his branches and his trunk, watered by rain clouds, his trunk strong and supple.

It was an illustrious Lord who reared him, bringing him to perfection in the most fine of deeds.

Instruction for the Muslims rested with him, and knowledge was not kept back, nor was opinion disapproved.

I say, and no one could complain at my words, unless devoid of sense and out of touch,

That it is not my intent to refrain from praising him; it may be that I will reside in paradise forever, and to attain that day I will constantly strive.”

The ḥāfiz Abū al-Qāsim al-Suhaylī stated at the end of his book al-Rawaḍ that Abū Sufyān b. al-Ḥārith Ibn ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalib said, in mourning over the Messenger of God (ṢAAS),

“I lay awake, my night endless, and the night of the friend of one struck down is ever long.

My weeping cheered me, and my mourning was little indeed compared to what the Muslims had lost.

Our disaster was enormous, momentous, that evening when it was said that the Messenger had died.

Our very earth, because of what had afflicted it, seemed ready to quake.

We had lost the divine inspiration and its revelation among us, that had been brought by Gabriel as he came to and fro.
That man was fully worthy to have the souls of the people flow out to him, or almost so.

A Prophet who would lift doubt away from us, by what was revealed to him, and what he said.

He guided us, and we never feared going astray, the Messenger being our guide.

O Fāṭimah, you have excuse indeed to mourn, but if you do not, that is the (right) path.

For the grave of your father is the most important grave of all, and in it lies the most important of men, the Messenger.”

Chapter: Information showing that the Prophet (ṣaas) did not leave a dinár, a dirham, a slave, a slave-girl, a sheep, a camel, nor anything to be inherited from him — except for land, all of which he left as a charitable offering to God, the Almighty and Glorious.

The world and all things thereon were to him — as they are to God — too insignificant for him to strive after, or to leave as inheritance — may God’s prayers and greetings be upon him and upon his brother prophets and messengers, fully and constantly, until Judgement Day.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Qutayba related to him, quoting Abu aI-AI)Wat;, from Abu Isl:taq, from ‘Amr b. al-Barith, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṣaas) did not leave a dinár, a dirham, a slave, a slave-girl — nothing except his white mule that he used to ride, his weapons and land that he left as a charitable bequest for wayfarers.”

Al-Bukhārī is alone in giving this; Muslim did not. Al-Bukhārī narrated it in various places in his sahih collection, from various lines of transmission from Abu al-Ahwaṣ, Sufyān al-Thawrī and Zuhayr b. Muqāwiya.

Al-Tirmidhī narrated it from a hadith of Isrā’īl. Al-Nasā’ī gave it also, from a hadith of Yūnus b. Abu Isḥaq, all of them quoting from Abu Isḥaq. ‘Amr b. ‘Abd Allāh al-Sabi’ī, from ‘Amr b. al-Hārith b. al-Muṣṭaliq b. Abū Dīnār, the brother of Juwayriyya, daughter of al-Ḥārith, “the mother of the Believers”, may God be pleased with them both.

Imām Al:tmad stated that Abū Muqāwiya related to him, quoting al-A’mash and Ibn Numayr, from al-A’mash, from Shaqīq, from Masrūq, from ʿĀ’isha, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṣaas) did not leave a dinár, a dirham, a sheep, a camel, nor did he leave testamentary statements over anything.”

Muslim is alone in narrating it, al-Bukhārī not having given it. Abu Da’ūd, al-Nasā’ī and Ibn Māja gave it from several lines from Sulaymān b. Mahrān al-A’mash, from Shaqīq b. Salama Abū Wātīl, from Masrūq b. al-ʿAjda’, from the mother of the Believers, ʿĀ’isha, “the trusting lady”, the daughter of (Abū Bakr) “the trusting”, the beloved of him beloved by God, the lady declared innocent from above the seven heavens, may God be pleased with her and give her pleasure.
Imām Aḥmad stated that Ḥabīb b. Abī al-Ḥārīm related to him, from Sufyān, from Ṭālha, from Zīr, from ʿĀʾisha, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) did not leave a dinār, a dirham, a slave-gir, a slave, a sheep or a camel.”

(Imām Aḥmad also stated), “ʿAbd al-Rahmān related to us, from Sufyān, from Ṭālha b. Zīr, from ʿĀʾisha (who said), ‘The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) did not leave a dinār, a dirham, a slave or a camel.’”

Sufyān stated, “That is the extent of my knowledge; I have doubts about (the reference to) the slave and the slave-gir.”

Al-Tirmīzī narrated it thus in al-Shamā’il from Bindar, from ʿAbd al-Rāḥmān b. Mahdī.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Wāki‘ related to him, quoting Misʿār, from Ṭālha b. Abū al-Nujūd, from Zīr, who quoted ʿĀʾisha, as having said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) did not leave a dinār, a dirham, a slave, a female slave, a sheep or a camel.”

Imām Aḥmad narrated it thus, without (expression of) doubt.

Al-Bayḥaqī narrated it from Abū Zakariyya b. Abū Isḥāq al-Muzakki, from Abū ʿAbd Allāh Muḥammad b. Yaḥyā b. ʿAbd al-Wahhab, quoting Jaʿfar b. Ḥārīm, quoting ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. Mahdī, from ʿĀʾisha, who said, “Are you asking me about the inheritance left by the Messenger of God (ṢAAS)? He did not leave a dinār, a dirham, a slave or a slave-born female.”

Misʿār is quoted as having said, “I think he said, ‘or a sheep or a camel’.”

Al-Bayḥaqī went on to state that Misʿār informed him, from ‘Ādi b. Thābit, from Abūl Ḥusayn, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) did not leave a dinār, a dirham, a slave or a slave-born female.”

It is established in both saḥīḥ collections, from a hadīth of al-Aʾmash, from ʿAbd Allāh Muḥammad b. Zayd b. Ḥārūn, from ‘Āʾisha, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died while his armour was mortgaged to a Jew for 30 sāʾ of barley.”

Al-Bayḥaqī went on to state that ‘Ādi b. Thābit informed him, quoting ʿAbd Allāh Muḥammad b. ʿAbd Allāh Muḥammad b. Ḥanūsah, quoting Jaʿfar b. Muḥammad al-Qālānīṣī, quoting ʿAbd Allāh Muḥammad al-Qālānīṣī, quoting Adam, quoting Shaybān, from Qatāda, from Anas, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was invited to a meal of barley bread and rancid fat.” Anas went on, “And I heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) say, ‘By 162. The Arabic printed text quotes al-Bukhārī as adding, ‘For 30 sāʾ weight of barley, that is.”
Him who holds the life of Muhammad in his hands, Muhammad's family has no longer a sa'i's weight of wheat or of dates.' At that time he had nine wives. He had pawned a coat of armour he had to a Jew in Medina in exchange for food; and he had not found money to redeem it up to his death.'

Ibn Maja narrated some of this from a hadith of Sufyân b. 'Abd al-Rahmân al-Naâwi, from Qatâda.

Imâm Aḥmad stated that 'Abd al-Samad related to him, quoting Thabit, quoting Hilal, from Ïkrama, from Ibn 'Abbâs who said, "The Prophet (SAAS) gazed towards Mt. Uḥud and said, 'By Him who holds my soul in His hand, how it would please me if Mt. Uḥud belonged to Muhammad's people and I could spend it in God's cause! The day I die I would have two dinârs worth of it; these, however, I would set aside for debt.'"

"He did die, but did not leave a dinâr, a dirham, a slave, nor a slave-born female. He left his armour still pledged to a Jew for thirty weight of barley."

Ibn Maja narrated the latter part of this, from 'Abd Allâh b. Mu'âwiya al-Jumâhi, from Thabit b. Yazid, from Hilal b. Khabbâb al-Abâlî al-Kûfî. For the first part there is testimony in the collections from a hadith of Abû Dharr, may God be pleased with him.

Imâm Aḥmad stated that 'Abd al-Samad, Abû Sa'id and 'Affân related to him, quoting Thabit— Ibn Yazid, that is— quoting Hilal— Ibn Khabbâb, that is— from Ïkrama, from Ibn 'Abbâs, that 'Umar came in to see the Prophet (SAAS), while he was lying on a straw mat that had left a mark on his side. 'Umar asked, 'Prophet of God, should you not have a more comfortable bed than this?' He replied, 'I'm not concerned with worldly things; I am merely like a rider travelling on a summer's day, resting for a while during the day time beneath a tree, then moving away and leaving it behind.'"

Aḥmad is alone in giving this. Its line of transmission is excellent. There is testimony to it from a hadith of Ibn 'Abbâs, from 'Umar, regarding the two women who protested to the Messenger of God (SAAS); and also in the story of the abstinance from marital relations. The hadith, and others like it, relating this will come later in discussion of the asceticism of the Prophet (SAAS), and his disinterest in and disavowal of worldly things; all this will substantiate our statements that he cared nothing for things of this world.

Imâm Ahmad stated that Sufyân related to him, quoting 'Abd al-'Azîz b. Rufay', who said, "I and Shaddâd b. Ma'qîl went in to see Ibn 'Abbâs, who told us, 'The Messenger of God (SAAS) left nothing except what is contained between these two covers.' We then went to see Muḥammad b. 'Ali and he told us the same."

Al-Bukhârî narrated this similarly, from Qutayba, from Sufyân b. 'Uyayna. Al-Bukhârî stated that Abû Nu'aym related to him, quoting Malik b. Mîghwâl, from Ŧalhâ, who said, "I asked 'Abd Allâh b. Abû Awfâ, 'Did the Prophet (SAAS) leave a will?' 'No,' he replied. I asked, 'Why was it, then, recorded that the people should make wills or that they were ordered to do so?” He replied, ‘He bequeathed the Book of God, Almighty and Glorious is He.’”

Al-Bukhārī, Muslim, and all the orthodox scholars, except Abū Dā’ūd, narrated this, from several lines of transmission, from Mālik b. Mi‘wāl. Al-Tirmidhī stated, “It is ḥasan ṣaḥīḥ ḡarīb; we know of it only from the ḥadīth of Mālik b. Mīghwāl.”

NOTICE.

Many ḥadīth exist that we will give shortly after this section, relating to dwellings, apartments for his wives, slaves both female and male, horses, camels, weapons, a mule, a donkey, clothes, furnishings, a ring and various other things owned by the Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) during his life. We will give the evidences and lines of transmission for the statements relating to all this.

Perhaps the Prophet (ṣaḥīḥ) gave many of these away as gifts to charity during his life; and he manumitted his slaves, both male and female. He also set aside some of his belongings, along with the two tracts of land of Banū al-Naḍīr, and that at Khaybar and Fadak to which God entrusted him, for the benefit of the Muslims.

We will explain all this, if God so wills it. However, he did not leave any of that to be inherited absolutely from himself, as we will show shortly. And God’s help is to be sought.

Chapter: Evidence to the Prophet (ṣaḥīḥ) having said, ‘We will not leave (property for) inheritance’.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Sufyān related to him, from Abū al-Zinād, from al-ʿAraj, from Abū Hurayra to whom this evidence came. He once said, “The Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) said, ‘My heirs will not inherit a dinār nor a dirham; whatever I leave, after the expenses for my wives and provision for my employees, is to be treated as a charity.’”

Al-Bukhārī, Muslim and Abū Dā’ūd narrated it from various sources from Mālik b. Anas, from Abū al-Zinād ʿAbd Allāḥ b. Dhakwān, from ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. Hurmuz al-ʿAraj, from Abū Hurayra, that the Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) said, “My heirs will not inherit a dinār nor a dirham; whatever I leave, after the expenses for my wives and provision for my employees, is to be treated as a charity.”

This is the text of al-Bukhārī.

Al-Bukhārī went on to state that ʿAbd Allāḥ b. Maslama related to him, from Mālik, from Ibn Shihāb, from Urwa, from Aḥīsah, who stated that, following the death of the Prophet (ṣaḥīḥ), his wives wished to send ʿUthmān to Abū Bakr for him to ask about their inheritances. Aḥīsah said, “But did the Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) not say, ‘We will not leave (property for) inheritance; what we leave will be for charity?’” Muslim narrated it thus, from Yahyā b. Yahyā. Abū Dā’ūd gave it from al-Qā‘īnabī, al-Nasā‘ī from Qutayba. All of them quoted it from Mālik.

This comment was from one of the inheriting wives – if inheritance had been decreed – who acknowledged that the Messenger of God (SAAS) established his estate for charity, not inheritance. It is clear that the remainder of “the mothers of the Believers” agreed with what she narrated and remembered what had been said to them in that regard. Her expression shows that this was a matter well established among them. But God knows best.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Ismā‘īl b. Abān related to him, quoting ʻAbd Allāh b. al-Mubārak, from Yūnus, from al-Zuhrī, from ʻUrwa, from ʻA‘īsha, who said that the Prophet (SAAS) stated, “We will not leave (property for) inheritance; what we leave will be for charity.”

Al-Bukhārī also stated, under the section entitled, The statements made by the Messenger of God (SAAS) as follows, “ʻAbd Allāh b. Muhammad related to us, quoting Hishām, quoting Ma‘mar, from al-Zuhrī, from ʻUrwa, from ʻA‘īsha, that ʻAtīma and al-ʻAbbās went to Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him, to receive their inheritance from the Messenger of God (SAAS). They were, at that time, seeking his land at Fadak and his share of Khaybar. Abū Bakr told them, ‘I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say, “Our property is not to be inherited; what we leave will be for charity.”’”

“Abū Bakr went on, ‘I swear by God, I will never omit doing anything I saw the Messenger of God (SAAS) doing.’”

“ʻAtīma then left him and did not speak to him again from then to her death.”

Imām Ahmad narrated it thus from ʻAbd al-Razzāq, from Ma‘mar.

Ahmad then narrated it from Ya‘qūb b. ʻIbrāhīm, from his father, from Ṣalīḥ b. Kaysān, from al-Zuhrī, from ʻUrwa, from ʻA‘īsha, that following the death of the Messenger of God (SAAS), ʻAtīma asked Abū Bakr for her inheritance from what he had left that God had provided him. Abū Bakr told her, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) said, ‘Our property is not to be inherited; what we leave will be for charity.’” ʻAtīma grew angry and left Abū Bakr; she continued avoiding him up to her death.

Ahmad stated, “ʻAtīma lived on for six months following the death of the Messenger of God (SAAS).” And he proceeded to narrate the hadith.

Imām Ahmad stated it thus. Al-Bukhārī narrated this hadith in his work Kitāb al-Maghrāzi within his sahih collection, from Ibn Bukayr, from al-Layth, from ʻAqīl, from al-Zuhrī, from ʻUrwa, from ʻA‘īsha, as is given above. And he added, “When she died, ʻAlī buried her at night. He did not inform Abū Bakr; he did pray over her.”

(ʻA‘īsha stated,) “During the life of ʻAtīma, ʻAlī had great prestige among the people. When ʻAtīma died, he lost this special position and set about making peace with Abū Bakr and pledging allegiance to him. He had not pledged allegiance for those months. So he sent a message to Abū Bakr, saying, ‘Come to us, but don’t bring anyone else.’ He did not want ‘Umar to come because of what he knew of ‘Umar’s severity. ‘Umar said, (to Abu Bakr), ‘Don’t go in to them alone, by God!’ Abū Bakr replied, ‘What could they do to me? I shall go to them, by God!’

‘Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him, then set off. ‘Ali spoke the shahāda and went on, ‘We well know your virtue and what God has awarded you. We’ll not envy you for the good to which God has led you. But you monopolized power, to which we thought, because of our close relationship to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), we had a right to share.’ ‘Ali went on talking until Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him, wept. The latter then said, ‘By Him in whose hand is my soul, I would prefer to do good to relatives of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), than to my own! Regarding the question of the properties that inspired antagonism between us, I am not inclining in this away from what is right; I would never omit doing anything that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had himself done.’

“When Abū Bakr had finished performing the al-zuhr prayer, he mounted the minbar and spoke the shahāda. He then made reference to ‘Ali’s having been late in pledging allegiance to him and the excuses he had made that had been accepted. ‘Ali, may God be pleased with him, then spoke the shahāda and emphasized Abū Bakr’s right and went on to refer to his virtue and precedence. He stated that his actions had not been influenced by any jealousy towards Abū Bakr. He then went up to Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him, and expressed his allegiance to him. The people gathered around ‘Ali saying, ‘You have done well!’ ‘Ali became very popular when he rejoined the common cause.”

Al-Bukhārī also narrated this, as did Muslim, Abū Da‘ūd, and al-Nasa’ī, from several lines of transmission, from al-Zuhri, from ‘Urwa, from ‘A’isha in similar form.

This pledge of allegiance made by ‘Ali, may God be pleased with him, to Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him, came after the death of Fatimah, may God be pleased with her. It affirmed the peace between them. It was subsequent to that pledge to which we referred first on that day in the hall, as was narrated by Ibn Khuzayma and declared authentic by Muslim b. al-Ḥajjaj. ‘Ali had not been avoiding Abū Bakr for these six months, but had been performing the prayer behind him and attending al-mashwara, “the consultative assemblies”, with him. He had also accompanied him to Dhū al-Qiṣṣa.

In the sahīh collection of al-Bukhārī it is stated that Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him, performed the al-‘asr prayer some nights following the death of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and, leaving the mosque, found al-Ḥasan, ‘Ali’s son, playing with the other boys. He carried him on his back and began chanting,

“Oh, by my father, the image of the Prophet, but not the image of ‘Ali!”

‘Ali was laughing. However, when this second pledge of allegiance took place, some narrators believed that ‘Ali had not spoken a pledge before that, and denied that he had done so. But what is positively affirmed takes precedence over what is negative, as we have shown and stated above. But God knows best.

As for the anger being expressed by Fāṭima, may God be pleased with her and give her pleasure, against Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him and give him pleasure, I cannot account for it.

If it was due to his refusal to award her the inheritance for which she asked him, he had given her a reason that had to be accepted. This was his reference to the statement by her father, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), who said, “Our property is not to be inherited; what we leave will be for charity.” She was one of those who submitted to the text of the law-giver that had been unknown to her before she asked about inheritance, just as it was unknown to the wives of the Prophet (ṢAAS), until Ṭāḥitha informed them all of it; and they accepted it.

It should not be thought of Fāṭima, may God be pleased with her, that she was making some accusation to (Abū Bakr) “the trusting”, may God be pleased with him, for what he had told her – heaven forbid that, both for her and for him! How could this be, since ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb, ʿUthmān b. ʿAffān, ʿĀl b. Abū Ṭalib, al-ʿAbbās b. ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalib, ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. ʿAwf, Ṭalḥa b. ʿUbayd Allāh, al-Zubayr b. al-ʿAwwām, Saʿd b. Abū Waqqās, Abū Hurayra and ʿAʾisha had all agreed with him in his narration of this hadith, as we will shortly demonstrate. And even if it had been an account narrated solely by Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him, it would still have been incumbent upon the whole world to accept it, and to yield to him in the matter.

If her anger related to what she had asked Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him, these lands were a public charity, not an inheritance that her husband should supervise. His reason amounted to his assertion that, because he was the successor of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), he considered it his duty to do as the former had done, and to rule as he had. The hadith quotes him as saying, “I will never omit doing anything I saw the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) doing.” And it goes on, “Fāṭima then avoided him and did not speak to him again from then to her death.”

This circumstance and her estrangement from him opened a broad field for the “rejectionist faction” and extensive foolishness, because of which they intruded themselves where they had no business.

Had they properly understood, they would have credited Abū Bakr with his virtue and accepted the reason he gave as it should be by everyone.

However, they are a forsaken faction, a contemptible group, people who stubbornly maintain the dubious, while ignoring what is accepted as definite and incontrovertible by the great imāms of Islam, the Companions and their immediate successors, and the well-respected scholars who followed them throughout the ages and everywhere – may God be pleased with them all and give them pleasure!
Al-Bukhārī stated that Yahyā b. Bukayr narrated to him, quoting al-Layth, from ‘Aqīl, from Ibn Shihāb, who said, “Mālik b. Aws b. al-Ḥadathān informed me” — and Muḥammad b. Jubayr b. Mut‘im also narrated part of this hadith, saying that he went in to him, (Mālik) and asked him and that he replied to him as follows: “I had gone in to see Umar, when his doorkeeper, Yarfā came and asked him, ‘Would you like to see Uthmān, ‘Abd al-Raḥmān b. ʿAwf, al-Zubayr and Sa‘d?’ He replied, ‘Yes, let them come in.’ Yarfā then asked, ‘And ʿAlī and ʿAbbās too?’ ‘Yes,’ he replied.’

ʿAbbās asked, ‘Commander of the Believers, give judgement between myself and this man (ʿAlī).’ Umar replied, ‘I charge you by God through whose permission the heavens and the earth exist, do you know that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, “Our property is not to be inherited; what we leave will be for charity”, and that by this he (the Prophet) was referring to himself?’ The group agreed that he had indeed said that. Umar then approached ʿAlī and ʿAbbās and said, ‘Do you both know that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said that?’ They replied, ‘Yes, he did say that.’

Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb went on, ‘I will talk to you about this matter. God chose His Messenger for this fa‘rābī, as something he had not given to anyone else. As God stated, ‘What God had awarded as fa‘rābī for His messenger . . . has power over all things’ (sūrat al-Ḥāshr; LIX, v.6).

‘That property was therefore specifically for the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). He did not, however, I swear by God, keep it for himself or withhold it from you, but gave out its income which he distributed to you so that the present property remained. And from it he would provide the yearly expenses for his family, treating whatever remained as God’s property. He acted in this way throughout his life. I adjure you by God, do you know that?’ ‘Yes,’ they replied. Umar then asked ʿAlī and ʿAbbās, ‘I adjure you by God, do you two men know that?’ ‘Yes,’ they replied.

‘Umar went on, ‘Then the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) died and Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him, said, ‘I am the successor of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).’ And he took that property and managed it as the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had done. Then Abū Bakr died and I said, ‘Now I am the successor of the successor to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).’ And I took that property for two years, managing it as the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had done. Then you both came to me, each saying the same thing and making the same case. Eventually you (ʿAbbās) came to me asking me for your share from the property of your nephew (the Prophet (ṢAAS)). After that, this man (ʿAlī) came requesting the share of his wife from her father. I told you both, 'If you wish, I will give it to you to be managed in the same way.' Are you now seeking from me a different judgement? By God by whose permission the heavens and earth exist, I'll never give you any decision that is different, not even till Judgement Day! If you are incapable of managing it, then return it to me, and I'll take care of it for you!""

Al-Bukhari narrated this in various places in his sahih collection. Muslim and the other orthodox scholars gave it from various lines, from al-Zuhri.

In one narrative in both sahih collections, 'Umar is quoted as saying, "Then Abū Bakr became in charge of it, and managed it as the Messenger of God (SAAS) had done. And God knows that he was truthful, pious, rightly guided, and always in pursuit of the truth. Then I took control of it and managed it as had both the Messenger of God (SAAS) and Abū Bakr. And God knows that I too am truthful, pious, rightly guided and always in pursuit of the truth. Then you both came to me and I gave it over to your control, to manage it as had the Messenger of God (SAAS), Abū Bakr and I. I adjure you by God, did I not pass it to you to do likewise?" 'Yes,' they said. 'Umar then said to them, 'I adjure you two men by God, did I not pass it to you both to do likewise?' 'Yes,' they said. 'Umar went on, 'Do you (now) seek from me some different decision? No, by Him whose permission the heavens and the earth exist!""

Imām Aḥmad stated that Sufyān narrated to him, from ʿAmr, from al-Zuhri, from Mālik b. Aws, who said, "I heard ʿUmar say to ʿAbd al-Raḥmān, Ṭalḥa, al-Zubayr and Saʿd, 'I implore you by God by whose order the heavens and the earth exist, do you know that the Messenger of God (SAAS) said, "Our property will not be inherited; we have left it as charity"?' "Yes," they said."

This ḥadīth meets the criteria of both sahih collections.

I note that what the two men asked him — though God knows best — was that, following the award of authority to them, the income would be divided between them so that they would receive what would have been their right if it had been decreed that each be an actual heir to the land.

They apparently sent ahead of themselves a group of the Companions, including ʿUthmān, Ibn ʿAfw, Ṭalḥa, al-Zubayr and Saʿd. They had developed a serious rivalry because the management authority had been divided between them. The Companions who had gone on ahead asked ʿUmar, "Commander of the Believers, decide between them both. Or relieve one of the other."

It seems that ʿUmar, may God be pleased with him, was reluctant to divide authority between them as if dividing a heritage, even if doing so only in appearance, since he wished to act in accord with the words of the Messenger of God (SAAS), 'Our property is not to be inherited; what we leave will be for charity.' He therefore resisted them all and gave them an outright refusal, may God be pleased with him.

ʿAlī and al-ʿAbbās continued thereafter to manage the property jointly up to the time of ʿUthmān b. ʿAffān. Then ʿAlī gained the advantage to it and al-ʿAbbās gave it up to him, with the assent of his son 'Abd Allah, may God be pleased with them both, in the presence of 'Uthmān. Ahmad narrated to this effect in his musnad collection. It has continued to be controlled by the 'Alawī community.

I have closely examined the lines of transmission of this hadith and its phraseology in both musnad collections of aḥādīth of the shaikhān, Abū Bakr and ‘Umar, may God be pleased with them both. For each one I have assembled a large volume of narrations they made relating to the Messenger of God (SAA), and their views on what constitutes proper and useful law. I have arranged this material under legal headings currently used today.

I have narrated that Fāṭima, may God be pleased with her, initially argued using analogy and general reference to verses in the Holy Qurʾān. Abū Bakr responded to her by quoting the texts restricting the rights of the Prophet (SAA), and she accepted his words. This is what is attributed to her, may God be pleased with her.

Imām Aḥmad stated that ‘Affān narrated to him, quoting Ḥammād b. Salama, from Muḥammad b. ‘Amr, from Abū Salama, that Fāṭima asked Abū Bakr, “Who would inherit for you if you died?” “My son and my family,” he replied. She asked, “Then why can we not inherit from the Messenger of God (SAA)?” He replied, “I heard the Messenger of God (SAA) say, ‘Prophets do not leave (property for) inheritance.’ However, I myself provide for those whom the Messenger of God (SAA) provided and give money to those to whom the Messenger of God (SAA) gave.”

Al-Tirmidhi narrated it in his collection, from Muḥammad b. al-Muthanna, from Abū al-Walīd al-Ṭayalisi, from Muḥammad b. ‘Amr, from Abū Salama, from Abū Hurayra. Al-Tirmidhi gave it with a full line of transmission and categorized it as being ḥasan saḥīḥ igharīb.

There is also the hadith given by Imām Aḥmad, who stated that ‘Abd Allah b. Muḥammad b. Abū Shayba related to him, quoting Muḥammad b. Fuqayl, from al-Walīd b. Jumay‘, from Abū al-Ṭufayl, who said, “When the Messenger of God (SAA) died, Fāṭima sent the following message to Abū Bakr: ‘Is it you who inherited from the Messenger of God (SAA), or his family? ’ He replied, ‘Not me, his family.’ She then asked, ‘So where is the share of the Messenger of God (SAA)?’ Abū Bakr replied, ‘I heard him say, ‘If God gives provision to a prophet then takes him away, He leaves that provision to whomever succeeds him.’ So I thought I should return it to the Muslims.’ She responded, ‘Then (do) as you (think) and heard from the Messenger of God (SAA).’” Abū Da‘ud narrated it thus from ‘Uthmān b. Abū Shayba, from Muḥammad b. Fuqayl.

This hadith is somewhat strange and objectionable. It may have been narrated in the sense that some sources understood it. These include some who love Shi’i tendencies; this should be known.

164. The descendants of ‘Alī, that is.
The best aspect of this hadith is her having said, “Then (do) as you (think) and heard from the Messenger of God (SAAS).” This is correct and what is to be expected of her, appropriate to her situation, her leadership role, her knowledge and her faith. May God be pleased with her!

It seems that it was after this that she asked him to appoint her husband manager of this charitable property, but he did not agree to that, as we have shown. And because of that she scolded him. She was a woman like all Adam’s daughters, becoming upset as they all do; she is certainly not infallible, in light of the existence of a text from the Messenger of God (SAAS), and her opposition to Abu Bakr, “the trusting”; may God be pleased with her!

And we have narrated of Abu Bakr, may God be pleased with him, that he did reconcile with Fāṭima and treated her kindly before her death, and this pleased her, may God be pleased with him.

The ḥāfiz Abu Bakr al-Bayhaqi stated that Abu ʿAbd Allāh Muḥammad b. Ya’qūb informed him, quoting Muḥammad b. ʿAbd al-Wahhāb, quoting ʿAbdān b. ʿUthmān al-ʿAkt, of Nishapur, quoting Abu Jamra, from Ismāʿīl b. Abū Khalid, from al-Shaṭiʿ, who said, “When Fāṭima fell ill, Abu Bakr went and asked permission to visit with her. ʿAli said, ‘Fāṭima, this is Abu Bakr. May he visit with you?’ She asked, ‘Do you wish me to give him permission?’ ‘Yes,’ he replied.

“She permitted him to enter and he did so, in order to cheer her. He said, ‘I swear by God, I have never left home, property, family and tribe unless to please God, His Messenger and all of you, his family!’ He then reconciled with her so that she was content.”

The line of transmission for this is excellent and strong. It is clear that ʿĀmir al-Shaṭiʿ heard it from ʿAlī, or from someone who heard it directly from him.

The scholars who belong to the household of the Prophet (SAAS) acknowledge the soundness of Abu Bakr’s decision in this matter.

The ḥāfiz al-Bayhaqi stated that Muḥammad b. ʿAbd Allāh al-Ḥāfiz informed him, quoting Abu ʿAbd Allāh al-Ṣaffār, quoting Ismāʿīl b. Isḥāq, quoting Ṣaʿd b. ʿĀli, quoting Ibn Daʿūd, from ʿAbd al-Ḥusayn b. ʿAlī, from Abū Ṭālib stated, ‘For my part, if I had been in Abū Bakr’s place, I would have reached the same decision he reached over (the property at) Fadak.’”

DIVISION

The al-rāṣifātun, “the rejectionists”, have spoken foolishly in this regard, pretending knowledge they did not actually have. They lied about what they had no knowledge and were unable to interpret. They intruded themselves into issues not of their concern.

Some of them have tried to refute Abū Bakr’s reported statement to which we have referred above by maintaining that it is contrary to the Qurʾān in which God Almighty stated, “and Solomon was heir to David” (sūrat al-Naml; XXVII, 16), and also to where the Almighty quotes Zakariyya by saying, “so grant me from Yourself someone to be my successor to inherit from me and from Jacob’s progeny. And make him, O Lord, pleasing (to You)” (sūrat Maryam (Mary); XIX, v.5, 6).

Their quoting this as evidence is foolish from several viewpoints.

One is that in His words, “Solomon was heir to David” He was referring only to power and to prophethood, saying, in effect, “We have made him his successor in his exercise of power, management over his subjects and rule among the Israelites; We have made him a noble prophet like his father. Just as We combined kingship and prophethood in his father, so did we in his son after him.”

This does not mean in inheritance of wealth. For, as is stated by many commentators, David had very many sons, said to number 100. And why, then, should the reference have been made to only Solomon of all these, if what was meant was inheritance of property? What was meant by inheritance was Solomon’s assumption of the prophethood and power after David. This is why He stated, “and Solomon was heir to David”. And He quoted Solomon as saying, “0 my people! We have been taught the speech of birds, and we have been given (knowledge) of everything. This is assuredly manifest grace” (sūrat al-Naml; XXVII, v.16).

We have covered this issue fully and sufficiently in our work, Tafsir (Exegesis). And all praise and credit belong to God.

Regarding the story of Zakariyya, he was, may peace be upon him, one of the noble company of prophets. He considered this world of too little consequence for him to ask God for a son to inherit his property; why should he, indeed, when he was, as al-Bukhārī tells us, merely a carpenter, living off his earnings? Providing merely for his own sustenance, he had no savings to bequeath, for which to need to ask God for an heir. And even if he had had property, what he did ask for was actually a righteous son to inherit prophethood from him and to work for the benefit of Banū Isra’īl and to lead them to righteousness. The Almighty therefore said, “Kāf hā ya’ān yād.” Mention of the mercy of Your Lord to His worshipper Zakariyya, when he called out to his Lord in a low voice, saying, ‘O God, my bones are become weak, and my head shines with greyness! And, O Lord, I have never been tiresome in praying to You. I fear those who will come after my time. My wife has been barren, and so grant me from Yourself someone to be my successor to inherit from me and from Jacob’s progeny. And make him, O Lord, pleasing (to You)” (sūrat Maryam (Mary); XIX, v.1–6). The words were, “my successor to inherit from me and from Jacob’s progeny”. By this he meant the prophethood, as we have affirmed in our work, al-Tafsir (Exegesis), and to God be all praise and credit.

165. A number of the sūrat, “chapters”, of the Qur’ān, as here, are prefixed by letters that offer themselves to various interpretations. These are discussed in the standard works of exegesis to which the interested reader may make reference.
It is given hereabove in the account of Abū Salama, from Abū Hurayra, from Abū Bakr, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) said, “Prophets do not leave (property) for inheritance.” This is a comprehensive, all-inclusive reference encompassing all prophets. Al-Tirmidhî categorized the hadith as hasan. And in another hadith he is quoted as saying, “We prophets do not leave (property for) inheritance.”

Secondly, the Messenger of God (SAAS) was singled out from all the prophets with ordinances in which others do not participate with him; we will give a separate chapter on this at the end of this biography, if God so wills it. If it is supposed that prophets other than himself might leave property in inheritance — and that is not the case — then that would have been narrated in the information we have given from the Companions, including the “four imāms”, Abū Bakr, ‘Umar, ‘Uthmān and ‘Aḥṭ, and this would have made clear his having been singled out from the others by this ordinance. 166

Thirdly, it is necessary to operate in accord with this hadith and to reach judgement on its basis as the caliphs did, its veracity having been recognized by the scholars, whether or not they regarded this as a unique feature of (the Prophet). He did, indeed, state, “We will not leave (property for) inheritance; what we leave will be for charity.”

It is possible, therefore, from the phrase used, that the words of the Prophet (SAAS), “What we leave will be for charity”, represent information about his decision or that of the rest of the prophets, along with himself, in accord with the above; this seems apparent. It is also possible that the words constitute a testamentary statement, suggesting that he meant, “We will not leave (property for) inheritance, since all that we have left is for charity”, his specific purpose being to affirm the validity of all his property being considered to be for charity.

The first of these possibilities is preferable and is that accepted by the majority. The second might be considered strengthened by what is given above in the hadith of Mālik and others, from Abū al-Zinād, from al-A‘raj, from Abū Hurayra, to the effect that the Messenger of God (SAAS) said, “My heirs will not inherit a dinār nor a dirham; whatever I leave, after the expenses for my wives and provision for my employees is to be treated as a charity.” 167 This wording is given in both sahih collections. It refutes the distortions spoken by that foolish faction of the ši‘a who read the phrase as, “What we leave is (to be considered) as an inheritance”, considering the negative particle mā as a “mā, ‘denying categorization’”. 168 Yet how would this work with the first part of the hadith, in which he stated, là nūrathu, “we will not be inherited from” 169 and also this other hadith saying, mā taraktu ba‘da nasiqati nisā‘ī. 170

166. That is, that he not leave property in inheritance.
167. A grammatical term; thus it would render the statement all-inclusive, meaning “whatever”, instead of “not”.
168. Translated above as: “our property is not to be inherited”.
169. Translated above as: “whatever I leave, after the expenses for my wives …”
And is this anything but similar to what is related of a certain mu’tazili who recited to an orthodox sheikh the words, “And God spoke to Moses, using words” (ṣūrat al-Nisā’, IV, v.164), with the word Allāh in the accusative case. To which the sheikh commented, “Confound you! How will you, in keeping with the above reading, be able to distort the following words of the Almighty, ‘And when Moses came at our appointed time and his Lord spoke to him’” (ṣūrat al-ʿAraf; VII, v.143).

The outcome is that application must be given to the words of the Prophet (ṣaḥīḥ), “We will not leave (property for) inheritance; what we will leave will be for charity”, to the full extent that phraseology and meaning allow. It is a statement that makes specific the general tenor of the verse relating to inheritance and excludes the Prophet (ṣaḥīḥ), either alone or along with his brother prophets, may God’s peace and blessings be upon them all.

Chapter: An Account of the wives and children, may God be pleased with them all, of the Prophet (ṣaḥīḥ).

God Almighty stated, “Wives of the Prophet, you are not like any other women, provided you remain conscious of God. Hence be not alluring in your speech, lest those men with sickness in their hearts be attracted. Speak with politeness. Remain in your homes and do not display yourselves as women did in the days of ignorance. Perform the prayers, pay the alms and obey God and His Messenger. God wishes only to preseve you from what is vile, you family members of the household, and to keep you thoroughly pure. And remember those verses and the wisdom from God that are revealed in your homes. God is kind and knowledgeable” (ṣūrat al-Ahzāb; XXXIII, v.32–4).

There is no dispute over the fact that when the Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) died, he left nine widows. These were ʿAʾisha al-Tayybiyya, daughter of Abu Bakr, “the trusting”; Ḥafṣa al-ʿAdawiyya, daughter of ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb; Umm Ḥabiba Ramla al-Umawiyya, daughter of Abu Sufyān Šakhr b. Ḥarb b. Umayya; Zaynab al-Asadiyya, daughter of Jaʾsh; Umm Salama Ḥind al-Makbūzīyya, daughter of Abu Umayya; Maymūna al-Hilaliyya, daughter of al-Ḥārith; Sawda al-Āmriyya, daughter of Zāma; Juwayriyya al-Muṣṭaliqīyya, daughter of al-Ḥārith b. Abu Dirār; and Šafiyya al-Naḍariyya al-ʾIṣrāʾiliyya al-Ḥarrūniyya, daughter of Ḥuyayy b. Akhtāb. May God be pleased with them and give them pleasure.

He also had two wives donated to him. The first of these were ʿArīya al-Qubṭiyya al-Miṣrīyya, from Kawrāt Anṣin, who was the mother of his son

170. The muʿtasaʾla movement seems to have initially encompassed those who ʿażala, “remained neutral or uncommitted”, in the dispute over the succession in AH 35 of ʿAlī b. Abu Ṭalib. Later the word became applied to a theological movement centred in Basra that differed essentially with the sunni orthodox community over the specifics of sin and disbelief. See article in The Encyclopaedia of Islam.
Ibrahim, upon whom be peace. The second was Rayhana al-Qurashiyya, daughter of Sham'un; she accepted Islam and he manumitted her. She then rejoined her family. Some claim that she remained in seclusion among them. But God knows best.

We will proceed to give detailed information on them, drawing upon statements made by the imāms, may God have mercy upon them.

The great ḥāfiz Abū Bakr al-Bayhaqi narrated, through Sa’d b. Abū ʿArtība, from Qatāda, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) married fifteen women. He consummated marriage with thirteen of these and eleven lived with him. He died leaving nine widows.”

He went on to name those nine, as we have done; may God be pleased with them all.

Sayf b. ʿUmar narrated this from Sa’d, from Qatāda, from Anas. Buḥayr b. Kathir narrated it from Qatāda from Anas. The first line is more (likely to be) authentic. Sayf b. ʿUmar al-Tamlml narrated it from Sa’d, from Qatāda, from Anas, as also did Ibn ʿAbbās.

Sayf narrated it similarly from Sa’d b. ʿAbd Allāh, from ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Mulaqa, from ʿAṭīsha who said, “The two women with whom he did not consummate his marriage were ʿAmra, daughter of Yazid al-Ghifariyya and al-Shanbāṭ. He was alone with ʿAmra, but when he undressed her she saw leprosy on her. He therefore sent her away, providing her with a dowry and she was prohibited from contact with other men. Al-Shanbāṭ, when brought in to him, was not receptive and he left her, waiting for her to become so. However, when his son Ibrahim died shortly thereafter, she commented, ‘If he were a prophet, his son would not have died!’ And so he divorced her, provided a dowry for her and she was prohibited from other men.”

ʿAṭīsha went on, “The women who were in his household were: ʿAṭīsha; Sawda; Ḥafsa; Umm Salama; Umm Ḥabība; Zaynab, daughter of Jahsh; Zaynab, daughter of Khuzayma; Juwayriyya; Safiyya; Maymūna and Umm Sharik.”

I note that in the sahih collection of al-Bukhārī, it is stated from Anas that the Messenger of God (SAAS) would go to his wives in sequence and that they totalled eleven wives.

It is well established that the Messenger of God (SAAS) did not consummate his marriage to Umm Sharik, as will be explained. The mention above of him attending his wives in sequence and their being eleven women in number was the total of the nine women named above and the two women gifted to him, Māriyya and Rayḥāna.

Al-Bukhārī gave it in his sahih collection with a full line of transmission from this same al-Ḥajjāj.
The ḥāfiẓ b. ʿAsākir gave this in part, also attributing it to him, to the effect that the first wife the Messenger of God (SAAS), married was Khadija, daughter of Khuwaylid b. Asad b. ʿAbd al-ʿlJzza b. Qusayy, and that she was married to him by her father prior to his having received his prophetic mission.

In one account, al-Zuhri stated, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) was 21 years of age when he married Khadija; it is also said that he was 25 and that the marriage took place around the time that the kaʿba was being reconstructed.”

Al-Waqidi added to this, “And she was 45 years old.”

Other scholars state that his age at that time was 30. Ḥakīm b. ʿHzām is quoted as having said, “The age of the Messenger of God (SAAS) was 25 years of age the day he married Khadija, and she was 40.”

Ibn ʿAbbās is quoted as having said that she was 28 years old. Ibn ʿAsākir gives both these accounts.

Ibn Jarir stated, “(At that time) the Prophet (SAAS) was 37 years old. To him were born al-Qāsim, by whose name he was commonly known, al-Ṭayyib, al-Ṭāhir, Zaynab, Ruqayya, Umm Kulthūm and Fatima.”

I note that she was the mother of all his children, except for Ibrāhīm, who was born to Maryyā, as will be explained hereafter.

Ibn Jarir went on to speak about each of the daughters of the Messenger of God (SAAS), and those who married them. His conclusion was that Zaynab was married by al-ʿĀṣ b. al-Rablʿ b. ʿAbd al-ʿlJzza b. ʿAbd Shams b. ʿAbd Manāf, who was Khadija’s nephew. His mother was Hāla, daughter of Khuwaylid. To him she bore a son named ʿAlī and a daughter named Umāma. ʿAlī b. Abū ʿAlīb married her following the death of Fāṭima. He died while still married to her. After his death, she married al-Mughira b. Nawfal b. al-Ḥārith b. ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalib.

(Ibn Jarir went on) “Ruqayya was married to ʿUthmān b. ʿAffān. She bore him a son, ʿAbd Allāḥ; ʿUthmān was first known by this son’s name and later by his son ʿAmr. Ruqayya died while the Messenger of God (SAAS) was at the battle of Badr. When Zayd b. ʿHarīth returned with the news (of the victory) he found them levelling the earth over her grave. ʿUthmān had remained with her, nursing her, but the Messenger of God (SAAS) awarded him his payment and share of the booty. He then married ʿUthmān to his other daughter Umm Kulthūm. This is why ʿUthmān is known as ‘he who possessed the two lights’. She died, also while living with ʿUthmān, during the life of the Messenger of God (SAAS).

“Fāṭima was married by her cousin ʿAlī b. Abū ʿAlīb b. ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalib. He consummated his marriage to her following the battle of Badr, as we recounted above. She bore him Hasan, by whom he was known, and Ḥusayn who was martyred in ʿIrāq.”

I note that he was also named “Muḥṣin”.

(Ibn Jarir went on) “Then there were Zaynab and Umm Kulthūm. This Zaynab was married by her cousin, ʿAbd Allāḥ b. Jaʿfar. She bore him ʿAlī and ‘Awn and died while living with ‘Abd Allāh. Umm Kulthūm was married by the Commander of the Believers, ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb. She bore him Zayd; ‘Umar died while still married to her. After him she married the sons of her uncle Ja’far, one after the other. First she married ‘Awn b. Ja’far, and he died. His brother Muḥammad then married her and he too died. Then the brother of both these men, ‘Abd Allāh b. Ja’far, married her, and she died while still married to him.”

Al-Zuhri stated, “Khadija, daughter of Khuwaylid, had been married prior to her marriage to the Messenger of God (SAAS) to two men. The first of these was ‘Atiq b. ‘Aidh b. Makhzūm. To him she bore Jariyya, the mother of Muḥammad b. Sayf. The second was Abū Hala al-Taymi; to him she bore Hind b. Hind.”

Ibn Ishāq gave his name and went on, “After the death of ‘Aidh Abū Hala, she married al-Nabābāsh b. Zūrāra, a man of Banū ‘Amr b. Tamim, an ally of Banū ‘Abd al-Dār. To him she bore one boy and one girl, and he died. Then the Messenger of God (SAAS) married her, and to him she bore his four daughters and after them his sons al-Qāsim, al-Ṭayyib and al-Ṭahir. All the boys died while still suckling.”

I note that the Messenger of God (SAAS) did not marry another woman while she was still alive.

‘Abd al-Razzaq narrated it thus from Ma’mar, from al-Zuhri, fromUrwa, who quoted Ḥāṣāsa, as above.

We have referred above in the appropriate place to her marriage, and have also made reference to her virtues, with the evidences thereto.

I note that she bore him no children. It is said, however, that she miscarried a child of his whom the Messenger of God (SAAS) had named ‘Abd Allāh. And she was therefore named Umm ‘Abd Allāh. Others say, however, that she bore this name after the son of her sister Asmā’, his father being al-Zubayr b. al-‘Awwām, may God be pleased with them all.

I also note that it is also said that the Messenger of God (SAAS) married Sawda prior to Ḥāṣa; Ibn Ishāq and others stated this. We have mentioned above the dispute over this. God knows best.

I have described the marriage of the Messenger of God (SAAS) to both these women prior to the Hijra, and how he postponed the consummation of his marriage to Ḥāṣa until after the Hijra.

(Al-Zuhri went on) “And he married Hafṣa, daughter of ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb. She had previously been the wife of Khunays b. Ḥudhāfa b. Qays b. ‘Adī b. Ḥudhāfa b. Sahm b. ‘Amr b. Huṣayn b. Ka‘b b. Lu‘ayy. He died, a Muslim, while still married to her.
“Then he married Umm Salama Hind, daughter of Abū Umayya b. al-Mughīra b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar b. Makhzūm. She had previously been the wife of her cousin Abū Salama ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAbd al-Asad b. Hilāl b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUmar b. Makhzūm.

“After that he married Sawda, daughter of Zamʿa b. ʿAbd Shams b. ʿAbd Wudd b. Naṣr b. Mālik b. Ḥisl b. ʿĀmir b. Ṭuʿayy. She had previously been married to al-Sakrān b. ʿĀmir, the brother of Suhayl b. ʿĀmir b. ʿAbd Shams. He died as a Muslim while married to her after his and her return to Mecca from Abyssinia; may God be pleased with them both.

“He next married Umm ʿHabība Ramla, daughter of Abū Sufyān b. Ḥarb b. Umayya b. ʿAbd Shams b. ʿAbd Manāf b. Qusayy. She had previously been married to Ṭūbayd Allāh b. Jaḥsh b. Rābāb b. Banū Asad b. Khuzayma. He died a Christian in Abyssinia. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) sent to her ʿAmr b. ʿUmar al-Dāmirī in Abyssinia to arrange his betrothal to her. ʿUthmān b. ʿAffān conducted his marriage to her.”

I note that this is what he stated; however, the correct name here should be ʿUthmān b. Abū Ṭāṣ. The Negus awarded her a dowry on his behalf of 400 dinār and dispatched her with Shurahbīl b. Ḥasanā. We have narrated all this at length above—and to God be praise.

Al-Zuhri went on, “Then he married Zaynāb, daughter of Jaḥsh b. Rābāb b. Arad b. Khuzayma. Her mother was Umayma, daughter of ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalib, the aunt of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). Zaynāb had previously been the wife of ʿUmayr b. Ḥāritha, the freed-man of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). She was the first of his wives to have joined him (after her death) and the first to have a grave monument constructed over her. ʿĀsmāʾ, daughter of ʿUmayy, made this over her, having seen this done in Abyssinia.

“He next married Zaynāb, daughter of Khuzayma. She was of Banū ʿAbd Manāf b. Hilāl b. ʿAmir b. Ṣaḥṣaʾa. She was known as ʿumm al-masākin, the mother of the unfortunate, and had previously been the wife of ʿAbd Allāh b. Jaḥsh b. Rābāb, who was killed at the battle of Uḥud. She lived only a short time with the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), before she died; may God be pleased with her.”

Yūnūs quoted Muhammad b. ʿIṣḥāq as having stated, “Prior to this she had also been married to al-Ḥusayn b. al-Ḥārith b. ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalib b. ʿAbd Manāf, or to his brother al-Ṭūfayl b. al-Ḥārith.”

Al-Zuhri went on, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) also married Maymūnā, daughter of al-Ḥārith b. Ḥazn, son of Bujayr b. al-Ḥuzam b. Ṭuʿabā b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Hilāl b. ʿAmir b. Ṣaḥṣaʾa. And it was she who offered herself in marriage.”

I note that in fact he did ask for her in marriage. The matchmaker between them was Abū Rāfīʿ, his freed-man, as we have narrated above in the section of theʿumrat al-qāḍāʾ.

In his account, Sayf b. ʿUmar stated that she had been the wife of ʿUmayr b. ʿAmr, a son of ʿAqda b. Thaqīf b. ʿAmr al-Ṭhaqafī. He died while still married

Sayf went on, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) took Juwayriyya, daughter of al-Ḥārith b. Abu Dirār b. al-Ḥārith b. 'Amir b. Malik b. al-Muṣṭaṭiq of Khuzā' at the battle of al-Muraysī'. He freed her, then married her. It is also said that her father al-Ḥārith, the leader of Khuzā', came forward and accepted Islam and then married her to him. She had previously been married to her cousin Ṣafwān b. Abū Shufr.”

Qatāda quoted from Sa'd b. al-Musayyab, al-Sha'bi, Muḥammad b. Ṣa'id and others as having stated, “This clan of Khuzā' had been allies of Abū Sufyān against the Messenger of God (SAAS). This is why Ḥassān (b. Thābit) spoke the verse,

“The alliance of al-Ḥārith b. Abū Dirār and that of Qurayya among you are the same.”

In his account from Sa'd b. 'Abd Allāh, Sayf b. 'Umar stated that Ibn Abū Mulayka quoted Ḥiṣā as having said, “Juwayriyya had been married to her cousin Malik b. Ṣafwān b. Tawlab Dhū al-Shufr b. Abū al-Sarḥ b. Malik b. al-Muṣṭaṭiq.”

Sayf went on, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) also took captive Ṣafiyya, daughter of Ḥuyayy b. Ḥakṭab, of Banū al-NaḍIr, at Khaybar. She was then the bride of Kināna b. Abū al-Ḥuqayq.”

In his account, Sayf b. 'Umar maintained that prior to her marriage to Kināna she had been the wife of Sallām b. Mishkam. But God knows best.

Sayf concluded, “These, then, are the 11 women with whom the Messenger of God (SAAS) consummated marriage.”

During his caliphate, 'Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb awarded 12,000 (dirhams) to each of the wives of the Messenger of God (SAAS). However, he gave 6,000 to Juwayriyya and Ṣafiyya since they had been taken captive.

Al-Zuhri stated, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) had kept both these women in seclusion and had provided for them.”

I note that we have commented extensively above, in the appropriate places, on his marriages to each of these women, may God be pleased with them.

Al-Zuhri stated that the Messenger of God (SAAS) also married al-ʿĀliya, daughter of Ṣabyān b. ʿAmr, of Banū Bakr b. Kilāb, and that he consummated this marriage and divorced her.

Al-Bayhaqi commented, “It is thus stated in my book. And also, in an account from someone else, it is said that he did not consummate marriage with her but did divorce her.”

b. ‘Abd b. Abū Bakr b. Kilāb, and that she lived with him for a period and he then divorced her.”

Yāqūb b. Sufyān narrated from Ḥajjāj b. Abū Muniṣ, from his grandfather, from al-Zuhrī, from ‘Urwā, who quoted ‘Ā‘isha as having said, “It was al-Dāḥḥāk b. Sufyān b. Kilāb who pointed her out to the Messenger of God (SAAS); I was listening from behind the screen. He said, ‘Messenger of God, do you find Umm Shabib’s sister attractive?’ Umm Shabib was the wife of al-Dāḥḥāk.”

Al-Zuhrī stated on this subject, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) contracted marriage to a woman of Banū ‘Amr b. Kilāb. Then he was told that she had leprosy and he divorced her without having consummated the marriage.”

I comment that it is evident that this refers to the woman previously mentioned. But God knows best.

Al-Zuhrī went on, “He also married a woman of Banū al-Jawn al-Kindi, allies of Banū Fazzārā. But she took refuge from him and he told her, ‘You’ve indeed sought refuge with Someone mighty! Rejoin your family.’ He divorced her without having consummated the marriage.

He went on, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) also had in his household a bond-maid called Mariyya. A son was born to her named Ibrāhīm. He died when several months old.” There was also a slave-born female named Rayātana, daughter of Shamʿun, a Jew from Banū Khānāfa, a clan of Banū Qurayṣa. The Messenger of God (SAAS) manumitted her. They say that she remained in seclusion thereafter.”

The hāfīz Ibn ʿAsākir narrated, giving a line of transmission from ʿĀli b. Muḥāhid, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) married Khālīfa, daughter of Huḍhayl b. Hubayrat al-Taghlibi, whose mother was Kharnāq, daughter of Khalīfa, daughter of Dīhya b. Khalfā. She was carried to him from Syria, and she died on the way.

Yūnūs b. Bukayr quoted Muḥammad b. ʿIṣḥāq as having said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) married Asmāʾ, daughter of Kaʿb al-Jawniyah, but he had not consummated the marriage with her by the time he divorced her. He also married ʿAmra, daughter of Zayd, a woman of Banū Kilāb, from the sub-tribe of Banū al-Waḥṭ. She had previously been married to al-Faḍl b. ʿAbd ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalib. He (the Messenger of God (SAAS)) divorced her without having consummated marriage with her.”

Al-Bayhaqī stated, “These were the two women referred to by al-Zuhrī, though he did not name them. However, Ibn ʿIṣḥāq did not mention al-ʿĀliyā.”

Al-Bayhaqī also stated that al-Ḥakīm informed him, quoting al-ʿAshāmm, quoting ʿAḥmad b. ʿAbd al-Jabār, from Yūnūs b. Bukayr, from Zakariyyāʾ b. Abū Zaʿida, from al-Shaʿbī, who said, “Various women gave themselves to the Messenger of God (SAAS). He consummated with some of these and with others”

171. ʿAmra, daughter of Yazīd al-Ghīfārīyya, that is.

172. The translation is tentative. The Arabic is, wa qad mala)a al-mahda, “after he had fulfilled the cradle.”
he delayed, not approaching them before his death. They did not marry after him. These included Umm Sharik. This relates to the words of the Almighty, ‘You may postpone whomever of them you wish, and you may take to yourself whomever you wish. (Should) you desire those you previously set aside, then no blame is yours’” (sūrat al-Ḥzāb; XXXIII, v.51).

Al-Bayhaqi stated that it was narrated to him from Hishām b. Urwa, who quoted his father as having said, “Khawlah” – al-Ḥakm’s daughter, that is – “was one of those women who gave themselves to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).”

Al-Bayhaqi went on to state that it was narrated to him from a hadith of Abū Rashid al-Sā’idi that the name of the woman of Banū al-Jawn who had sought refuge and whom the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had sent back to her family was Umayma, daughter of al-Nu‘mān b. Sharahl.

Imām Ahmad stated that Muhammad b. ‘Abd Allāh al-Zubayrī related to him, quoting ‘Abd al-Rāḥmān b. al-Ghasīl, from Ḥamza b. Abū Usayd, quoting his father and from ‘Abbas b. Sahl, quoting his father, both of whom stated, “The Prophet (ṢAAS), accompanied by some of his Companions, passed by us, so we went off with him. We reached a garden called al-Shawl and proceeded in it until we came to two walls. We sat between them, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), having told us to do so. He then went on inside; the woman of Banū al-Jawn, accompanied by her maid, had been brought to him (there) and left alone in a house belonging to Umayma, daughter of al-Nu‘mān b. Sharahl. When he went in to the woman of Banū al-Jawn, he said to her, ‘Give yourself to me!’ But she answered, ‘Should a queen give herself to a common person!’ He replied, ‘You have gained refuge with Him who awards it!’

“He then came out to us and said, ‘Abu Usayd, present two white lined dresses to her and take her back to her family.’”

Someone other that Abū Ḥmad (sic) gave the wording as, “a woman of Banū al-Jawn named Umayma”.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Abū Nu‘aym related to him, quoting ‘Abd al-Rahmān
b. al-Ghasīl, from Ḥamza b. Abū Usayd, from Abū Usayd, who said, “We went out in the company of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and proceeded to a garden called al-Shawl. In it we reached two walls, between which we sat down; he had told us, ‘Sit down here.’ He then went on inside. The woman of Banū al-Jawn, accompanied by her nurse-maid, had been brought out to him (there) and had been given accommodations in a house belonging to Umayma, daughter of al-Nu‘mān b. Sharahl. When the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) went in to her, he asked her, ‘Give yourself to me!’ She replied, ‘Should a queen give herself to a common person?’ He brought down his hand upon her so that she would be pacified. She then said, ‘I seek refuge in God from you!’ He replied, ‘You have gained refuge with Him who awards it!’

“He then came out to us and said, ‘Abū Usayd, present two white lined dresses to her and take her back to her family.’”
Al-Bukhari also stated that al-Ḥusayn b. al-Walid said, quoting Ābd al-Raḥmān b. al-Ghasil, from ʿAbbās b. Sahl b. Saʿd, from his father and from Abū Usayd, both of whom stated, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) contracted marriage with Umayma, daughter of Sharāḥil. When he went in to her, he stretched out his hand towards her, and she seems to have disliked that. He then told Abū Usayd to give her a trousseau and two white linen dresses.”

Al-Bukhari then gave this hadith from ʿAbd Allāh b. Muḥammad, quoting Ibrahim b. al-Wazir, quoting ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Ivrāz, from his father and from ʿABBAS B. Sahl b. Saʿd, from his father.

Al-Bukhari is the only author of compilations of the aḥādīth who gives these narratives.

Al-Bukhari also stated that al-Ḥumaydī related to him, quoting al-Walid, quoting al-Awzaʿī, who said he asked al-Zuhri, “Which one of the wives of the Prophet (SAAS) sought refuge (with God) from him?” He replied, “Urwa quoted to me ʿAʾīsha as having said that when the daughter of al-Jawn went in to the Messenger of God (SAAS), she said, ‘I seek refuge with God from you!’ And he replied, ‘You have gained refuge with the Great One. Go and join your family.’”

Abū ʿAbd Allāh went on to say that al-Iṣḥāq b. Abū Manʿī narrated it from his grandfather, from al-Zuhri, who said that Urwa quoted ʿAʾīsha as having said the same.

Al-Bukhari is alone in giving this narrative; Muslim does not.

Al-Bayhaqī stated, “I saw in the book al-Maʿrif of Ibn Manda that the name of the woman who sought refuge with God was Umayma, daughter of al-Nuʿmān b. Sharāḥil. Her name is also given as Fāṭima, daughter of al-Dahhak. Her true name was Umayma. But God knows best.”

They claim, moreover, that the name of the woman of Banū Kalb was ʿAmra, and that she was described by her father as never becoming sick. The Messenger of God (SAAS) found her distasteful.

Muḥammad b. Saʿd narrated from Muhammad b. ʿAbd Allāh, from al-Zuhri, who said, “It was Fāṭima, daughter of al-Dahhak b. Sufyān, who sought refuge with God from him, and so he divorced her. She would collect animal droppings and say, ‘How unfortunate I am!’ He had contracted marriage with her in Dhu al-Qaʿda of 8 AH. She died in 60 AH.”

Yūnus quoted Ibn Iṣḥāq as having said that among the women with whom the Messenger of God (SAAS) contracted but did not consummate marriage were ʿAsmāʾ al-Jawniyya, daughter of Kaʿb, and ʿAmra, daughter of Yazīd al-Kilabiyya. Ibn ʿAbbās and Qatāda gave the name as ʿAsmāʾ, daughter of al-Nuʿmān b. Abū al-Jawn. But God knows best.

Ibn ʿAbbās stated that when the woman sought refuge from him with God, he came out angry. Al-Ashʿath told him, “Don’t let that bother you, Messenger of God. I have someone more beautiful for you.” And he arranged his marriage with his own sister, Qatila.

Others say that this incident occurred in the spring of 9 AH.

Sa'd b. Abü 'Arūba quoted Qatada as having said that the Messenger of God (SAAS) married 15 women; he included Umm Sharik al-Anşāriyya al-Najjāriyya among these.

He (Qatada) also said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) stated, ‘I like to marry ansār women, but I hate their jealousy.’ And he did not consummate marriage with her.”

He went on, “He also married Asmā', daughter of al-Šalt, of Banū Harām, of the clan of Banū Salīm, but he did not consummate with her. And he also became engaged to Hamza al-Mazaniyya, daughter of al-Ḥārith.”

“Among these he mentioned Qatila, daughter of Qayṣ, sister of al-Asḥāth b. Qays. Some claim that he married her two months prior to his death. Others maintain that he married her during his illness. But she had not come to him, nor had he seen her, nor had he consummated marriage with her.”

He went on, “Others claim that the Prophet (SAAS) left a testamentary statement that Qatila be given a choice. If she wished, she could go into seclusion and be forbidden access to the Muslims, and if she wished, she could marry anyone she liked. She did choose to marry, and Îkrama b. Abū Jahl married her in Ḥadramawt. News of this reached Abū Bakr and he commented, ‘I’m almost grinding my teeth in anger at them both!’

“Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb said, ‘But she is not one of ‘the mothers of the Believers’. He did not consummate marriage with her, nor was she placed in seclusion.’”

“Abū ‘Ubayda stated that some people maintain that the Messenger of God (SAAS) left no testamentary statement about her, that she apostatized after his death, and Umar used her apostasy as argument against Abū Bakr by stating that she was not one of ‘the mothers of the Believers’.’”

Ibn Manda stated that the woman who apostatized was al-Barsā, of Banū ‘Awf b. Sa'd b. Dhubyān.

The ḥadīs Ibn ‘Asḵir narrated through several lines, from Da‘ūd b. Abū Hind, from Îkrama, from Ibn ‘Abbās, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) contracted marriage to Qatila, sister of al-Asḥāth b. Qays, but died before giving her a choice, and that God freed her from commitment to him.

Ḥammād b. Salama narrated, from Da‘ūd b. Abū Hind, from al-Sha'bī, that Abū Bakr wanted to behead Îkrama b. Abū Jahl after his marriage to Qatila. ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb, however, persuaded him against this, saying that the Messenger of God (SAAS) had not consummated marriage with her, that she had apostatized with her brother, and had become disassociated from both God and His Prophet. He kept insisting on this until Abū Bakr gave up the issue.

173. The Arabic word used is ghayra; this also connotes pride and high self-esteem.

Al-Ḥakim stated that Abū Ḫaydā added to the number of wives given above Fāṭima, daughter of Shurayḥ, and Saba', daughter of Asmā' b. al-Ṣāliḥ al-Sulamiyya.

Ibn 'Aṣākir narrated it similarly through Ibn Manda, giving a line of transmission from Qāṭāda.

Muḥammad b. Sa'd gave it similarly from Ibn al-Kalbī. Ibn Sa'd said, "She was Saba'."

Ibn 'Aṣākir stated that her full name was Saba', daughter of al-Ṣāliḥ b. Ḥabīb b. Ḥarīthah b. Hilal b. Ḥaram b. Simāk b. 'Abs al-Sulami.

Ibn ʿUmar stated, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) sent Abū Usayd to arrange his marriage to a woman of Banū ʿĀmir named ʿĀmra, daughter of Yazīd b. ʿUbayd b. Kilāb. He did contract marriage with her but then learned that she had leprosy and he divorced her."

Muḥammad b. Sa'd quoted al-Waqīdī as having stated that Abū Maṣḥār related to him, saying, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) married Mulaykā, daughter of Ka'b. She was reputed to be exceedingly beautiful. ʿAʾisha went in to visit her and asked, 'Are you not ashamed to be marrying the man who killed your father?' Mulaykā then sought refuge with God from him and he divorced her.

"Her people then came to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and told him, 'She is just young and of unsound judgement. And she has been deceived. Take her back.' But he refused. They then asked his permission for her to marry a close relative of hers of Banū ʿUdhra, and he agreed.

"Her father had been killed by Khalīd b. al-Walīd at the conquest of Mecca."

Al-Waqīdī stated that ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz al-Jundūsī related to him, from his father, from ʿAṭā b. Yazīd, who said, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) consummated marriage with her in Ramadaʿn of 8 AH; and she died while still married to him."

Al-Waqīdī went on, "Our colleagues deny that."

al-Sahmi. Next he married Sawda, daughter of Zam'a, who had previously been married to al-Sakrân b. 'Amr, a brother of Banû Amir b. Lu'ayy. Then he married Umm Ḥabība, daughter of Abū Sufyān, who had previously been married to 'Ubayd Allāh b. Jahsh al-Asadi, of Banû Khuzayma. He next married Umm Salama, daughter of Abū Umayya, her given name being Hind. She had previously been married to Abū Salama 'Abd Allāh b. 'Abd al-Asad b. 'Abd al-'Uzza. He then married Zaynab, daughter of Khuzayma al-Hilāliyya, also al-Ṣāliyya, daughter of Zabyān, of Banû Bakr b. 'Amr b. Kilāb. He married a woman of Banû al-Jawn of Kinda, and received as a captive Juwayriyya, in the expedition to al-Muraysi', in which Manāt were defeated. The latter was the daughter of al-Ḥarith b. Abū Dirār of Banû al-Muṣṭaliq of Khuzā'ā. He also received as a captive Ṣafīyya, daughter of Ḥuyayy b. Akhtāb, of Banû al-Naḍīr. These two women were part of the booty God had granted him, having awarded both to him. He also received Māriyya, the Copt, as a tribute, and she bore him Ibrāhīm. He similarly received Rayḥāna of Banû Qurayṣa as a tribute; he set her free, and she rejoined her family with whom she remained in seclusion.

"The Messenger of God (SAAS) divorced al-Ṣāliyya, daughter of Zabyān. He separated from a woman of Banû 'Amr b. Kilāb, and also from a woman of Banû al-Jawn, of Kinda, because she had leprosy. Zaynab al-Hilāliyya, daughter of Khuzayma, died during the lifetime of the Messenger of God (SAAS). We have also been told that al-Ṣāliyya, daughter of Zabyān, whom he divorced, married again before the wives of the Messenger of God (SAAS), had been declared (by God) to be prohibited. She married a cousin, from her own people, and had children among them."

We have given this text in full because of the strangeness of his reference to the marriage of Sawda as having been in Medina. The truth is that this took place in Mecca, before the Hijra, as we have related above. Though God knows best.

Yūnus b. Bukayr quoted Muḥammad b. Ishāq as having stated, "Khadija, daughter of Khuwaylid, died three years before the Messenger of God (SAAS) left on the Hijra. He did not marry any other woman during her lifetime; she and Abū Ṭālib died the same year. After Khadija, the Messenger of God (SAAS) married Sawda, daughter of Zam'a. After Sawda, he married Ṭā'īsa, daughter of Abū Bakr. Ṭā'īsa was the only virgin he married; he did not receive a child from her before he died. After Ṭā'īsa, he married Ḥaṣa, daughter of 'Umar. Then he married Zaynab al-Hilāliyya, daughter of Khuzayma, (known as) umm al-masākin, 'the mother of the poor'. After her he married Umm Ḥabība, daughter of Abū Sufyān, and after her Umm Salama Hind, daughter of Abū Umayya. After her he married Zaynab, daughter of Jahsh, and after her Juwayriyya, daughter of al-Ḥarith b. Abū Dirār. Then, after Juwayriyya, he married Ṣafiyya, daughter of Ḥuyayy b. Akhtāb. After Ṣafiyya he married Maymūna al-Hilāliyya, daughter of al-Ḥarith."

This sequence is preferable and more accurate than that listed by al-Zuhri. But God knows best.
Yūnus b. Bukayr stated, from Abū Yaḥyā, from Ḥumayd b. Zayd al-Ṭā'ī, from Sahl b. Zayd al-Anṣārī, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) arranged his marriage to a woman of Banū Ghifār. He went in to her and he told her to undress, and she did so. He then saw a white spot of leprosy at her breasts and so kept away from her. He then told her, ‘Take your clothes and rejoin your family.’ He paid her her dowry in full.”

Abū Nuṣaym narrated it from a hadith of Ḥumayyil b. Zayd, from Sahl b. Zayd al-Anṣārī, someone who had seen the Prophet (ṣaḥīḥ). He stated, “The Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) married a woman of Banū Ghifār”, and he proceeded to narrate as above.

I note that Umm Sharik al-Azdiyya was among those women with whom the Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) contracted marriage but did not consummate.

Al-Wāqīdī stated, “It is well established that she was of Banū Daws, though some say of Banū Āmir, and that her name was Khawlā, daughter of Ḥakīm al-Sulami.”

Al-Wāqīdī stated that her name was Ghaziyya, daughter of Jābir b. Ḥakīm. Muhammad b. Ishaq quoted Ḥakīm b. Ḥakīm, from Muhammad b. ʿĀli b. al-Husayn, as having stated that his father said, “The total number of women the Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) married was 15. These included Umm Sharik al-Anṣārīyya; she gave herself to the Prophet (ṣaḥīḥ).”

Ṣaʿīd b. Abū Ṭālib quoted Qutada as having stated, “He married Umm Sharik al-Anṣārīyya of Banū al-Najjar. And he said, ‘I love to marry anṣārī women, though I hate their ghayra, ‘jealousy’. And he did not consummate marriage with her.”

Ibn Ishaq stated, from Ḥakīm, from Muḥammad b. ʿĀli, from his father, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) married Laylā al-Anṣārīyya, daughter of al-Khāṭṭim; she was very jealous. She feared for herself from him and asked his permission to be released. And so he did release her.”

WOMEN TO WHOM THE MESSENGER OF GOD (ṣAḥīḤ) BECAME ENGAGED BUT DID NOT ULTIMATELY MARRY.

Ismāʿīl b. Abū Khālid stated, from al-Shaʿbī, that Umm Hānāʾ, Fākhita, daughter of Abū Ṭālib, stated that the Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) proposed marriage to her. She told him that she had young children and he then left her, saying, “The best women are those who ride camels and righteous women of Quraysh. They are those most kind to their children when young, and those most careful with their husband’s property.”

ʿAbd al-Razzāq stated, from Maʿmar, from al-Zuhrī, from Saʿīd b. al-Muṣayyab, who quoted Abū Hurayra as having said that the Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) proposed marriage to Umm Hānāʾ, daughter of Abū ʿĀlīb, and that she replied, “Messenger of God, I am too old and I have young children.”

Al-Tirmidhī stated that ʿAbd b. Ḥumayd related to him, quoting ʿAbd Allāh b. Mūsā, quoting Ḥisrāʾil, from al-Suddī, from Abū ʿĀlīb, from Umm Hānāʾ, daughter of Abū Ṭālib, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) proposed marriage to me, but I asked to be excused and he did excuse me. God then revealed, ‘We have made lawful to you your wives to whom you have given dowries, as well as those women in your power whom God has awarded you as spoils of war, along with the daughters of your paternal uncle and the daughters of your paternal aunts and the daughters of your maternal uncle and the daughters of your maternal aunts who went into exile with you’ (ṣūrat al-ʿĀhzāb; XXXIII, v.50). I was not made lawful for him, because I had not gone into exile; I was one of those women divorced.”

Al-Tirmidhī went on to state, “This hadīth is hasan. We know it only from the hadīth of al-Suddī.”

This (interpretation) requires that women who had not gone into exile were not permitted to the Messenger of God (SAAS). The Qāḍī al-Mawardi has absolutely refuted that view in his exegesis, according to various scholars. It is said that the phrase, “who went into exile with you” refers to those women closely related to him to whom reference was made.

Qatāda stated that this phrase means, “those who accepted Islam with you”. Under this interpretation only unbelieving women would be prohibited to him while all Muslim women would have been permitted. This does not rule out (the possibility) for him to marry anṣār women. However, he did not in reality consummate with any single one of them.

Regarding the account given by al-Mawardi from al-Shaḥbī that Zaynab, daughter of Khuzayma, “the mother of the poor”, was a woman of the anṣār. This is not correct. She was indisputably of Banū Hilāl, as we have explained above. But God knows best.

Muḥammad b. Saʿd narrated, from Hishām b. al-Kalbī, from his father, from Abū Ṣāliḥ, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “Laylā, daughter of al-Khaṭīm, came up to the Messenger of God (SAAS) while he had his back turned towards the sun and tapped him on the shoulder. He exclaimed, ‘Who is that? May the Black One devour you!’ She replied, ‘I am the daughter of him who feeds the birds and outpaces the wind. I am Laylā, daughter of al-Khaṭīm. I have come to you to present myself to you. Will you marry me?’ ‘Consider it done,’ he replied. She then returned to her people and said, ‘I have arranged my marriage to the Messenger of God!’ People told her, ‘What you did was a mistake; you are a jealous woman and the Messenger of God is already master of women who are jealous about him. He will curse you to God. Seek your release.’

“So she went back and asked, ‘Messenger of God, please release me.’ He did so. Masʿūd b. Aws b. Sawād b. Zufr then married her and she bore him a child. One day, while she was washing herself in one of the gardens of Medina, a black wolf leapt at her and ate part of her, and so she died.”

He also stated, from Ibn ʿAbbās, that Ḥabība, daughter of ʿAmir b. Qīrṣ was the wife of ʿAbd Allāh b. Juḍān who divorced her. Hishām b. al-Mughira then married her and she bore him ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Juḍān. She (Ḥabība) was a well-built and beautiful woman with abundant hair covering her body. The Messenger of God (SAAS) asked her son Salama to accept his engagement to her. Salama asked, “(Will you wait) until I ask her permission?” He did ask her and she replied, “Do you have to ask permission when it’s the Messenger of God!” When her son came back, he remained silent, not giving any answer; it seems that he felt her to be too old. The Prophet (SAAS) said nothing (more) about her.

He (Muḥammad b. Sa‘d) also stated, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) also became engaged to Ṣafiyya, daughter of Bashāma b. Naḍla al-Anbarī. He had received her as war spoils. The Messenger of God (SAAS) gave her a choice, saying, ‘If you wish, then myself; if you wish, then your husband.’ She replied, ‘My husband.’ He then sent her away. Banū Tamīm cursed her.”

Muḥammad b. Sa‘d went on to say that al-Waqqīdī informed him that Mūsā b. Muḥammad b. Ibrahīm al-Tayyīn stated his father as having said, “Umm Sharīk was a woman of Banū ʿĀmir b. Luḥayy who gave herself to the Messenger of God (SAAS). But he did not accept her. She never married.”

He also stated that Wā‘īn informed him, from Sharīk, from Jābir, from al-Ḥakam, who quoted ʿAlī b. al-Ḥusayn as having said that the Messenger of God (SAAS) married Umm Sharīk al-Dawṣīyya.

Al-Waqqīdī stated, “We are quite certain that she was from Daws b. al-Azd.”

Muḥammad b. Sa‘d stated, “Her name was Ghaziyya, daughter of Jābir b. Ḥakam.”

Al-Layth b. Sa‘d stated, from Ḥishām b. Muḥammad, who quoted his father as having said that Sharīk had presented herself to the Prophet (SAAS), and that she was a righteous woman.

Those to whom he became engaged but did not marry included Ḥamra, daughter of al-Ḥārith b. ʿAwn b. Abū Ḥarīthah al-Murri, whose father said there was something wrong with her – though there was not. When her father returned to her, she had contracted leprosy. She was the mother of Shabib b. al-Barsā?, the poet.

Sa‘d b. Abū ʿArūba mentioned this, quoting Qatāda.

He went on, “He also sought to be engaged to Ḥabiba, daughter of al-ʿAbbās b. Abd al-Muṭṭalib. But he discovered that her father was his foster-brother, both having been suckled by Thuwayba, Abū Lahab’s freed-woman.

These, then are his wives. They were of three categories. One group consisted of women with whom he consummated marriage, and he died before their deaths. These were the nine who were mentioned initially. They were prohibited to others following his death. This was universally recognized to be required by the faith, and that theirʿidda174 would last until the end of their lives. God Almighty had stated, “It is not for you to harm the Messenger of God, nor ever to marry his wives after him; that would be very serious to God” (ṣūrat al-Aḥzāb; XXXIII, v.53).

174. The period prescribed for a woman to wait from the end of one marriage to the beginning of another.
Another category consists of those women with whom he consummated marriage but divorced during his lifetime. There is a question as to whether it would be permissible for them to remarry after the expiration of the (normal) period of their 'idda. The scholars express two views. One rejects this, due to the all-inclusive nature of the verse we have mentioned. The second view considers their remarriage permissible, referring to the verse giving a choice. In it God stated, “O Prophet, say to your wives, ‘If you desire the life of this world and its finery, then come! I will provide for you and grant you a pleasant release. But if you desire God and His Messenger and the abode of the After-life, then God has prepared a fine reward for those of you who do good”’ (surat al-Ahzāb; XXXIII, v.28, 29).

They stated, “Unless it be permissible for someone else to marry them after his separation from them, then there would be no purpose in their having a choice between this world and the hereafter; if his separation from them did not permit them to marry others, there would have been no purpose in it for them.” This argument is strong: God alone knows best.

The third category of the women consists of those he married but divorced before consummating marriage with them. It was permitted for other men to marry them; I know of no dispute concerning this category.

Those women to whom he became engaged but did not actually contract marriage were entirely able to marry. A chapter will come later in the book al-Khaṣṣāqis dealing with this subject. But God knows best.

Accounts of those persons awarded to the Messenger of God (SAAS) as tribute.

Two women were awarded to the Messenger of God (SAAS) as tribute. One of these was Máriya, the Copt, daughter of Shamʿūn. She was awarded to him by the Governor of Alexandria, whose name was Jurayj b. Minā. Along with her he also presented her sister Shīrīn.

Abū Nuʿaym stated that he presented her as one of four girls. But God knows best.

Included was a eunuch slave named Mābūr, and a female mule called al-Dulduʿ. The Prophet (SAAS) accepted his gifts and chose Máriya for himself. She was from an Egyptian village called ʿIṣāfīn, from the Kūra Ansāna region. During the period of his governorate (over Egypt) Muʿāwiyah b. Abū Sufyān exempted this village from payment of the kharaj, “the land tax”, in honour of her because she bore a male child, Ibrāhīm, upon whom be peace, to the Messenger of God (SAAS).

They say that Máriya was beautiful and fair-skinned, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) admired and fell in love with her and that she enjoyed much favour with him. This was especially true after she bore him his son Ibrāhīm.
The Messenger of God (SAAS) presented her sister Shirin to Hassan b. Thabit, to whom she bore his son Abd al-Rahman.

The eunuch slave Mabur was allowed to enter the quarters of Mariya and Shirin without special permission, as had been his practice in Egypt. Some people, however, began making comments about Mariya because of that; they did not know that he was an eunuch until the fact was manifest, as we will explain shortly, if God so wills it.

The mule mentioned above was one the Messenger of God (SAAS) would ride; it appears — though God knows best — that it was this donkey he rode at the battle of Hunayn. This donkey lived on to great age and was kept by 'Ali b. Abu Talib during his rule. When 'Ali died it became owned by 'Abd Allah b. Ja'far b. Abu Talib. When it grew very old, barley was crushed for it to eat.

Abu Bakr b. Khuzayma stated that Muhammad b. Ziyad b. Ubayd Allah related to him, quoting Sufyan b. Uyayna, from Bashir b. al-Muhajir, from 'Abd Allah b. Burayda b. al-Husayb, from his father, who said, "The leader of the Copts sent to the Messenger of God (SAAS) two girls who were sisters, and a female mule that he would ride in Medina. He took for himself one of the two girls and she bore him his son Ibrahim; he gave away the other girl."

Al-Waqidi stated that Ya'qub b. Muhammad b. Abu Sa'fa related to him, from 'Abd Allah b. 'Abd al-Rahman b. Abu Sa'fa, who said, "The Messenger of God (SAAS) very much admired Mariya; she was fair-skinned and beautiful and had curly hair. He lodged her and her sister with Umm Sulaym, daughter of Mila'an. The Messenger of God (SAAS) would visit them both there and it was there that they both accepted Islam. He consummated with Mariya since she was a slave, then moved her into a property he had at al-'Aliya that had belonged to Banu al-Naqir. He was there during the summer and at the time for the date harvest. He would go to her there. She was devout. He presented her sister Shirin to Hassan b. Thabit, and she bore him 'Abd al-Rahman.

"Mariya bore to the Messenger of God (SAAS) a son whom he named Ibrahim. He sacrificed a sheep for him on the seventh day after the child's birth. He shaved his head and made a donation in silver to the poor to the weight of his hair that he thereafter had buried in the ground. He named the child Ibrahim. The midwife was Sahna, the freed-woman of the Messenger of God (SAAS). She came out to see her husband Abu Rafi' and told him that Mariya had given birth to a son. Abu Rafi' went with the good news to the Messenger of God (SAAS), who gave him a necklace as a gift. The wives of the Messenger of God (SAAS) were already jealous (of Mariya) and this envy grew more intense after she bore him the son."

The ḥāfiz Abū al-Ḥasan al-Dārquṭnī narrated, from Abū Ubayd al-Qasim b. Isma'il, from Ziyād b. Ayyub, from Sa'ād b. Zakariyya al-Madā'mīn, from Ibn Abū Sāra, from Ḥkrama, from Ibn 'Abbās, who said, "When Mariya gave birth, the Messenger of God (SAAS) said, 'Her son has set her free!'"
Al-Dārquṭnī went on, “Ziyād b. Ayyūb is alone in giving this, and he is a reliable source.”

Ibn Māja narrated similarly from a hadīth of Ḥusayn b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUbayd Allāh b. ʿAbbās, from ʿIrāma, from Ibn ʿAbbās, and we have also narrated it from a different source.

We have devoted an individual and separate study to the issue of the sale of (slave) mothers (who bore their masters) children. We have given a full line of transmission to each narrative. And to God be all praise and credit.

Yūnus b. Bukayr quoted Muḥammad b. ʿĪsāq, from Ibrāhīm b. Muḥammad b. ʿAlī b. Abū Ṭalīb, from his father, who quoted his grandfather ʿAlī b. Abū Ṭalīb as having said, “People kept spreading rumours about Mariya, Ibrāhīm’s mother, and a Coptic cousin of hers who would visit her frequently. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, ‘Take this sword and go. If you find him with her, then kill him!’ I replied, ‘Messengers of God, I would do your bidding (directly) as on a fully secured road; nothing would divert me until I accomplished whatever you had ordered me to do. Or (should I be as) an eye-witness, seeing what the absent does not?’ The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) replied, ‘Indeed yes; as an eye-witness who sees what the absent does not.’

“So off I went, wearing the sword, and I found him with her. I unsheathed the sword and when he saw me, he knew that I was after him. He went over to a palm tree and climbed it, then turned over on his back and drew up his legs. He had been made emasculated and completely smooth. There was absolutely no trace of a male member. So I went to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and told him. He said, ‘Praise be to God, who has diverted evil from the household members.’”

Imām ʿAlīmad stated that Yaḥyā b. Saʿd related to him, quoting Sufyān, quoting Muḥammad b. ʿUmar b. ʿAlī b. Abū Ṭalīb, who stated that ʿAlī had said, “Messengers of God, when you dispatch me, should I be (proceeding directly) as on a fully secured road, or should I be as an eye-witness, seeing what the absent does not?” He replied, “As an eye-witness who sees what the absent does not.”

He narrated it thus, in abbreviated form. This, then is the origin for the account we have presented above; its line of transmission consists of authorities considered fully trustworthy.

Al-Ṭabarānī stated that Muḥammad b. ʿAmr b. Khālid al-Ḥarrānī related to him, quoting his father, quoting Ibn Lāhīʿa, from Yazīd b. Abū Ḥabīb and ʿAqīl, from al-Zuhri, from Anas, who said, “When Māriya gave birth to Ibrāhīm, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) seemed almost to begin having suspicions about him. Then Gabriel came down to him and said, ‘Peace be upon you, father of Ibrāhīm!’”

175. It is not clear why Ibn Kathīr sees relevance to this issue, since there is no suggestion of Māriya’s “sale” of her son.
Abū Nu‘aym stated that ‘Abd Allāh b. Muḥammad related to him, quoting Abū Bakr b. Abū ‘Aṣim, quoting Muhammad b. Yaḥyā al-Bāhili, quoting Ya‘qūb b. Muḥammad, from a man he named who quoted al-Layth b. Sa‘d, from al-Zuhrī, from ‘Urwa, who quoted Qūsha as having said, “A king of the Byzantine patriarchs (sic) called al-Muqawqis presented a Coptic girl of royal descent named Māriya, along with a young male cousin of hers. The Messenger of God (ṢAAŞ) went in to see her one day when he would go to his private room and consummated with her. She became pregnant with Ibrāhīm. “When her pregnancy became visible, I was much annoyed. The Messenger of God (ṢAAŞ) said nothing. She did not produce milk, so he bought for her a ewe giving milk from which to feed the boy. His body grew strong and his colour was excellent and his complexion clear. One day she arrived carrying him on her shoulder. She asked, “Qūsha, how do you think the lad looks?” ‘Neither I nor others see a resemblance,’ I replied. She then asked, ‘No comment about his flesh?’ I replied, ‘By my life, anyone fed on sheep’s milk is going to have nice flesh!’”

Al-Waqīdī stated, “Māriya died in Muḥarram of 15 Ḥ. ‘Umar prayed over her and buried her in the al-Baqi‘ cemetery.”

Al-Mufāḍdall b. Ghassān al-Ghallābī said the same. Khalīfa, Abū ‘Ubayda and Ya‘qūb b. Sufyān all stated that she died in 16 Ḥ. May God have mercy on her.

Included in this category of woman was Rayḥāna, daughter of Zayd, of Banū al-Naṣir, also said to have been of Banū Qurayṣa.

Al-Waqīdī stated, “Rayḥāna, daughter of Zayd, was of Banū al-Naṣir or, it is said, of Banū Qurayṣa.”

Al-Waqīdī (also) stated, “Rayḥāna, daughter of Zayd, was of Banū al-Naṣir and had married within the tribe. The Messenger of God (ṢAAŞ) had taken her for himself as booty. She was beautiful. The Messenger of God (ṢAAŞ) proposed to her that she accept Islam, but she refused to be anything but Jewish. He then placed her in seclusion, being considerably annoyed. He sent a message to Ibn Sa‘ya telling him of this and Ibn Sa‘ya responded, ‘May my father and mother be your ransom, I swear she will accept Islam!’ He then went and told her, ‘Don’t follow your own people! You have seen what Ḥuyayy b. Akhtab brought them to! Accept Islam; and in this case the Messenger of God is to choose you for himself.’ “While the Messenger of God (ṢAAŞ) was with his Companions, he heard the sound of slippers. He said, ‘Those are the slippers of Ibn Sa‘ya who is coming to tell me the good news of Rayḥāna accepting Islam.’ He did come and said, ‘Messenger of God, Rayḥāna has accepted Islam!’ He was delighted at this.”

Muḥammad b. Iṣḥāq stated, “When the Messenger of God (ṢAAŞ) defeated Qurayza, he chose for himself Rayḥāna, daughter of ‘Arm b. Khānafī. She was with him until his death, at which time she was still within his domain. He had proposed Islam to her and to marry her, but she refused, accepting only Judaism.”
Ibn Ishāq went on to narrate her acceptance of Islam, as above.

Al-Wāqīqī stated that ‘Abd al-Malik b. Sulaymān related to him, from Ayyūb b. ‘Abd al-Rahmān b. Abū Sa‘āda, from Ayyūb b. Bashīr al-Ma‘āwī, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) sent her to the house of Salmā Umm al-Mundhir, daughter of Qays. She remained there with her until she had fully menstruated and was cleansed of her menstruation. Umm al-Mundhir then went and informed the Messenger of God (SAAS). He went to Rayhāna in Umm Mundhir’s house and said, ‘If you wish me to free you and to marry you, I will do so. If you wish to remain in my domain and for me to have intercourse with you by that right, then that I will do.’ She replied, ‘Messenger of God, it would be easier on you and on me for me to remain in your domain.’ And she remained in his domain, with him having intercourse with her, until she died.”

Al-Wāqīqī stated that Ibn Abī Dhi‘b related to him, “I asked al-Zuhrt about Rayhāna, and he said, ‘She was a bond-maid whom the Messenger of God (SAAS) had manumitted and then married. She remained in seclusion in her family and would say, ‘No one shall see me after the Messenger of God.’”

Al-Wāqīqī went on, “This is, in our view, the most secure of the two alzadīth. Her husband, prior to the Messenger of God (SAAS), was al-Ḥakam.”

Al-Wāqīqī stated that ‘Āsim b. ‘Abd Allāh b. al-Ḥakam related to him, from ‘Umar b. al-Ḥakam, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) manumitted Rayhāna, daughter of Zayd b. ‘Amr b. Khanāfah; she had been living with her husband who loved her and treated her honourably. She said, ‘I will never go to anyone after him.’ She was a beautiful woman. When Banū Qurayṣa were taken captive, the prisoners were paraded before the Messenger of God (SAAS). Rayhāna said, ‘I was among those paraded before him; he gave orders, and I was placed aside. He had the practice of taking (booty for himself) on each occasion when there were war spoils. When I was placed aside, God selected me. The Messenger of God (SAAS) sent me to the home of Umm al-Mundhir, daughter of Qays for some days until after he had executed the prisoners and divided up the slaves. He then came to see me, and I turned aside from him in modesty. He called me to him and sat me down before him, saying, ‘If you choose God and His Messenger, the Messenger of God will choose you for himself.’ I replied, ‘I do choose God and His Messenger.’ When I accepted Islam, he manumitted me and married me, presenting as my dowry the weight (in silver) of 12 awqīyya and one nash,” the sum he customarily gave to his wives. The wedding was conducted in the home of Umm al-Mundhir. He provided me the same expenses as to his other wives and required me to wear the veil.

“The Messenger of God (SAAS) admired her greatly and would give her anything she asked of him. People would tell her, ‘If you had asked the Messenger of God (SAAS), for Banū Qurayṣa, he would have set them free.’ She would reply, ‘He was not alone with me until after he had divided up the slaves.’ He would spend time alone with her and desired her much. She remained with him until her death following his return from the hijjat al-wada‘. He buried her at the al-Baqi‘ cemetery.”

176. The weight of 20 dirhams; approximately one half of one awqīyya.

His marriage to her was in Muharram of 6 AH.

Ibn Wahb stated that Yunus b. Yazid quoted al-Zuhri as having said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) received Rayhāna as a captive from Banū Qurayza. He manumitted her and she rejoined her family.”

Abū `Ubayda Ma‘mar b. al-Muthannā stated, “Rayhāna was the daughter of Zayd b. Sham‘ūn, of Banū Qurayza.”

Some say that she was from Banū Qurayza and that she would be in one of the palm-groves reserved for charity, and that the Messenger of God (SAAS) would sometimes take a siesta with her there. He received her as a captive in Shawwāl of 4 AH.

Abū Bakr b. Abū Khaythama stated that Ahmad b. al-Miqdām related to him, quoting Zuhayr, from Sa‘īd, from Qatāda, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) had two female slaves: Māriya, the Copt, and Rayhāna or Rayhāna, daughter of Sham‘ūn b. Zayd b. Khanāfa, of Banū ‘Amr b. Qurayṣa. She had been married to a cousin of hers called ‘Abd al-Ḥakam, so I have been told, and that she died before the death of the Prophet (SAAS).”

Abū `Ubayda Ma‘mar b. al-Muthannā stated, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) had in his domain four bond-maids. These were Māriya, the Copt, and Rayhāna of Banū Qurayṣa. He also had another beautiful bond-maid whom his wives kept from him for fear that she would gain favour with him over themselves. He also had a valuable bond-maid presented to him by Zaynab. He had abandoned her, because of Ṣafīyya, daughter of Ḥuyayy, for the months of Dhu al-Ḥijja, al-Muharram and Ǧa‘far. When the Raḥṣ al-Awwal came in which he died, he was pleased to go in to Zaynab and she told him, ‘I don’t know with what to reward you!’ And she presented the girl to him.”

Sayf b. ʿUmar narrated, from Sa‘īd b. ʿAbd Allah, from Ibn Abū Mulayka, who quoted ʿAʾisha as having said that the Messenger of God (SAAS) would sometimes share funds with Māriya and Rayhāna, and at others he would leave them out.

Abū Nuʿaym quoted Abū Muhammad b. ʿUmar al-Waqīṭī as having stated, “Rayhāna died in 10 AH; ʿUmar prayed over her and buried her in al-Baqi‘. And to God be praise.”

__________

INFORMATION CONCERNING HIS CHILDREN, MAY PRAYERS AND PEACE BE FOR THEM ALL.

There is no disagreement over all his children having been born to Khadija, daughter of Khuwaylid, with the exception of Ibrāhim, who was born to Māriya, the Copt, daughter of Sham‘ūn.

Muhammad b. Sa‘īd stated that Hishām b. al-Kalbī informed him, quoting his father, from Abū Ṣalih, from Ibn Ṭabbās, who said, “The first son of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was al-Qāsim. Then came, in succession, Zaynab, ʿAbd Allah, Umm Kulthūm, Fāṭima and Ruqayya. Al-Qāsim died in Mecca; he was the first of his children to die. Then ʿAbd Allāh died. Al-ʾĀṣ b. ʿAbd al-Sālīm al-Sahmī stated, ‘His line had been severed, and so he was ʾabtar, “cut off”. And so God, the Almighty and Glorious, sent down, ‘We have given abundance to you. And so pray to your Lord, and make sacrifice! It is your antagonist who is ʾabtar, “cut off”!’” (ṣūrat al-Kawthar; CVIII, v.1–3).

He went on, “Thereafter Māriya bore him Ibrāhīm in Medina, in Dhū al-Hijja, 8 AH. He died at the age of eighteen months.”

Abū al-Faraj al-Muʿāfā b. Zakariyyāʾ al-Juwariyīnī stated that ʿAbd al-Bāqī b. Nāfiʿ related to him, quoting Muḥammad b. Zakariyyāʾ, quoting al-ʿAbbas b. Bakkār, quoting Muḥammad b. Ziyād and al-Furāt b. al-Sāʿīb, from Maymūn b. Mihrān, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “Khadija bore the Prophet (ṢAAS) ʿAbd Allāh and after him there was a period without a child being born to him. When the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was one day talking to a man, while al-ʾĀṣ b. Wā’il looked on, a man asked him (al-ʾĀṣ), ‘Who is that?’ He (al-ʾĀṣ) replied, ‘That is al-ʾabtar.’ Among Quraysh, if a man were to have a child and then there was a delay in the next birth, they would say, ‘This man is ʾabtar’. And so God sent down, ‘It is your antagonist who is the ʾabtar.’ This implied, ‘It is the one angering you who is “cut off” from all good.’”

He (Ibn ʿAbbās) went on, “Then she bore him Zaynab, Ruqayya, al-Qāsim, al-Ṭāhir, al-Muṭṭahar, al-Ṭayyib, al-Muṭṭayyab, Umm Kulthūm and then Fāṭima, the youngest of them. When Khadija had a child, she would give it to someone to nurse. Only she, however, nursed Fāṭima.”

Al-Haytham b. ʿAdī stated that Hishām b. Urwā related to him, from Saʿīd b. al-Musayyab, from his father, who said, “The Prophet (ṢAAS) had two sons: al-Ṭāhir and al-Ṭayyib. One of them he also named ʿAbd Shams, the other ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz.”

This is somewhat objectionable.177 But God knows best.

Muḥammad b. ʿAbīḍh stated, “Al-Walīd b. Muslim informed me, from Saʿīd b. ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz, that Khadija gave birth to al-Qāsim, al-Ṭayyib, al-Ṭāhir, Muṭṭahīr, Zaynab, Ruqayya, Fāṭima and Umm Kulthūm.”

Al-Zubayr b. Bakkār quoted his uncle Muṣʿāb b. ʿAbd Allāh as having said, “Khadija bore al-Qāsim and al-Ṭāhir, who was also called al-Ṭayyib. Al-Ṭāhir was born after the beginning of the prophethood. He died when young; ʿAbd Allāh was another name given him. Then were born Fāṭima, Zaynab, Ruqayya and Umm Kulthūm.”

Al-Zubayr also stated that Ibrāhīm b. al-Mundhir related to him, from Ibn Wahb, from Ibn Lāḥiʿa, from Abū al-Aswad, that Khadija gave birth to al-Qāsim, al-Ṭāhir, al-Ṭayyib, ʿAbd Allāh, Zaynab, Ruqayya, Fāṭima, and Umm Kulthūm.

177. The second names referred to were, of course, common among the polytheists. They mean “worshipper of the sun” and “worshipper of (the goddess) al-ʿUzzā”.
(He went on) "Muḥammad b. Faḍāla quoted to me a sheikh who had been a contemporary of the Prophet (ṢAAS), as having said, 'Khadija bore al-Qāsim and ‘Abd Allah. Al-Qāsim lived until he could walk; ‘Abd Allah died while still small.'

Al-Zubayr b. Bakkār also stated, "In the jahiliyya Khadija was known as ‘aḥṭira, daughter of Khuwaylid’. She bore to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) al-Qāsim, his elder son, by whose name he was himself known. After al-Qāsim came Zaynab and ‘Abd Allah, who was known as ‘al-Ṭayyib’, ‘the good’, and as al-Ṭahir, ‘the pure’. The latter was born after the commencement of the prophethood and died while small. Then she bore him, in order, his daughters Umm Kulthūm, Fāṭima and Ruqayya. Al-Qāsim died in Mecca; he was the first of his children to die. And then ‘Abd Allah died.

"Later Māriya, daughter of Sham‘ūn, bore him ʿIbrāhīm. She was a Copt; al-Muqawqis, Governor of Alexandria, had presented her, along with her sister Sīrīn and a eunuch named Mābūr. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) gave Sīrīn to ʿIḥrāb b. Thābit, and she bore him his son Abu al-Raḥmān. The line of ʿIḥrāb b. Thābit died out."

Abū Bakr b. al-Barqī stated, "It is said that ‘al-Ṭahir’ was ‘al-Ṭayyib’ and also ‘Abd Allah’. It is also said that al-Tayyib and al-Mutayyab were twins, as also were al-Ṭahir and al-Muṭahhar."

Al-Mufaddal b. Ghassān stated, from Ahmad b. Ḥanbal, quoting ‘Abd al-Razzāq, quoting Ibn Jurayj, from Mujāhid, who said, "Al-Qāsim, son of the Prophet (ṢAAS), remained alive for seven days, then died."

Al-Mufaddal went on, "This is an error; in fact, he lived for seventeen months."

The ḥadīṣ Abū Nuʿaym quoted Mujāhid as having said, "Al-Qāsim died when he was seven days old."

Al-Zuhri said that he was two years old. Qatāda stated that he lived until he could walk.

Hishām b. ʿUrwa stated, "It was the Iraqis who invented reference to al-Ṭayyib and al-Ṭahir. Our scholars say, (that his children were) ‘Abd al-Uzza, ‘Abd Manāf, and al-Qāsim; the females were Ruqayya, Umm Kulthūm and Fāṭima."

Thus also Ibn ʿAsakir gave it and it is objectionable; what he denied is what is commonly accepted. He also left out any reference – which is obligatory – to Zaynab. But God knows best.

Regarding Zaynab, ‘Abd al-Razzāq quoted Ibn Jurayj as having said, "Several people told me that Zaynab was the oldest of the daughters of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). Fāṭima was the youngest of them and the one he most favoured. Abū al-ʿAṣ b. al-Rabīʾ married Zaynab and she bore him ʿAlī and Umāma. It was Umāma whom the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) would carry during prayer. When he prostrated, he would put her down; when he stood up, he carried her."

Perhaps this was following the death of her mother, in 8 AH. This was what al-Waqiṣ, Qatāda, ‘Abd Allah b. Abū Bakr b. Hazm and others stated. She seems to have been a small child at the time. But God knows best.
‘Ali b. ʿAbū Ṭalīb, may God be pleased with him, married her after the death of ʿAṭīma.

The death of ʿAzīzah, may God be pleased with her, occurred in 8 AH. Qatāda stated this from ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAbū Bakr b. Ḥazm, from Khalīfa b. Khayyāt, from ʿAbū Bakr b. ʿAbū Khaythama and from others also. Qatada also quoted Ibn Ḥazm as having stated that she died at the beginning of 8 AH.

Ḥammād b. Salama reported from Hishām b. ʿUrwa, from his father, that when Zaynāb left on the Hijra, a man pushed her and she fell on a rock and had a miscarriage, remaining thereafter in pain until she died. People considered that she died a martyr.

Ruqayyā was initially married by her cousin, ʿUṭba b. ʿAbū Lahāb, whose brother ʿUtayba b. ʿAbū Lahāb married her own sister, Umm Kulthūm. Both men divorced the sisters, before consummating marriage with them, out of anger at the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), when God sent down, “May both hands of ʿAbū Lahāb perish and may he perish! His wealth and earnings will not avail him! He will burn in fire of flames, along with his wife, that bearer of fuel, around her neck a twisted rope!” (ṣūrat al-Lahāb; CXI, v.1–5).

ʿUthmān b. ʿAbāṣ, may God be pleased with him, married Ruqayyā, and she went into exile with him to Abyssinia; he is said to have been the first person to leave for there. Thereafter they both returned to Mecca, as we narrated above. They then went into exile to Medina. She bore him his son, ʿAbd Allāh, who lived on to age six. A cock pecked him in the eyes and he died. ʿUthmān was initially named for him, and then later for his son ʿAmr.

She died after the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had won victory at Badr, on the yawm al-furqān, when the two forces clashed. When the messenger bearing the good news of the victory, Zayd b. Ḥāritha, that is, reached Medina, he found them levelling the soil over her grave. ʿUthmān had remained with her nursing her, by orders of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). The latter gave him his salary and his share of the booty. Following his return, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) married ʿUthmān to Ruqayya’s sister Umm Kulthūm. ʿUthmān was therefore known as dhu al-nūrāyyn, “he who had the two lights”. Umm Kulthūm died in his quarters in Shaʿbān of 9 AH; she bore ʿUthmān no children. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had said, “If I had had three daughters, I would have married them all to ʿUthmān!” In one account he is quoted as having said, “If I had had ten daughters, I would have married them all to ʿUthmān!”

Fāṭima was married to her cousin ʿAlī b. ʿAbū Ṭalīb in Safar of 2 AH. She bore him al-Ḥasan and al-Ḥusayn, and, it is also stated, Muḥṣin; she also bore him Umm Kulthūm and Ẓaynāb.

During his reign ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb married Umm Kulthūm, daughter of ʿAlī b. ʿAbū Ṭalīb and Fāṭima, treating her with extreme honour and respect. Because of her descent from the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), he awarded her 40,000 dirhams. She bore him a son, Zayd b. ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb.

Following the assassination of 'Umar b. al-Khattāb, his cousin 'Awn b. Ja'far married Umm Kulthūm and he left her a widow. His brother Muhammad then married her and also left her a widow. 'Abd Allāh b. Ja'far, brother of both her previous two husbands, then married her and she died while still his wife. 'Abd Allāh b. Ja'far had previously been married to Umm Kulthūm's sister Zaynab, daughter of 'Alī, and she too had died while his wife. Fatimah died six months after the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), according to the most widely accepted accounts.

This authoritative information is given from 'Aishah in the sahīh collections; al-Zuhri and Abū Ja'far al-Baqir also stated this.

According to al-Zuhri, her death came three months after that of the Prophet (ṢAAS). Abū al-Zubayr gave that period as two months. Abū Burayda stated, “She lived for seventy days and nights after him.” 'Amr b. Dinar stated, “She remained alive for eight months after him.” 'Abd Allāh b. al-Ḥarīth said the same. In an account from 'Amr b. Dinar, the period of time is given as four months.

Ibrāhīm was born to Māriya al-Qibṭiya, as stated above. His birth was in Dhu al-Ḥijja of 8 AH. It has been narrated from Ibn Lahi'a and others, quoting 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Ziyād as having said, “When she became pregnant with Ibrāhīm, Gabriel came to him and said, ‘Peace be upon you, father of Ibrāhīm! God has given you a son from Māriya, his mother, and He commands you to name him Ibrāhīm. He has blessed you in him, and has made him a source of delight for you in this world and the hereafter.’”

The ḥadīth Abū Bakr al-Bazzār narrated, from Muhammad b. Miskīn, from ʿUthmān b. Sāliḥ, from Ibn Lahi'a, from ʿAqil and Yazīd b. Abū Ḥabīb, from al-Zuhri, from Anas, who said, “When his son Ibrāhīm was born to the Prophet (ṢAAS), he had doubts about him. And so Gabriel came to him and said, ‘Peace be upon you, father of Ibrāhīm!’”

And Asbāt quoted al-Suddī – Ismā'īl b. 'Abd al-Rahmān, that is – as having said, “I asked Anas b. Mālik as follows, ‘What age did Ibrāhīm, the son of the Prophet (ṢAAS) attain?’ He replied, ‘He filled up his cradle. If he had remained alive, he would have been a prophet. However, he was not to be kept alive, for your Prophet (ṢAAS), was the last of the prophets.’”

Imām Aḥmad stated that 'Abd al-Rahmān b. Mahdī related to him, quoting Sufyān, from al-Suddī, from Anas b. Mālik, who said, “If Ibrāhīm, son of the Prophet (ṢAAS), had lived, he would have been sūdīqān nabīyyān, ‘one fully trusting (in God) and a prophet.’”

Abū 'Abd Allāh b. Manda stated that Muhammad b. Sa'd and Muhammad b. Ibrāhīm related to him, quoting Muhammad b. ʿUthmān al-ʿAbsī, quoting Minjāb, quoting Abū ʿAmir al-Asadī, quoting Sufyān, from al-Suddī, from Anas, who said, “Ibrāhīm, son of the Prophet (ṢAAS), died while a child of 16 months. And the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, ‘Bury him in the al-Baqī' cemetery. He has a nursemaid who will complete suckling him in paradise.’”
Abū Yaqtā stated that Abū Khaythama related to him, quoting Ismā'il b. Ibrāhīm, from Ayyūb, from ‘Amr b. Sa‘īd, from Anas, who said, “I never saw any person more kind with children than the Messenger of God (SAAS). Ibrāhīm was being suckled in the heights of Medina. He would hurry off there, in our company. He would enter the house while Ibrāhīm was being fed. His wet nurse lived among us. He would take hold of him (Ibrāhīm) and kiss him, then leave.”

‘Amr said, “When Ibrāhīm died, the Messenger of God (SAAS) said, Ibrāhīm is my son; he died on the breast. He has two wet nurses who will complete his suckling in paradise.”

Jarir and Abū ‘Awāna narrated, from al-A‘mash, from Muslim b. Ṣaḥīḥ Abū al-Ḍuḥā, from al-Bara‘, who said, “Ibrāhīm, the son of the Messenger of God (SAAS), died while a child of 16 months. he said, ‘Bury him in al-Baqī; he has a nursemaid in paradise.’”

Al-Thawrī also narrated it from Abū Ishāq, from al-Bara‘. Ibn ‘Asakir traced it through ‘Attāb b. Muḥammad b. Shawdhab, from Abū ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Awfā, who said, “Ibrāhīm died and the Messenger of God (SAAS) said, ‘The rest of his suckling will take place in paradise.’”

Abū Yaqtā al-Mawsīli stated that Zakariyyā‘ b. Ya‘qūb related to him, quoting Hushaym, from Ismā'il, who said, “I asked Ibn Abū Awfā” — or “I heard him asked” — about Ibrāhīm, son of the Prophet (SAAS). He replied, ‘He died while still young. If it had been decreed that there be a prophet after the Prophet (SAAS), he would certainly have lived.’”

Ibn ʿAsakir narrated from a hadith of Muḥammad b. Ismā‘īl b. Samura, from Muḥammad b. al-Ḥasan al-Asadī, from Abū Shayba, from Anas, who said, “When Ibrāhīm died, the Messenger of God (SAAS) said, ‘Do not wrap him in his shroud until I look at him.’ He then came and leaned over him and wept so hard that his beard and his sides trembled.”

I note that narratives from Abū Shayba are invalid.

He (Ibn ʿAsakir) proceeded to narrate from a hadith of Muslim b. Khālid al-Zanjī, from Ibn Khayyāthīm, from Shahr b. Ḥawshāh, from Asmā‘, daughter of Yaṣīd b. al-Sakn, who said, “When Ibrāhīm died, the Messenger of God (SAAS) wept and Abū Bakr and ʿUmar told him, ‘You are the one most cognisant of God’s right.’ He replied, ‘The eye weeps and the heart is sad. We will not speak what would anger the Lord. If it were not a matter of a sincere promise and a universal compact, and that the latter of us will follow the former, we would grieve for you, 'Ibrahim, more severely than we have ever mourned before. We are deeply saddened for you, 'Ibrahim.'"

Imām Aḥmad stated that Aswād b. ʿAмир related to him, quoting Isrāʿīl, from Jābir, from al-Shaʿbī, from al-Baraʿ, who said, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) prayed over his son 'Ibrahim. He died at the age of 16 months. He said, 'There are those in paradise who will complete his suckling, and he is 'ṣiddiq,' innocent', 'righteous'.'"

It is also narrated from a ḥadīth of al-Ḥakam b. ʿUyayna, from al-Shaʿbī, from al-Baraʿ.

Abū Yaʿlā stated that al-Qawārīrī related to him, quoting Ismāʿīl b. Abū Khālid, from Ibn Abū Awfā, who said, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) prayed over his son, and I prayed behind him. He spoke the words Allāhu akbar! 'God is most Great!' four times."

Yūnus b. Bukayr narrated, from Muḥammad b. Iṣḥāq, quoting Muḥammad b. ʿAlī b. Rukāna, who said, "'Ibrahim, son of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), died while a child of 18 months, and he did not pray over him.'"

Ibn ʿAsakir narrated, from a ḥadīth of Iṣḥāq b. Muḥammad al-Farwī, from Iṣā b. Abī ʿAlī b. Muḥammad b. ʿUmar b. ʿAlī b. Abū Ṭalib, from his father, from his grandfather, who quoted ʿAlī as having said that when 'Ibrahim, the son of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), died he sent ʿAlī b. Abū Ṭalib to his mother, Māriya, the Copt, who was in an upper chamber. ʿAlī carried him out in a basket, placing him before himself on his horse, and brought him to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). He washed him and wrapped him in his shroud, then carried him out to the people. He buried him in the alley adjoining the house of Muḥammad b. Zayd. ʿAlī went into his grave, smoothed (the soil) over him and buried him. He then emerged and sprinkled water over his grave. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) placed his hand in his grave and said, "I swear by God, he was a prophet and the son of a prophet." And the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) wept, as did the Muslims around him. The sound they all made arose above them.

ʿAlī then quoted the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), as having said, "The eye weeps and the heart is sad. We will not speak what would anger the Lord. We are deeply saddened for you, 'Ibrahim.'"

Al-Wāqīdī stated, "'Ibrahim, son of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), died on Tuesday the 10th of Rabīʿ al-Awwal, 10 AH. He was 18 months old. He had been living among Banī Māzīn b. al-Najjār, in the home of Umm Barza, daughter of al-Mundhir. He was buried in the al-Baqī cemetery."

I note that I have stated above that the sun was eclipsed on the day of his death. People said, "It has eclipsed at the death of 'Ibrahim!' The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) made a public address in which he said, "The sun and the moon are two signs of God, Almighty and Glorious is He. Neither of them are eclipsed at either the death or the life of anyone.”

Chapter: Material concerning the slaves, male and female, of the Messenger of God (SAAS), his servants, scribes and clerks.

These are arranged in alphabetical order of their names, and some information given about them is included.

The following constitutes in large part all material related about them.

They included Usâma b. Zayd b. Hâritha Abû Zayd al-Kalbi. He was also known as Abû Yazid and as Abû Muḥammad. He was a freed-man of the Messenger of God (SAAS), and the son of his freed-man; he was his intimate friend and the son of his intimate friend. His mother was Umm Ayman, her given name being Baraka. She was the nursemaid of the Messenger of God (SAAS), in his infancy, and one of those who believed in him early after his receipt of his mission.

In the final days of his life, the Messenger of God (SAAS) appointed Usâma a commander of an expeditionary force. His age at that time was some 18 or 19. At the time of the death of the Prophet (SAAS), he was commander of a large army that included ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭâb and, it is said, Abû Bakr, “the trusting”, as well; this, however, is unlikely, since the Messenger of God (SAAS) had appointed Abû Bakr to the Imāamate.

When the Messenger of God (SAAS) died, the army of Usâma was encamped at al-Jurf, as we have narrated above. Abû Bakr requested Usâma to release ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭâb so that he could remain in Medina with him to give him the benefit of his counsel. Usâma did release him. Abû Bakr reaffirmed the commission of Usâma’s army after many of the Companions had changed their minds about it. He rejected their view, saying, “I will not, by God, take down a flag mounted by the Messenger of God (SAAS)!”

And so they proceeded forth as far as the borders of al-Balqâ’ in Syria, where his father Zayd, Jaʿfar b. Abû Ṭalib and ʿAbd Allah b. Rawâha, may God be pleased with them all, had been killed. He attacked that territory, acquired booty and prisoners and then returned home safe and sound. This is why ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭâb, may God be pleased with him, never failed to address him with the words, “Peace be upon you, commander!”

When the Messenger of God (SAAS) awarded him the commander’s banner, some people complained at his having been placed in charge. The Messenger of God (SAAS) therefore made an address in which he said, “For you to complain about his being in charge would be tantamount to your complaining at his father’s having been given command previously. I swear by God, he was fully worthy of the command and this man, after him, has my extremely high regard.”

This is included in the saḥīḥ collection, from a ḥadīth of Mūsâ b. ῥqba, from Sālim, from his father.
It is established in the sahih collection of al-Bukhari that Usama, may God be pleased with him, said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) would take me and al-Hasan (in his lap) and say, ‘O God, I love these two; may You love them both.’”

From al-Sha'ibi, 'A'isha is quoted as having said, “Let whoever loves God and His Messenger love Usama b. Zayd.”

Therefore, when 'Umar b. al-Khattab set the salaries in the diwan system, he assigned 5,000 (dirhams) for Usama, while he gave his own son 'Abd Allah 4,000. He was asked about this (by 'Abd Allah) and replied, “He was more highly favoured by the Messenger of God (SAAS) than you were; and his father was more highly favoured than your own!”

'Abd al-Razzaq narrated, from Ma'mar, from al-Zuhri, from 'Urwa, from Usama, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) set him behind himself on his donkey, on a piece of cloth, when he went to visit Sa'd b. 'Ubada prior to the battle of Badr.

I note that he mounted him similarly behind himself on his camel when he set out from 'Arafat to al-Muzdalifa, as we have noted above in the account of the hijrat al-wada.

Several sources state that Usama, may God be pleased with him, did not participate with 'Ali in any of the battles. And it was he who apologized to the Messenger of God (SAAS), when the latter asked him, after he had killed the man even after he had spoken the shahada, “Who will protect you at Judgement Day, from the utterance, ‘There is no god but God’? Did you not kill him after he said, ‘There is no god but God’?” And so on, to the completion of the hadith.

There are many references to his virtues. He was as black as night and flat-nosed. He was sweet-tempered and good-looking, tall, eloquent, knowledgeable and masterly. May God be pleased with him.

His father had similar qualities, except for being extremely pale-skinned. For this reason certain ignorant people express suspicions about Usama’s parentage. On one occasion Mujazziz al-MudlijIl passed by them when they were both lying asleep in an outer wrap, their feet being visible - Usama’s being black, and his father’s white. Mujazziz exclaimed, “Glory be to God! These feet are of the same lineage!” The Messenger of God (SAAS) was most impressed by this comment and went in to see 'A'isha, beaming delight. He said, “Would you believe that Mujazziz has just looked at Zayd b. Ithnaa and Usama b. Zayd and commented, ‘These feet are of the same lineage!’”

Because of this hadith and the decision reached and its acceptance, scholars of the traditions such as al-Shafi'i and AImad give credence to such qafu in resolving questions involving mixed lineage, as is established in the appropriate place (in the texts).

It is firmly established by Abu 'Umar that Usama died in 54 AH. Others, however, give that date as 58 or 59 AH. It is also said that he died after the assassination of Uthmān, but God knows best. All compilers of the ṣaḥīḥ collections include in their books statements attributed to him.

Also there was Aslām, otherwise called “Ibrāhīm”, “Thābit” and “Hurmuz” Abū Rāfī’ al-Qubṭī. He accepted Islam before Badr, but was not present there because he was in Mecca with his masters of the al-‘Abbas family. He used to strike flint-iron; the story of his dealings with the foul Abū Lahab when news came of the battle of Badr is given above;181 and to God be praise.

He then went on the Hijrā and took part in the battle of Uḥud and its aftermath. He was a scribe and wrote for Āli b. Abī Ṭalīb at al-Kūfah. It was al-Mu‘aḍdal b. Ghassān al-Ghallaḥī who stated this. He was present at the conquest of Egypt during the rule of ʿUmar.

First he belonged to al-‘Abbās b. ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalib who presented him to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). The latter manumitted him and married him to his own freed-woman, Salmā. Children were born to him and he would be in charge of the baggage of the Prophet (ṢAAS).

Imām Ahmad stated that both Muḥammad b. Jaʿfar and Bahz stated, “Shuʿba narrated to us, from al-Ḥakam, from Ibn Abī Rāfī’, from Abī Rāfī’, that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) sent a man of Banū Makhzūm to take charge of the ṣadaqa, ‘the charity funds’. The man said to Abū Rāfī’, ‘Come along with me, and you will get some of it.’ ‘No!’ replied Abū Rāfī’. ‘Not until I go to the Messenger of God and ask him.’ And so he did go to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and he replied, ‘Charity funds are not permitted for us; the freed-man of a family is one of them (in this regard).’”

Al-Thawrī narrated it from Muḥammad b. Jaʿfar b. Bāhā, from al-Ḥakam. Abū Yaʿṣīr narrated it in his musnad ḥadīth collection, also from Abū Rāfī’, that they suffered from extreme cold at the battle of Khaybar. And the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, “Whoever has a blanket should share it with those who do not have one.”

Abū Rāfī went on, “I could not find anyone to share their blanket with me. So I went to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and he threw his coverlet over me. We slept until morning. Then the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) found a snake at his feet and he said, ‘Abū Rāfī! Kill it! Kill it!’”

All the compilers of the ṣaḥīḥ collections included narrations from him. He died during the reign of ʿAlī, may God be pleased with him.

Another slave was Anṣā b. Ziyād Abū Mishrāh, also known as Abū Mīsraḥ. He was of mixed lineage and from al-Sarrātī. He was a muḥājirīn and participated at the battle of Badr, according to ʿUrwa, al-Zuhri, Mūsā b. ʿUqba, Muḥammad b. Iṣḥāq, al-Bukhārī and others. They stated, “He was one of those who would allow access to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), when he held a meeting.”

'Abbas, who said, 'Anasa, freed-man of the Messenger of God (SAAS), was martyred at Badr.'"

Al-Waqidi stated, "In our view, that is not fully established. I have seen some scholars also assert that he witnessed the battle of Uhud and lived on for some time thereafter, dying during the lifetime of Abu Bakr, during his caliphate."

They also included Ayman b. Ubayd b. Zayd al-Habashi. Ibn Manda traced his lineage to 'Awf b. al-Khazraj; this, however, is controversial.

He was the son of Umm Ayman Baraka, brother of Usama on his mother's side.

Ibn Ishāq stated, "He was in charge of the ablution vessel used by the Prophet (SAAS). He was one of those men who stood firm at the battle of Hunayn. And it is said that it was about him and his companions that the words of the Almighty, "and he who hopes to meet his Lord should do good works, and not associate any other (god) with the worship of his Lord" (Sūrat al-Kahf; XVIII, v.110).

Al-Shafi'i stated that Ayman was killed while with the Prophet (SAAS), at the battle of Hunayn.

He also stated that the account quoting him narrated by Mujahid was munqati', "incomplete in its line". By this he was referring to what was narrated by al-Thawrī, from Munṣūr, from Mujāhid, from 'Aṭa', from Ayman al-Habashi, who said, "The Prophet (SAAS) only sentenced to amputation a person who had stolen a shield; the value of a shield at that time was one dinār."

Abū al-Qasīm al-Baghawi narrated this in his Mu'jam al-Saltaba, quoting Harīn b. 'Abd Allah, from Aswad b. 'Amir, from al-Iṣāṣ b. Sa'id, from Mansūr, from al-Ḥakam, from Mujāhid and 'Aṭa', from Ayman, from the Prophet (SAAS), in similar words.

This ḥadīth, if it has not been forged, requires Ayman to have died after the Prophet (SAAS). It may well be that the attribution should have been to someone other than him.

The majority of scholars, including Ibn Ishāq and others, include him among those of the Companions killed at the battle of Hunayn. But God knows best.

A story is recounted of an incident involving his son al-Ḥajjāj b. Ayman and 'Abd Allāh b. 'Umar.

Also there was Bādhān; reference to him will be included in the life of Ṭahmān, to follow.

They also include Thawbān b. Bujdud, also known as Ibn Jaḥdar Abū ʿAbd Allāh, as Abū ʿAbd al-Kartm and as Abū ʿAbd al-Rahmān.

His parentage was among the people of al-Sarrāt, a place between Mecca and Yemen; alternatively, he is said to be descended from the Ḥimyar people of Yemen, or from al-Ḥān. He is also said to be of the line of Ḥakam b. Sa'īd al-ʿAshira of Madīḥij, and to have been taken captive in the jahiliyya period. The Messenger of God (SAAS) purchased him, then manumitted him and gave him the choice between returning to his own people or remaining one of the household. He remained loyal to the Messenger of God (SAAS), until his death, attending him constantly, whether at home or travelling.
He took part in the conquest of Egypt during the rule of 'Umar and thereafter resided at Ḥims, where he built a house. He remained there until he died, in 54 AH. This date is also given, mistakenly, as 44 AH. It is said that he died in Egypt, but the fact is that it was in Ḥims, as stated above. But God knows best.

Al-Bukhārī gives a tradition from him in the chapter Kitāb al-Adab ("Book on Manners") of his sahih collection. Muslim also includes him in his sahih collection, as do the other ahl al-sunan hadith compilations.

Also there was Hunayn, the freed-man of the Prophet (SAAS); he was the grandfather of Ibrāhīm b. 'Abd Allāh b. Hunayn.

We have narrated how he served the Prophet (SAAS), and helped him with the ablution. When the Prophet (SAAS) had finished, Hunayn would take the remainder of the ablution water to the Companions. Some of these would drink from it, while others wiped themselves with it. Hunayn would also retain it and keep it in a jar. Eventually they complained about him to the Prophet (SAAS), who asked him, "What are you doing with it?" He replied, "I save it up and drink it, Messenger of God." The latter commented, "Have you ever seen a slave store away what this one does!"

Ultimately the Prophet (SAAS) presented him to his uncle al-ʿAbbās, who manumitted him; may God be pleased with them both.

They also include Dhakwān; reference to him will be made in relation to the life of Tahmān, hereafter.

Also there was Rāfīʿ, or Abū Rāfīʿ, also known as Abū al-Baḥṭ.

Abū Bakr b. Abū Khaythama stated, "He belonged to Abū Ḫayyāḥa Saʿīd b. al-ʿĀṣ the elder. His sons inherited him. Three of them manumitted those they had as their share of the inheritance and he was present with them at Badr, at which battle all three were killed.182 Then Abū Rāfīʿ purchased the remaining freed-men from the sons of Saʿīd, except for the share of Khālid b. Saʿīd. Khālid gave his share to the Messenger of God (SAAS); he accepted him, then manumitted him. He used to say, "I am the freed-man of the Messenger of God (SAAS)," and his sons after him would also say this of him.

They include Rabal al-Aswad, who would grant access to visit the Prophet (SAAS). It was he who took permission to ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb to enter in to see the Messenger of God (SAAS), while he was in that upper room, that day he had turned away from his wives, secluding himself alone there from them.

He is thus quoted in the hadith of ʿIkrama b. Ammār, from Sīmāk b. al-Walīd, from Ibn ʿAbbās, from ʿUmar.

Imām Ahmad stated that Wakiʿ related to him, quoting ʿIkrama b. Ammār, from Iyās b. Salama b. al-Akwaʿ, from his father, who said, "The Prophet (SAAS) had a slave named Rabal."

Of them also was Ruwayfiʿ, his freed-man. Muṣʿab b. ʿAbd Allāh al-Zubayrī included him among the freedmen, as did Abū Bakr b. Abū Khaythama. They

182. Their names, however, do not appear in the list of the participants at Badr, as compiled by Ibn Kathīr.
both stated, “His son went to ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-‘Aziz, during the latter’s rule, who gave him an appointment. He left no offspring.”

I note that ‘Umar b. ‘Abd al-‘Aziz, may God have mercy on him, was very solicitous of the freed-men of the Messenger of God (SAAS). He wished to know them and to grant them favours. During his rule he wrote to Abū Bakr b. ‘Hzrn, the leading scholar of Medina during his time, asking him to search for the freed-men of the Messenger of God (SAAS), including the freed-women, and his servants.

It was al-Wâqidi who narrated this. Abū ‘Umar also mentioned this in brief and said, “I am not aware of any hadith attributed to him.” Ibn al-Athîr related this in his work al-Ghâba.

There was also Zayd b. ‘Hzrîthâ al-Kalbî. We have given reference to him, may God be pleased with him, above in the account of his death at the battle of al-Mu’ta; that occurred in Jumāda, 8 AH, some months prior to the conquest of Mecca.

He was the commander-in-chief. After him in command came Ja’far, then, following them both, came ‘Abd Allâh b. Rawâhâ.

‘A’isha, may God be pleased with her, is quoted as having said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) appointed Zayd b. ‘Hzrîthâ as commander of every military expedition on which he dispatched him. If he had remained alive, he would have appointed him his successor.” It was Ahmad who gave this quotation.

They also include Zayd Abû Yasâr.

Abū al-Qâsim al-Baghawi stated in his Muṣjam al-Ṣahâba, “He resided in Mecca. Only one hadith of which I have knowledge is attributed to him. It was related to us by Muḥammad b. ‘Alî al-Jâwzajâni, quoting Abû Salama – al-Tabî‘îhâtî, that is – quoting Ḥâfîz b. ‘Umar al-Tâ‘î, quoting Abû ‘Umar b. Murra, quoting Bilal b. Yâsîr b. Zayd, the freed-man of the Prophet (SAAS), quoting his father who quoted his grandfather as having heard the Messenger of God (SAAS), ‘Whoever says, “I seek forgiveness from God, than Whom there is no other, He being the Living, the Everlasting; to Him I turn in repentance”, will be forgiven, even if he has fled from the battlefield.’”

Abû Da‘ūd narrated it thus from Abû Salama. Al-Tîrmîdî gave if from Miḥammad b. Ismâ‘îl al-Bukhârî, from Abû Salama Mûsâ b. Ismâ‘îl. Al-Tîrmîdî stated, “This is gharîb. We know of it only from this one source.”

They include Safînâ Abû ‘Abd al-Ra‘mân, known as Abû al-Bakhârtî. His given name was Mâhrân, and is also said to have been ‘Ahs, Ahmar and Rûmân. The Messenger of God (SAAS) gave him his agnomen, for a reason we will relate, and it stuck to him.

He was a freed-man of Umm Salama, who set him free on condition that he serve the Messenger of God (SAAS) until he died. He accepted this and would say, “If she had not stipulated this, I would not have separated from him!”
This hadith is recorded in the sunan (of Abu Dâ‘ûd).

He was of mixed Arab ancestry, his paternal origins being from Persia. His full name was Safîna b. Maﬁnna.

Imâm Ahmad stated that Abû al-Nadr related to him, quoting Ḥashrâj b. Nubâta al-Âbsî, a man of Kûfâ, quoting Sa‘îd b. Jumhûr, quoting Safîna who said, “The Messenger of God (Ṣâ‘îl) stated, ‘The caliphate among my nation will be for 30 years, and thereafter it will become a kingdom.’”

(Sa‘îd b. Jumhûr continued) “Safîna then said to me, ‘Take the caliphate of Abû Bakr, that of Ümar, that of Üthmân, and then that of ‘Âlî. We find they total 30 years.’

“Later I researched the caliphs, but did not find they totalled 30 years. I asked Sa‘îd, ‘Where did you meet Safîna?’ He replied, ‘In a date-grove, in the era of al-Hajjaj. I stayed with him for three nights, asking him to tell me things the Messenger of God (Ṣâ‘îl) had said. I asked him, ‘What is your name?’ He replied, ‘I’m not telling you! The Messenger of God (Ṣâ‘îl) named me “Safîna”, “boat”.’ I asked him, ‘Why did he call you “Safîna”?’ He replied, ‘The Messenger of God (Ṣâ‘îl) went on a journey with his Companions. Their baggage grew too heavy for them and he told me, “Carry that; you’re a safîna!” And if I had been burdened that day with the load of one, two, three, four, five, six or seven donkeys it would not have been too heavy for me, though they would have been overdoing it.’”

This hadith is given by Abû Dâ‘ûd, al-Tirmidhi and al-Nasàî. The phrase they relate is, “the caliphate of the prophethood will be for 30 years. Then there will be a kingdom.”

Imâm Ahmad stated that Bahz related to him, quoting Ḥammâd b. Salama, from Sa‘îd b. Jumhûr, who quoted Safîna as having said, “We were on a journey, and whenever anyone got tired, he would throw his clothes, shield or sword over on me until I was carrying a whole lot of that. The Prophet (Ṣâ‘îl) told me, ‘You’re a safîna!’”

This was widely accepted to be how he came to be named Safîna.

Abû al-Qâsim al-Baghawî stated that both al-Rabi‘ Sulaymân b. Da‘ûd al-Zahrânî and Muḥammad b. Ja‘far al-Warikânî told him that Sharîk b. ‘Abd Allâh al-Nakhrî had related to them, from ‘Imrân al-Bajâlî, from a freed-man of Umm Salama, who said, “We were with the Messenger of God (Ṣâ‘îl), and passed by a gulley – or a river – and I was busy helping people across. The Messenger of God (Ṣâ‘îl) told me, ‘From today on, you’re nothing but a safîna, a “boat”!’”

Imâm Ahmad narrated it thus, from Aswad b. ‘Amîr, from Shurâykh.

Abû ‘Abd Allâh b. Manda stated that al-Ḥasan b. Makram related to him, quoting Üthmân b. Ümar, quoting Usâma b. Zayd, from Muḥammad b. al-Munkûdarî, from Safîna, who said, “I went to sea on a ship and it was wrecked. I rode on one of its planks and it cast me up on an island where there was a lion, and that really surprised me. I said, ‘Abû al-Ḥârîth, I’m the freed-man of the Messenger of God (SAAS). It then began using its shoulder to gesture to me, and eventually led me to a path. Then it growled, which I took to be its (farewell) greeting to me.”

He also narrated it from Muḥammad b. ‘Abd Allāh al-Makhramī, from Ḥusayn b. Muḥammad, who quoted it from ‘Abd al-‘Azīz b. ‘Abd Allāh b. Abū Salama, from Muḥammad b. al-Munkadīr, who quoted Sāfīnā, as above.

Al-Baghawī also stated that Hārūn b. ‘Abd Allāh related to him, quoting ‘Alī b. Gaṣūr, quoting Abu Rayḥān, who quoted Sāfīnā, the freed-man of the Messenger of God (SAAS), as having said, “When the lion confronted me, I said, ‘I’m Sāfīnā, the freed-man of the Messenger of God (SAAS).’ It then struck its tail on the ground and lay down.”

Muslim and the ahl al-sunan quoted from him. It is given above in the ḥadīth narrated by ʿImām Ahmad that he used to reside in a date orchard, and that he lived on into the days of al-Ḥajjāj.

Salman al-Fārisī, Abū ‘Abd Allāh, mawālī al-islām, “the freedman of Islam”, was also one of them.

He was originally from Persia and circumstances led him being owned by a Jew of Medina. When the Messenger of God (SAAS) went into exile there, Salmān accepted Islam. The Messenger of God (SAAS) ordered him to enter into a contract of manumission with his Jewish master and helped him to pay off what he owed. He was associated with the Messenger of God (SAAS), who said of him, “Salmān is of our household”.

We have given above a description of his leaving his own country and his association with a sequence of monks, one after the next, until circumstances led him to al-madīna al-munawwārām, ‘Medina the illuminated’. We described how he became a Muslim, may God be pleased with him, early after the migration of the Prophet (SAAS), to Medina. His death came in 35 AH, at the end of ʿUthmān’s rule, or early in 36 AH. It is also said that he died during the reign of ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb; the first date is more widely accepted.

Al-ʿAbbās b. Yazīd al-Bahrānī stated, “Scholars had no doubt that he lived for 250 years; they did differ over his having lived to a greater age, up to 350 years.” Some later hujjāg, however, claim that he did not live beyond the age of 100. God knows best what is correct.

Shuqrān al-Ḥabashi was also one of them. His given name was Ṣāliḥ b. ʿAdi; the Prophet (SAAS) inherited him from his father.

Muṣʿab al-Zubayrī and Muḥammad b. Saʿd stated, “He had belonged to ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. ʿAwf, who presented him to the Prophet (SAAS).”

ʿAlī b. Hanbal narrated, from Iṣḥāq b. ʿIsā, from Abū Maʿshār, who stated that Shuqrān had told him that he had participated at the battle of Badr.
Abū Ma'shar stated that the Messenger of God (SAAS) had not awarded him a share of the booty.

Muḥammad b. Sa'd similarly includes him among those who were present at Badr. He was a slave and therefore did not receive a share in the booty, but was placed in charge of the prisoners taken. Each man owning a prisoner made payment to him, and so he received more than the equivalent of a full share.

He (Muḥammad b. Sa'd) stated, “There were three slaves apart from him at Badr. One was owned by ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. ʿAwf, another by Ḥāṭib b. Abū Balta'a and a third by Sa'd b. Mu'adh. He (the Prophet (SAAS)) did give them a small present.”

Abū al-Qāsim al-Baghawī stated, “There is no mention in al-Zuhri’s book or in that of Ibn Iṣḥāq of him (Shuqrān) among those who were present at Badr.”

Al-Wāqidi stated that Abū Bakr b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Sabra quoted Abū Bakr b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Jahm as having said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) appointed his freed-man Shuqrān in charge of everything found in the saddle-bags at the battle at al-Murayḥī, including minor items, weapons, cattle and sheep; he assembled the children in one area.”

Imām Aḥmad stated that Aswād b. ʿAmr related to him, quoting Muḥammad b. Khalīd, from ʿAmr b. Yaḥyā al-Māzini, from his father, who quoted Shuqrān as having said, “I saw him” — meaning the Prophet (SAAS) — “making his way to Khaybar mounted on a donkey, performing prayer as he did so, and making gesticulations.”

These aḥādīth provide evidence that Shuqrān, may God be pleased with him, was present at these engagements.

Al-Tirmidhī narrated, from Zayd b. Akhzām, from ʿUthmān b. Farqad, from Jaʿfar b. Muḥammad, who quoted Ibn Abī Rāfīʿ, as having said, “I heard Shuqrān say, ‘I swear by God, it was I who spread out the velvet cloth in the grave beneath the Messenger of God (SAAS).’” Al-Tirmidhī went on to state that Jaʿfar b. Muḥammad quoted his father as having said, “It was Abū Tahlīya who made the grave of the Prophet (SAAS), and Shuqrān who laid out the velvet cloth.”

Al-Tirmidhī categorized this hadith as being hasan ghārib.

It has been narrated above how Shuqrān participated in washing the body of the Messenger of God (SAAS), how he descended into his grave and how he placed beneath him the velvet on which he had prayed, saying, “I swear by God, no one will wear this after you!”

The ḥāfīz Abū al-Ḥasan b. al-Athār stated in his work al-Ghāba that Shuqrān’s line died out and that the last of his descendants died at Medina during the rule of al-Rasḥīd.

Also included in their number was Ḑumayra b. Abū Ḑumayra al-Ḥimyārī. He was taken captive during the jāḥiliyya and the Prophet (SAAS) purchased him then manumitted him. Muṣʿab al-Zubayrī referred to him, saying, “He had a house at al-Baqīʿ and a child.”
Abd Allāh b. Wahb quoted from Ibn Abū Dhi'b, from Ḥusayn b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Ḥumayra, from his father, who quoted his grandfather Ḥumayra as having said that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) passed by Ḥumayra's mother while she was weeping and asked her, “What is making you cry? Are you hungry or unclothed?” She replied, “Messenger of God, I have been separated from my son.” The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) replied, “A mother and her son can never be separated.” He then sent for the man who had Ḥumayra and exchanged a young camel for Ḥumayra.

Ibn Abū Dhi'b went on to state that he (Ḥusayn b. ʿAbd·Allāh b. Ḥumayra) then read to him a letter he had, as follows, “In the name of God, the most Merciful and Compassionate. This letter is from Muḥammad, the Messenger of God, to Abū Ḥumayra and his family. The Messenger of God has manumitted them all. They are a family of Arab descent. If they wish, they may reside with the Messenger of God and if they wish, they may return to their own people without hindrance unless for proper cause. Those Muslims who meet with them should treat them with kindness. Ubayy b. Ka'b wrote (it).”

They also include Ṭahmān, also known as Dhakwān, as Mahrān, as Māymūn, Kaysān and Bādhām. He quoted the Prophet (ṢAAS) as having said, “Charity payments (ṣadaqa) are not permitted to be made to myself, nor to my household. The freed-man of the family is one of them (and should not be given ṣadaqa).”

Al-Baghwāt narrated it from Ṣin̲jāb b. al-Ḥārith and others, from Sharīk, from ʿAtîb b. al-Ṣāhīb, from Umm Kulthūm, one of the daughters of Alī b. Abū Ṭālīb, who said, “A freed-man of the Prophet (ṢAAS), a man named Ṭahmān or Dhakwān, related to me that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said . . . ,” and she proceeded to quote him as above.

Also among them was Ubayy, a freed-man of the Prophet (ṢAAS).

Abū Dāʿūd al-Ṭayālīsī stated, from Shuʿba, from Sulaymān al-Taymi, from a sheikh who asked Ubayy, a freed-man of the Prophet (ṢAAS), “Did the Prophet (ṢAAS) order the performance of any prayer other than those written down?” He replied, “A prayer between the al-maghrib and the al-ʾishāʾ.”

Abū al-Qāsim al-Baghwātī stated, “I know of no one other than him who narrated this.”

Ibn ʿAsākir then commented, “It was not as he said.”

He then proceeded to give a text through Abū Yaḥyā al-Mawṣili, who stated that ʿAbd al-ʿAlī b. Ḥammād related to him, quoting Ḥammād b. Śalāma, from Sulaymān al-Taymi, who quoted Ubayy, a freed-man of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), as having said that there were two women who were fasting and were slandering people. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) called for a vessel and told them, “Vomit!” They did so, bringing up pus, blood, meat and flesh. He then commented, “These two women abstained from what was permitted and broke their fast (by eating) what was prohibited.”

Imām ʿAlī narrated this, from Yazīd b. Ḥārūn and Ibn Abū ʿAbbā, from Sulaymān al-Taymi, from a man who related to them at a gathering held by Abū Othman, quoting from Ubayd, a freed-man of the Messenger of God (SAAS), narrating it as above.

Ahmad also narrated it from Ghundar, who quoted Othman b. Ghiyath as having said, "I was with Abu Othman when a man said, "Sa'd" - or Ubayd, Othman was unsure of the name - "a freed-man of the Prophet (SAAS) said ...". And he went on to narrate as above.

They also included Faqila, a freed-man of the Prophet (SAAS).

Muhammad b. Sa'd stated that al-Waqidi informed him, quoting Utba b. Khayrat al-Ashali as having said, "Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz wrote to Abu Bakr Muhammad b. 'Amr b. Hazm asking him for information about the servants of the Messenger of God (SAAS), including the men, the women and the freed-men. He replied to him, stating, "There were Faqila, a freed-man of his, originally of Yemen, who later lived in Syria, and Abu Muwayhiba, a man of mixed Arab ancestry, of (Banu) Muzayna, whom he manumitted."

Ibn 'Asakir stated, "I find no mention of Faqila among the freed-men except from this source."

Qafiz was also among them.

Abu 'Abd Allah b. Manda stated that Sahil b. al-Sari informed him, quoting Utba b. Khayrat al-Ashali as having said, "Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz wrote to Abu Bakr Muhammad b. 'Amr b. Hazm asking him for information about the servants of the Messenger of God (SAAS), including the men, the women and the freed-men. He replied to him, stating, "There was Faqila, a freed-man of his, originally of Yemen, who later lived in Syria, and Abu Muwayhiba, a man of mixed Arab ancestry, of (Banu) Muzayna, whom he manumitted."

Ibn 'Asakir stated, "I find no mention of Faqila among the freed-men except from this source."

Muhammad b. Sulayman is alone in giving this.

Also there was Kirkira, who was in charge of the baggage of the Prophet (SAAS), on some of his military expeditions.

Abu Bakr b. Hazm mentioned him in what he wrote to Umar b. 'Abd al-'Aziz.

Imam Ahmad stated that Sufyân related to him, from 'Amr, from Salim b. Abî al-Ja'd, from 'Abd Allah b. 'Amr, who said, "There was a man named Kirkira in charge of the baggage of the Prophet (SAAS). The man died and the Prophet (SAAS) said, 'He is in hell-fire!' Then they noticed that the man had a striped cloak or an outer garment that he had put on."

Al-Bukhari narrated this from 'Ali b. al-Madini, from Sufyân.

I note that his story is similar to that of Mid'am who was given to him by Rifa'a of Banû al-Našt, as will be explained.

Kaysân was also one of them.

Al-Baghwâî stated that Abu Bakr b. Abû Shayba related to him, quoting Ibn Fuḍayl, from 'Aṭîb b. al-Sâbîb, who said, "I came to Umm Kulthûm, daughter of 'Ali, who said, 'Kaysân, a freed-man of the Prophet (SAAS), related to me that the latter said to me with regard to an object assigned to charity, 'We of the household are forbidden access to the charity. And our freed-man is one of ourselves: so do not consume charity offerings.'"

Also of them was Mâbûr, the Coptic eunuch who was presented to him by the Governor of Alexandria along with Mariya, Shirin and the mule. We have Mid'am was one of them. He was a black, of mixed Arab descent from Hismä who was a gift from Rifa‘a b. Zayd al-Jadhami. He was killed during the life of the Prophet (SAAS), following their return from Khaybar. When they reached Wadi al-Qura, Mid'am was busy unloading the baggage from the camel of the Messenger of God (SAAS), when a stray arrow struck and killed him. People commented, “Lucky for him! Martyrdom!” The Messenger of God (SAAS) commented, “Absolutely not, by Him who holds my soul in His hand, the shamlā he took at the battle of Khaybar that had not been assigned from the booty will light the fires of hell for him!”

When they heard that a man came up with a shoelace – or two shoelaces – and the Prophet (SAAS) said, “A shoelace” – or “two shoelaces” – “of fire!”

Both authors of the sahiḥ collections gave this from a hadith of Malik, from Thawr b. Ya‘ṣīd, from Abū al-Ghayth, from Abū Hurayra.

Also included among them is Mahran, also known as Tāḥmān. It was he who was referred to by Umm Kulthūm, daughter of ‘Ali, regarding the prohibition of charity payments to Banū Ḥāshim and their freed-men, as related above.

Maymiin was also among them, he being (the same as) the person preceding (above).

Also there was his freed-man Nāfī’.

Also included among them is Nufayr, sometimes known as Masrūḥ and as Nāfī’ b. Masrūḥ. The correct name is Nāfī’ b. al-Ḥarith b. Kālāda b. ‘Ammr b. ʿIlaj b. Salama b. ʿAbd al-ʿUzza b. Ghīra b. ‘Aww b. Qays, he being Thaqīf Abū Bakra al-Thaqafī. His mother was Sumayya, Umm Ziyād.

He and a number of slaves were lowered down over the walls of al-Ṭā’if, and the Prophet (SAAS) manumitted him. He was born in Bakra, and so the Messenger of God (SAAS) named him Abū Bakra.

Abū Nu‘aym stated, “He was a righteous man; the Messenger of God (SAAS) established brotherhood between him and Abū Barza al-Aslami.”

I note that it was he who prayed over the bier of the latter, that being his testament.

183. In Syria.
184. A small turban or a body-covering cloak.
Abū Bakr was not present at the battle of the camel, nor at the battles at Ṣīfīn. His death came in 51 AH, though some say 52 AH.

Waqīd was also one of them. His name is also given as “Abū Waqīd”. He was a freed-man of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).

The ḥāfiẓ Abū Ḥāfiẓ al-Isbāḥānī stated that Abū ‘Amr b. Ḥamādān related to him, quoting Al-Ḥasan b. Ṣufyān, quoting Muḥammad b. Yaḥyā b. ‘Abd al-Karīm, quoting al-Ḥusayn b. Muḥammad, quoting al-Haytham b. Hāmmād, from al-Ḥārith b. Ghassān, from a man of Quraysh who lived in Medina, from Zādhān, from Waqīd, a freed-man of the Prophet (ṢAAS), who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) stated, ‘Whoever obeys God remembers God, even if his prayer, fasting and recitation of the Qurān are minimal. Whoever disobeys God does not remember Him, even if his prayer, fasting and recitation of the Qurān are substantial.’”

Hurmuz Abū Kaysān was one of them. He is also called Hurmuz or Kaysān. It is he who was also known as “Ṭahmān”, as mentioned above.

Ibn Wāhīb stated that ‘Alī b. ‘Abbas related to him, from ‘Aṭā’ b. al-Ṣā‘īb, from Fāṭima, daughter of ‘Alī, or Umm Kulthūm, daughter of ‘Alī, who said, “I heard a freed-man of ours called Hurmuz, whose agnomen was Abū Kaysān, say, ‘I heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) say, ‘We of the household are not permitted access to the charity. And our freed-men are of ourselves. So do not consume al-ṣadaqa, the charity.’”

Al-Rābi‘ b. Sulaymān narrated it, from ‘Asād b. Mūsā, from Warqā, from ‘Aṭā’ b. al-Ṣā‘īb, who said, “I went in to Umm Kulthūm and she said, ‘Hurmuz, or Kaysān, related to us that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) stated, “We do not consume al-ṣadaqa, the charity.”’”

Abū al-Qāsim al-Baghawi stated that Ṭanṣūr b. Abū Muzāḥim related to him, quoting Abū Ḥāṣf al-Abbār, from Ibn Abū Ziyād, from Muṣāwiya, who said, “Twenty slaves were present at Badr, including one slave belonging to the Prophet (ṢAAS), a man named Hurmuz. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) manumitted him and said, ‘God has set you free. A people’s freed-man is one of themselves. We of the household do not consume al-ṣadaqa, the charity; you must not do so.’”

Included among them is Ḥishām, a freed-man of the Prophet (ṢAAS). Muḥammad b. Sa‘īd stated that Sulaymān b. ‘Ubayd Allāh al-Raqquī informed him, quoting Muḥammad b. Ayyūb al-Raqquī, from Ṣufyān, from ‘Abd al-Karīm, from Abū al-Zubayr, who quoted Ḥishām, a freed-man of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), as having said, “A man came and said, ‘Messenger of God, my wife does not fend off the hand of someone who touches her.’ ‘Divorce her,’ he responded. The man went on, ‘(But) she pleases me.’ ‘Then enjoy her,’ he said.”

Ibn Manda stated that a group of scholars narrate this from Ṣufyān al-Thawrī, from Abū al-Zubayr, from a freed-man of Banū Hashim, from the Prophet (ṢAAS). But this ḥadīth did not name the freed-man. ‘Ubayd Allāh b. ‘Amr also narrated it, from ‘Abd al-Karīm, from Abū al-Zubayr, from Jābir.
Also among them was Yasār; it is said that he was killed by the Urani (travellers) who had mutilated him.

Al-Wāqīdī narrated, with his line of transmission coming from Ya‘qūb b. Utba, that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had received him at the engagement at Qarqarat al-Kudr, along with the livestock of Banū Ghatafān and Banū Suyaym. The men gave him to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and he accepted him from them. Because he saw that he was properly performing the prayer, he manumitted him. He then divided the livestock among the men, each one of them receiving seven camels. The men were two hundred in number.

They also include Abū al-Ḥamrāʾ, a freed-man and servant of the Prophet (ṢAAS). His name is also given as Hilāl b. al-Ḥārīth, Ibn al-Muẓaffar, and Hilāl b. al-Ḥārīth b. Žufr al-Sulami. He had been taken into captivity during the jahiliyya.

Abū Ja‘far Muḥammad b. ‘Alī b. Dūhaym stated that Aḥmad b. Ḥāzim related to him, quoting ‘Abd Allāh b. Mūsā and al-Faḍl b. Dukayn, from Yūnus b. Abū Ishāq, from Abū Dā‘ūd al-Faṣṣ, who quoted Abū al-Ḥamrāʾ as having said, “I was stationed in Medina for seven months – it felt like one day – and the Prophet (ṢAAS) would come to the door of the home of ‘Alī and Fāṭima every morning and call out, ‘The prayer! The prayer! People of the household, God wants only to remove the filth from you, and to thoroughly purify you.’” ‘Alī Māja narrated it, from Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba, from Abū Nu‘aym. This is the only source he quoted.

The “Abū Dā‘ūd” referred to in the above hadith was Nufayy b. al-Ḥārīth al-‘Aṣma; he was one of those sources considered weak.

‘Abbas al-Durī quoted Ibn Mu‘īn as having said, “Abū al-Ḥamrāʾ (referred to above) was a Companion of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), whose name was Hilāl b. al-Ḥārīth. He used to live in Ḥims; I saw there a young man who was one of his sons.”

Someone else said, “His home was outside the walls of Ḥims.” Abū al-Wāzīr quoted Sāmura as having said, “Abū al-Ḥamrāʾ was one of the freed-men.”

Also among them was Abū Salama, the herdsman of the Prophet (ṢAAS). He was also known as Abū Sallām, his given name being Ḥurayth.

Abū al-Qāsim al-Baghawi stated that Kāmil b. Ṭalḥa related to him, quoting ‘Abbād b. ‘Abd al-Ṣamad, who quoted Abū Salama, the herdsman of the Prophet (ṢAAS), as having said, “I heard the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) say, ‘Whoever meets God, testifies that there is no god but God, that Muḥammad is the Messenger of God, and expresses faith in the Mission and in the reckoning will enter paradise.’”
‘Abbad went on, “We asked him, ‘Did you hear this from the Messenger of God (SAAS)?’ He placed a finger in each ear and replied, ‘I heard that from him not once, not twice, not thrice and not four times!’”

Ibn ‘Asakir gives only this hadith from him. Al-Nasawi narrated another hadith from him in the work al-Yawm wa al-Layla and Ibn Maja quoted another from him.

Abū Saifiyya, a freed-man of the Prophet (SAAS), is another of them.

Abū al-Qāsim al-Baghwāi stated that Ahmad b. al-Miqdām related to us, quoting Mu‘tamir, quoting Abū Ka'b, from his grandfather Baqiyya, from Abū Saifiyya, freed-man of the Prophet (SAAS), that the latter would lay out a leather sheet, and a palm-leaf basket containing pebbles would be brought to him. He would use these to repeat, subhan Allah! “Praise be to God!” until midday. Then it would be taken away. When he had performed al-ūlā, “the first prayer”, he would go on repeating subhan Allah! until evening.

They also included Abū Dūmayra, a freed-man of the Prophet (SAAS), the father of Dūmayra referred to above and the husband of Umm Dūmayra. Some mention is made of him in their letter concerning his son, Ẓaraf, to which reference is made above.

Muhammad b. Sa‘d stated in al-Tabaqāt that Ismā’īl b. ‘Abd Allah b. Uways al-Wadānī informed him, quoting Ḥusayn b. ‘Abd Allah b. Abū Dūmayra, that the text of the letter written by the Messenger of God (SAAS), to Abū Dūmayra was as follows: “In the name of God, the most Merciful and Beneficent. (This is) a letter from Muḥammad, the Messenger of God, to Abū Dūmayra and his family. They are an Arab family who are among those whom God has awarded as booty to His Messenger. The latter has manumitted them. He has given Abū Dūmayra the choice of joining his people, if he wishes, or, if he prefers, to remain with the Messenger of God (SAAS), he may then be of his household, having then chosen God and His Messenger, and entered into Islam. No one is to interrupt their passage, unless to do them good. Those Muslims who meet them should treat them with kindness. Ubayy b. Ka'b wrote (it).”

Ismā’īl b. Abū Uways stated, “This man was a freed-man of the Messenger of God (SAAS). He was of Ḥimyar. A group of them went on a journey, bearing this letter. Thieves blocked their path and took their belongings. They then produced this letter and told the thieves what it contained. The latter read it, returned their belongings to them and allowed them to pass.

“Ḥusayn b. ‘Abd Allah b. Abū Dūmayra presented himself to the Commander of the Believers, al-Mahdi, having brought this letter with him. Al-Mahdi took it, examined it carefully, and awarded Ḥusayn 300 dinārs.”

They also included Abū Ubayd, a freed-man of the Messenger of God (SAAS).

Imām Ahmad stated that Affān related to him, quoting Abān al-Ṣattār, quoting Qatāda, from Shah b. Ḥawshab, who quoted Abū Ubayd as having said that he cooked a pot of meat for the Messenger of God (SAAS). The latter asked him, “Serve me its shoulder!” Abū Ubayd did so, but again he asked, “Serve me its shoulder!” Abū Ubayd did so, but again he asked, “Serve me its shoulder!” Abū Ubayd then said, “Prophet of God, how many shoulders can a sheep have!” He replied, “By Him who holds my soul in His hand, if you’d only remained silent, you would have been able to give me a shoulder every time I asked for it!” Al-Tirmidhi narrated this in al-Shamā‘il from Bandār, from Muslim b. Ibrāhīm, from Abān b. Yazīd al-‘Aṣṭār.

185. The text of the letter in question, from a different source, is given above with minor variants from the following account. See above, pages 450-1.

They also include Abū ʿAsīb; some give his name as Abū ʿAsim. The former is correct. There are those who distinguish between the two men.

It is related above that he participated in the prayers spoken over the Prophet (SAAS), attended his burial, and narrated the story about al-Mughīra b. Shu‘ba.

Al-Ḥarīth b. Abū Usāma stated that Yazīd b. Ḥarrūn related to him, quoting Muslim b. Ubayd Abū ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAṣīb, who said, “I heard Abū ʿAsīb, a freed-man of the Messenger of God (SAAS) say, ‘The Prophet (SAAS) said, “Gabriel came to me bearing fever and pestilence. I kept the fever in Medina and dispatched the pestilence to Syria. Pestilence is a testimony and a mercy for my own nation and a punishment for the unbelievers.’”’

Imām Aḥmad narrated it thus from Yazīd b. Ḥarrūn.

Abū ʿAbd Allāh b. Manda stated that Muḥammad b. ʿAbd Allāh informed him, quoting Muḥammad b. Ishāq al-Ṣaghānī, quoting Yūnus b. Muḥammad, quoting Ḥashraj b. Nubāṭa, quoting Abū al-Nadrā al-Baṣrī, from Abū ʿAsīb, the freed-man of the Messenger of God (SAAS), who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) went forth one night. He passed by me and called out to me, then passed by and called out to Abū Bakr, who came out to him. He then went on by and called out to ʿUmar, who also came out to him. He then walked on and entered a garden owned by an ʿanṣārī. He asked the owner of the garden, ‘Provide us with some unripe dates to eat.’ The man brought them and put them down. The Messenger of God (SAAS) ate, as did all the others. He then called for water and, having drunk some of it, said, ‘This is a blessing! You will be asked about this on Judgement Day!’ ʿUmar then took the bunch of dates and struck it on the ground, scattering the unripe dates. He (the ʿanṣārī owner of the date-grove) then asked, ‘Prophet of God, will we really be held responsible for this on Judgement Day?’ He replied, ‘Yes; for everything except three things: a scrap of cloth with which a man covers his nakedness, a morsel of food with which to blunt his hunger, and some stones (of a structure) he enters’ — meaning to escape the heat and the cold.”

Imām Aḥmad narrated this from Shurayḥ, from Ḥashraj.

Muḥammad b. Saʿd narrated it in his work al-Tahāqat, from Mūṣa b. ʿIsmāʿil, who quoted Muslima, daughter of Abān al-Furayṣīyya, who quoted Maymūna, daughter of Abū ʿAsīb as having said, “Abū ʿAsīb would fast for three days in sequence. He used to perform the al-ḍuḥā, early morning, prayer while standing, but grew (too) old. He would also fast the ayyām al-bīṭā. She went on to tell how he had a bell in his bed, the sound of which would ring out when he called her with it; when he rang it, she would come.

Abū Kabsha al-Anmārī was also one of them. He was of the Anmār clan of Banū Mudhjāhij as is widely known. He was a freed-man of the Prophet (SAAS).

There are several versions given of his name. The best known of these is Sulaym; he is also known as ʿAmr b. Saʿd – or Saʿd b. ʿAmr. He was originally of mixed Arab descent from Daws territory. He was present at the battle of Badr.

Mūsā b. ʿUṣba quoted from al-Zuhrī as asserting this. Ibn ʿIshāq, al-Bukhārī, al-Wāqīdī, Muḥāfīz al-Zubayrī and Abū Bakr b. Abū Khaythama mention him. Al-Wāqīdī added, “He also was present at the battle of Uḥud, and various later military engagements.”

He died on the day when ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb succeeded to power. That was on Tuesday, eight days prior to the end of Jumādā al-Akhirā in 13 AH.

Khalīfā b. Khayyāṭ stated, “In 23 AH Abū Kabsha, a freed-man of the Prophet (SAAS), died.”

It has been given above, from Abū Kabsha, that when the Messenger of God (SAAS) passed through al-Ḥijr on his journey to Tabūk, the men began entering their houses. They were summoned to a communal prayer and they all assembled. The Messenger of God (SAAS) then asked, “What? Would you enter in upon a people with whom God was angry?” One man called out, “We’re curious about them.” “Should I not tell you of matters more curious than that? A man from among yourselves who informs you of what happened before you and what will be after you.” And so on.186

Imām ʿAḥmad stated that ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Mahdī related to him, from Muṭawwiyah b. ʾĀdhār, from ʿAmr b. ʿĀdib b. Muḥāfīz al-Aqāmah, who quoted Abū Kabsha al-Anmārī as having said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) was seated among his Companions. Then he went inside and later came out again, having bathed. We asked, ‘Messenger of God, was something wrong?’ ‘Yes,’ he replied. ‘A certain lady passed by me and I had a desire to be with a woman. So I went to one of my wives and had sexual relations with her. You should all act similarly; to have only what is permitted is a highly exemplary deed for you.’”

ʿAḥmad stated that Wāḥīd related to him, quoting al-ʿAmash, from Sālim b. Abū al-Jaʿd, who quoted Abū Kabsha al-Anmārī as having said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) stated, ‘The like of this nation is as four persons. One is a man to whom God gave wealth and knowledge and who works for Him and expends it as he should. Another is a man to whom God gives knowledge but not wealth; that person says, ‘If only I had the wealth of this person, I would act as he does.’ These two men shall be equal in reward.

“Another is a man to whom God gives wealth but not knowledge; he acts aimlessly and expends it improperly. Then there is the man to whom God gives neither wealth nor knowledge. He says, ‘If I had money such as does that man, I would do as he does.’ The Messenger of God (SAAS) concluded, “Those two men shall be equal in punishment.”

Ibn Maja narrated it similarly from Abu Bakr b. Abū Shayba, and 'Ali b. Muḥammad, both of whom quoted from Waki'. Ibn Maja also narrated it from another line, from a hadith of Manṣūr, from Sālim b. Abū al-Jaʿd, from Ibn Abū Kabsha, from his father. Some sources give his name as 'Abd Allāh b. Abū Kabsha.

Aḥmad stated that Yazīd b. ‘Abd Rabbihī related to him, quoting Muḥammad b. Ḥarb, quoting al-Zubayrī, from Rashīd b. Saʿd, from Abū ʿAmīr al-Hawzant, who stated that Abū Ḥisham al-Anmārī came to him and said, “Loan me your horse; for I heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) say, “A person who loans to a Muslim a horse that then gives birth for him will receive a reward equivalent to that for 70 horses he might have provided to bear fighters in God’s cause.’”

Al-Tirmidhī narrated it from Muḥammad b. Ismaʿīl, from Abū Nuʿaym, from Ubāda b. Muslim, from Yūnus b. Khaṭṭāb, from Saʿīd Abū al-Bukhtūrī al-Tārī, who quoted Abū Ḥisham as having quoted the Prophet (SAAS) as having said, “There are three things to which I will swear. And I will relate to you something; remember it. Charity never diminished a worshipper’s wealth. No worshipper was ever maltreated by an injustice and then remained patient in face of it without God increasing his glory thereby. And no worshipper will ever open the door to begging without God opening for him a door to poverty.”

He categorized this as hasan ḥadīth.

Aḥmad narrated this from Ghundar, from Shuʿba, from al-Aʿmash, from Sālim b. Abū al-Jaʿd.

Abū Daʿūd and Ibn Maja narrated it from a hadith of al-Walīd b. Muslim, from Ibn Thawbān, from his father, from Abū Ḥisham al-Anmārī, who said that the Messenger of God (SAAS) would have blood cupped from the top of his head and from between his shoulders.

They also included Abū Muwayhiba, a freed-man of the Prophet (SAAS). He was of mixed Arab descent from Banū Muzayna. The Messenger of God (SAAS) purchased and then manumitted him. His given name, may God be pleased with him, is not known.

Abū Muṣʿab al-Zubayrī stated, “Abū Muwayhiba was present at the battle of al-Murayṣī’. It was he who would lead the camel of ʿAṭīsha, may God be pleased with him.”

Above is given the hadith related by Imām Ahmad with a line of transmission back to Abū Muwayhiba, who reported having gone with the Messenger of God (SAAS) at night to the al-Baqi' cemetery. He narrated how the latter had stopped there, prayed, and asked forgiveness for them and then said, “You should be more pleased to be where you are than are some people to be where they are. Dissensions have arisen like pieces of dark night, riding the one upon the other, the latter ever more intense than the first. You should be pleased to be where you are.”

He then came back and said, “Abu Muwayhiba, I have been given to choose between having the keys to those places my nation will conquer after me, going to paradise, or meeting my Lord (soon). I have chosen to meet my Lord.” Abu Muwayhiba went on, “Soon – just seven or eight days thereafter – he died.”

The above are, then, the slaves of the Messenger of God (SAAS).

The women servants of the Messenger of God (SAAS).

These include Amat Allah, daughter of Razina.

What is correct is that it was this woman’s mother Razina who should be credited, as will be explained. However, the former name is given in the account of Ibn Abi Āṣim, who narrated that 'Uqba b. Makram related to him, quoting Muḥammad b. Mūsā, quoting 'Ulayka, daughter of al-Kumayt al-‘Atkiyya, quoting her father, who quoted Amat Allah, the servant of the Prophet (SAAS), who said that the latter took Ṣafiyya captive at the battles against Banū Qurayṣa and Banū al-Naḍlr, then manumitted her and gave her Razina, the mother of Amat Allāh as her dowry.

This hadith is very strange.

They also included Umayma. Ibn al-Athir stated, “She was a freed-woman of the Messenger of God (SAAS).”

It is the people of Syria who narrate a hadith from her. Jubayr b. Nufayr quoted her as saying that she would wash the Messenger of God (SAAS) (before the prayer) and that one day a man came to the latter and asked him, “Give me advice!” He responded, “Do not associate any other with God, even if you should be mutilated or burned by fire. Do not deliberately omit a prayer; anyone who does this deliberately has the protection of God and that of His Messenger withdrawn from him. Do not drink intoxicants, for they are the chief factor of every sin. Do not disobey your parents, even if they should order you to abandon your family and your way of life.”

These also include Baraka, Umm Ayman, and Umm Usama b. Zayd b. Ḥāritha.

She was Baraka, daughter of Tha‘labah b. ‘Amr b. Ḥuṣayn b. Mālik b. Salama b. ‘Amr b. al-Nu‘mān al-Ḥabashiyya.

She was generally known by her agnomen “Umm Ayman”, “the mother of Ayman”, her son by her first husband ‘Ubayd b. Zayd al-Ḥabashi. After him she married Zayd b. Ḥāritha, to whom she bore Usama b. Zayd. She was also known as “Umm al-Zibā”, “the mother of the gazelles”.

460 THE LIFE OF THE PROPHET MUHAMMAD
She went out on both '87 Hijras, may God be pleased with her. She was the nursemaid to the Messenger of God (SAAS), along with his own mother, Āmina, daughter of Wahb. She was one of those received by the Messenger of God (SAAS), from the inheritance of his father. Al-Wāqidl stated this.

Others say that he inherited her from his mother. Yet others say she belonged to Khādīja’s sister, who presented her to the Messenger of God (SAAS), that she accepted Islam early and went on the Hijra, following him later on.

We have given above the account of the visit made to her by Abū Bakr and ʿUmar, may God be pleased with them both, after the death of the Prophet (SAAS), and how she had wept. They then asked her, “Don’t you realize that what is with God is better for the Messenger of God (SAAS)?” She replied, “Yes, indeed; but I am weeping because revelation from heaven has ceased.” And they both wept along with her.

Al-Bukhārī stated, in his history, “ʿAbd Allāh b. Yusuf stated, from Ibn Wahb, from Yūnus b. Yazīd, from al-Zuhrī, who said, ʿUmm Ayman suckled the Messenger of God (SAAS), until he was weaned. He manumitted her and married her to Zayd b. ʿHarīthah.”

She died five months after the Prophet (SAAS). Some, however, give the period as six months. She is alternatively said to have been still alive after the assassination of ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb.

Muslim narrated this from Abū al-Ṭāhir and Ḥarmala, both of whom quoted Ibn Wahb, from Yūnus, from al-Zuhrī. He gave her name as Umm Ayman al-Ḥabashiyya.

Muḥammad b. Saʿd stated, quoting al-Wāqidl, “Umm Ayman died early during the caliphate of ʿUthmān b. ʿAffān.”

Al-Wāqidl stated that Ṭāhā b. Saʿd b. Dīnār informed him, from a sheikh of Banū Saʿd b. Bakr who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) used to address Umm Ayman as ‘yā ammāh’, ‘mother’. And he would look over at her and say, ‘This woman is what remains of my (childhood) family household.’”

Abū Bakr b. Abī Khaythama stated that Sulaymān b. Abī ʿSheikh used to tell him, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) would say, ‘Umm Ayman is my mother who came after my own mother.’”

Al-Wāqidl quoted his colleagues of Medina as having said, “Umm Ayman looked over at the Messenger of God (SAAS), while he was drinking and said, ‘Give me to drink.’ ʿAʾishah demanded, ‘Would you say such a thing to the Messenger of God?’ She replied, ‘I served him far longer!’ The Messenger of God (SAAS) commented, ‘You are right.’ And he then brought her water for her to drink.”

Al-Muḥammad b. ʿAssān stated that Wahb b. Jarīr related to him, quoting his father, who said, “I heard ʿUthmān b. al-Qāsim say, ‘When Umm Ayman went on the Hijra, she arrived in the evening at al-Munṣarīf, before al-Rawḥā. She was fasting, and she was overcome by intense thirst. A bucket of water, attached to a white well-rope, came down from heaven for her, and she said, "I drank, and never again did I experience thirst. I was open to thirst through fasting on the Hijra journeys, but I was never actually thirsty thereafter!"

187. That to Abyssinia and that to Medina.

The haʃiz Abū Ya'la stated that Muḥammad b. Abū Bakr al-Muqaddamī related to him, quoting Sālim b. Qutayba, from al-Ḥusayn b. Hurayth, from Ya'la b. ʿAlī, from al-Walid b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān, from Umm Ayman, who said, "The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had a pottery bowl into which he would urinate. When morning came, he would call out, 'Umm Ayman, pour out the contents of the pot.' One night I got up feeling thirsty and drank what it contained. And when the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) called out, 'Umm Ayman, pour out the contents of the pot,' I replied, 'Messenger of God, I got up feeling thirsty and drank what was in it!' He commented, 'You'll never suffer from your stomach!'"

Ibn al-Athīr stated in his work al-Ghaba, "Ḥajjaj b. Muḥammad narrated from Ibn Jurayj, from Jakima, daughter of Umayma, who quoted her mother Umayma, daughter of Raqiqa, as having said, "The Prophet (ṢAAS) had a wooden bowl into which he would urinate and then place beneath his bed. A woman named Baraka came one day and drank it. He asked where it was, being unable to find it, and he was told, 'Baraka drank it!' He stated, 'She is kept out of hell-fire by a screen!'"

He differentiated between the two women. But God knows best.

Ibn al-Athīr stated in his work al-Ghaba, "Ulayka, daughter of al-Kumayt narrated her ḥadīth from her grandmother, from Khulaysa, the freed-woman of Zam'a. This refers to the right of the manumitted slave to inherit from the freed-man in the absence of heirs. and their joking with her that al-Dajjal had come forth. And so she hid in a house where they would light a fire and laugh together. The Messenger of God (SAAS) arrived and asked, ‘What are you two up to?’ they told him about what had happened with Sawda, and he went over to her and she asked, ‘Messenger of God, has al-Dajjal really come forth?’ He replied, ‘No; though it is as though he had.’ And so she emerged, brushing spiders’ eggs from herself.”

Ibn al-Athir mentioned Khulaysa, the freed-woman of Salmān al-Farisi, saying, “Reference is made to her regarding the acceptance of Islam by Salmān al-Farisi, how his mistress manumitted him and the Messenger of God (SAAS) compensated her by planting 300 palm seedlings. She mentioned this as a matter of distinction.”

They also include Khawla, the servant of the Prophet (SAAS); Ibn al-Athir mentions her.

The ḥāfīz Abū Nu‘aym narrates her ḥadīth on a line of transmission through Ḥaṣb b. Sa‘īd al-Qurashi, from his mother, from her mother Khawla, who was the servant of the Messenger of God (SAAS). He presented her ḥadīth on the subject of the interruption in the revelation due to a puppy dog having died beneath the bed of the Prophet (SAAS), without anyone having been aware of this. When they took it away, the revelation returned, and the words of Almighty God were revealed, “By the early morning and the night when it becomes dark!” (ṣūrat al-Ḍuḥā; XCIII, v.1, 2).

This is strange; it is well known that the reason for the revelation of this is quite different. But God knows best.

They include Razīna. Ibn ʿAsākir stated, “In fact she belonged to Ṣafīyya, daughter of Ḥuyayy, and also served the Prophet (SAAS).”

I note that it has been stated above regarding her daughter Amāt Allah that the Prophet (SAAS) gave her mother Razīna to Ṣafīyya, daughter of Ḥuyayy, as her dowry. In this case, she must originally have belonged to him.

The ḥāfīz Abū Ta‘lā stated that Abū Sa‘īd al-Jushamī related to him, quoting ʿUlayka, daughter of al-Kumayt, quoting her mother Aminā, who quoted Amāt Allah, daughter of Razīna, the freed-woman of the Messenger of God (SAAS), as having stated that the latter took Ṣafīyya captive at the battles in which God gave victory against Bānū Qurayza and Bānū al-Nadr. He led her in as a captive. When she saw the women, she called out, “I testify that there is not god but God, and that you are the Messenger of God!” He then released her, having been holding her by the arm, and manumitted her. Later he proposed marriage to her, married her and gave her Razīna as her dowry.

This is the sequence of events as given in this text which is better than that previously presented from the account of Ibn Abū ʿĀṣim.

189. Al-Dajjal, “the imposter”, or al-masīḥ al-dajjal “the anti-Christ”, the Arabic word thought to be derived from Aramaic and Syriac, refers to a figure variously mentioned in the ḥadīth literature, though not in the Qurʾān. See the entry under al-Dadhījīl in the Encyclopaedia of Islam.
However, the truth is that the Prophet (SAAS), selected Safiyya from the booty taken at Khaybar and that he made her manumission her dowry. The reference in this hadith to this having happened at the battles against Banū Qurayza and Banū al-Naḍīr is nonsensical; there was a period of two years between these two engagements. But God knows best.

The ḥāṣiṣ Abū Bakr al-Bayhaqī stated in his work Dalā’il that Ibn 'Abdān informed him, quoting Aḥmad b. Ubayd al-Ṣaffār, quoting ʿAlī b. al-Ḥasan al-Sukari, quoting Ubayd Allāh b. ʿUmar al-Qawārizi, quoting ʿUlayka, daughter of al-Kumayt al-ʿAtkiyya, who quoted her mother Amina as having said, "I asked Amat Allāh, daughter of Razīna, the freed-woman of the Messenger of God (SAAS), 'Amat Allāh, did you ever hear your mother relate that she heard the Messenger of God (SAAS) mention the fast of 'Ashūra'?"190 She replied, 'Yes; he venerated it highly. He would call that day for his suckling infants and those of his daughter Fāṭima. He would spit into their mouths and tell their mothers, 'Do not suckle them until night.'"

There is testimony to this in the saḥiḥ collections. They also included Raḍwā. Ibn al-ʿAṭīr stated that Saʿīd b. Bashir narrated, from Qatada, who would quote Raḍwā, daughter of Ka'b, as having said that she asked the Messenger of God (SAAS) about menstruation causing staining. He replied, "There's no harm in that."

Abū Muṣā al-Madīnī narrated this.

(Regarding) Rāyḥāna, of Banū Qurayza, though some say of Banū al-Naḍīr, daughter of Shamʿūn, reference is made to her above, following the section dealing with the wives, may God be pleased with them, of the Messenger of God (SAAS).

They also include Zarrīna, referred to above under the correct spelling "Razīna". Sāʾiba, freed-woman of the Messenger of God (SAAS), is included among them.

She narrated from the Messenger of God (SAAS) a ḥadīth relating to things found. Tāriq b. ʿAbd al-ʿRahmān quoted her. It was Abū Muṣā al-Madīnī who narrated it; Ibn al-ʿAṭīr gives it thus in his work al-Ghaba. Sadīsa al-ʾAṣṣāriyya is one of them. She is said to have been a freed-woman of Ḥafṣa, daughter of ʿUmar.

She quoted the Prophet (SAAS) as having said, "Satan has bowed down before ʿUmar every time he met him since ʿUmar accepted Islam."

Ibn al-ʿAṭīr stated that ʿAbd al-ʿRahmān b. al-Faḍl b. al-Muwaffaq quoted from his father, from Ḥārūn, from ʿAlī, from ʿAskārī, from Saʿīd b. ʿAbd Allāh, from ʿAlī and ʿAskārī, from ʿAskārī and ʿAskārī. It was Yasar who narrated it from al-Faḍl. He gave it from Sadīsa, from Ḥafṣa, from the Prophet (SAAS).

Abū Nuʿaym narrated this, as did Ibn Manda.

190. A "voluntary" fast observed on the 10th of Muḥarram, from sunset to sunset. In shīʿa practice, the day is associated with the death of al-Ḥusayn b. ʿAlī, and the occasion of pilgrimage to sacred shrines.
They also include Sallâma, the wet-nurse for Ibrahim, the son of the Messenger of God (SAAS).

She narrated from him a statement he made on the virtues of pregnancy, divorce, the foster-relationship and remaining awake. The hadith has objectionable aspects both to its line of transmission and to its content.

Abû Nu'aym and Ibn Manda narrated it, from a hadith of Hishâm b. 'Amâr b. Nuṣâyry, the orator of Damascus, from his father 'Amr b. Sa'd al-Khawlânî, from Anas, who quoted Salâma. Ibn al-Athîr gave it.

Salma was also one of them. She was the mother of Râfî', and the wife of Abû Râfî', as al-Wâqîdî narrated, quoting her as having said, “I used to serve the Messenger of God (SAAS), as did Khâdra, Radwâ and Maymûna, daughter of Sa'd. The Messenger of God (SAAS) manumitted us all.”

Imâm Aḥmad stated that Abû ʿAmîr and Abû Sa'id, the freed-man of Banû Hashim, related to him, quoting 'Abd al-Ra'âma b. Abû al-Mawâlî, from Fâ'îd, the freed-man of Ibn Abû Râfî', from his grandmother Salma, the servant of the Prophet (SAAS), who said, ‘Whenever I heard anyone complain to the Messenger of God (SAAS) about a headache, he inevitably responded, ‘Have your blood cupped.’ When the complaint related to the person’s legs, he would say, ‘Dye them with hânnâ.’”

Abû Da'ud narrated it thus from a hadith of Ibn Abû al-Mawâlî. Al-Tîrmidhî and Ibn Mâja gave it from a hadith of Zayd b. al-Hubâb, both of them quoting from Fâ'îd, from his freed-man Ubayd Allâh b. ʿAli b. Abû Râfî', from his grandmother Salma.

Al-Tîrmidhî stated, “(This hadith) is gharîb, but we do recognize it from a hadith of Fâ'îd.”

She narrated a number of ahûdith quoting the Messenger of God (SAAS), too many to give and examine here.

Muṣâb al-Zubâyryî stated, “Salma was present at the battle of Hunayn.”

I note that it is said that she would cook harîra, a milk and flour soup, for the Prophet (SAAS), that he greatly enjoyed.

She lived on until after his death and was present at the death of Fatîma, may God be pleased with her. She had first belonged to Ṣâfiyya, daughter of ʿAbd al-Muṭṭalib, the aunt of the Prophet (SAAS), to whom she went thereafter. It was she who acted as midwife at the births of Fatîma’s children and at the birth of Ibrahim, the son of the Messenger of God (SAAS). She was present at and participated with ʿAli b. Abû Ṭâlîb in the pre-burial washing of the latter’s wife, Fatîma, along with Asmâ’, daughter of ʿUmays, the wife of Abû Bakr.

Imâm Aḥmad stated that Abû al-Nâḍr related to him, quoting Ibrahim b. Sa'd, from Muhammad b. Ḳhâq, from Ubayd Allâh b. ʿAli b. Abû Râfî', from Salma, who said, “Fatîma suffered greatly in the illness from which she died, and I would nurse her.”

191. “Henna” the orange-red dye produced from the foliage of the plant of that name, still widely used as a cosmetic.
One morning Salmā went to her as usual during her illness. She said, “‘Ali went out on some business of his and Fāṭima said to me, ‘yā ammah! ‘Maid!’ Pour me some water to wash.’

“I poured her some and she washed herself more thoroughly than I had ever seen her do before. She then said, ‘yā ammah, hand me my new clothes.’ And she put them on. She then said, ‘yā ammah, put my bed in the centre of the house.’ I did so. She lay down on it, facing towards the ka‘ba, placed her hand beneath her cheek and said, ‘yā ammah, I am dying now. I have cleansed myself and so no one should uncover me.’ And she died right there. When ‘Ali came, I told him.”

This (hadith) is very gharib, strange.

Shirīn was also one of them. She was also called Shīrin. She was the sister of Māriya the Copt and was therefore the aunt of Ibrāhīm, may peace be upon him. We have explained above how the muqawkis, the Governor of Alexandria, whose name was Jurayj b. Minā had presented her along with a slave named Mābūr and a mule named al-Dudul. The Messenger of God (SAAS) gave her to Hāssan b. Thābit and she bore him his son ‘Abd al-Rahmān.

‘They also included ‘Unqūdā al-‘Abbāsiyya, mother of Malik. She was a servant girl belonging to ‘A’isha. Her early name was ‘Inba, “a grape”, and the Messenger of God (SAAS) renamed her ‘Unqūdā, “bunch of grapes”.

‘Abū Nu‘aym narrated this. Her name is also given as “Ghafīra”.

Also there was Farwa, the wet-nurse of the Prophet (SAAS). She stated that the Messenger of God (SAAS) said to her, ‘When you go to bed, recite, ‘Say: “0 you unbelievers” (ṣūrat al-Kāfirūn; CIX, v.1). It will keep you free from unbelief.”

‘Abū Alḥāmid made reference to her. This is stated by Ibn al-Athīr in his work al-Ghāba.

Fīḍa al-Nūbiyya is mentioned by Ibn al-Athīr in al-Ghāba as having been a freed-woman of Fāṭima, the daughter of the Messenger of God (SAAS). He then gave, through an indistinct line of transmission, from Maḥbūb b. Ḥumayd al-Baṣrī, from al-Qāsim b. Bahrām, from Layth, from Mujahid, material from Ibn ‘Abbās, regarding the statement of the Almighty, “And they donate for love of Him food to the poor, to orphans and to captives”(ṣūrat al-Insān or al-Dahr; LXXVII, v.8). He went on to relate, in essence, that al-Hasan and al-Ḥusayn fell ill and were visited by the Messenger of God (SAAS), and by the general public. They asked ‘Ali, “To what would it be, if you were to swear a resolution?” ‘Ali said, “If they recover from what ails them both, I will offer God three days of fasting.” Fāṭima said the same, and so did Fīḍa.

God did cure them both, and they fasted. Then ‘Ali went and borrowed from Sham‘ūn al-Khaybarī three sā‘ weight of barley. That night they prepared one sā‘ of it to eat. As they were about to eat it for their evening meal, there was a beggar standing at their door who asked, “Feed the poor! May God feed you at the tables of paradise!” ‘Ali gave orders and they fed him, themselves not eating. The third night they prepared the second sā‘ of barley and when they had it ready before them stood a beggar, who said, “Feed the orphan!” And so they fed him, themselves not eating. The third night he asked, “Feed the captive!” And so they fed him, themselves not eating.

And so God sent down regarding them, “Surely there came for man a period of time” to “We desire from you neither reward nor thanks” (surat al-Insān; V, v.1–9).

This hadith is objectionable. Some of the imāms consider it fabricated, basing their views on the weakness of its phraseology. They also note that this surat was revealed in Mecca, whereas al-Ḥasan and al-Ḥusayn were born in Medina. But God knows best.

Also there was Laylā, ʿAʾisha’s freed-woman. She (is reported to have) said, “O Prophet of God, when you return from the wasteland (after defecation) and I go there after you, I never see anything; all I sense is the odor of musk.” He replied, “The bodies of us prophets grow on the souls of the people of paradise; whatever filth comes forth from us the earth swallows up.”

Abū Nuʿaym quoted her as having said this, from a hadith of Abu ʿAbd Allāh al-Madani – he being an unidentified source.

Māriya al-Qubṭiyā, the mother of Ibrāhīm, was one of them; she has been considered above among “the mothers of the Believers”.192 Ibn al-Athir made a distinction between her and Māriya Umm al-Rabbāb. He stated that she was also a servant of the Prophet (ṢAAS).

She is credited by the scholars of Baṣrā with a hadith narrated by ʿAbd Allāh b. Ḥabīb, from Umm Salmā, from her mother, who quoted her grandmother Māriya as having said, “I bent over so that the Prophet (ṢAAS) could stand on me to get over a wall when he fled from the polytheists.”

He went on, “Māriya was a servant of the Prophet (ṢAAS).” And Abū Bakr narrated, from Ibn ʿAbbās, from al-Muthannā b. ʿAlī, who quoted his grandmother Māriya, who had been a servant of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), as having said, “My hand never touched anything more smooth than the palm of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).”

Abū Umar b. ʿAbd al-Barr stated in his work al-Isrāʾīl, stated, “I do not know whether she (this Māriya) is the same one as mentioned before, or not.” They also include Maymūna, daughter of Saʿd.

Imām Aḥmad stated that ʿAlī b. Bahr related to him, quoting ʿĪsā – he being Ibn Yūṣuf – quoting Thawr – he being Ibn Yazīd – from Ziyād b. Abū Sawda, from his brother, that Maymūna, the freed-woman of the Prophet (ṢAAS), asked, “Furnish us with information about Jerusalem.”

He replied, “(It is) the land of both al-manshar and al-mahshar, ‘the dispersal and the in-gathering’. Go there and pray therein; a prayer there is as a thousand prayers (elsewhere).”

She asked, “What do you think of someone not being able to withstand the strain of being borne there, or of making his way there?” He replied, “Then let 192. The title, of course, given to the acknowledged wives of the Prophet (ṢAAS).

him have oil for lamps taken there. For anyone who presents a gift for it is as one who prays there."

Ibn Māja narrated it thus, from Ismā'īl b. 'Abd Allāh al-Raqī, from Ṭisā b. Yūnus, from Thawr, from Ziyād, from his brother Ṭūhān b. Abū Sawda, from Maymūna, the freed-woman of the Prophet (ṢAAS).

Abū Dā'ūd narrated it from al-Faḍl b. Miskīn b. Bukayr, from Sa'd b. Ṭabī' b. ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz, from Thawr, from Ziyād, from Maymūna, without any mention of Ziyād’s brother. But God knows best.

Aḥmad stated that Ḥusayn and Abū Nuʿaym both related to him, quoting Isrāʾīl, from Zayd b. Jūbayr, from Abū Yazīd al-Dabbī, from Maymūna, daughter of Saʿd, the freed-woman of the Prophet (ṢAAS), who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was asked about a child born as the result of fornication. He replied, ‘There will be no good in him; I would prefer a pair of shoes I might use hard in God’s cause to manumitting a child of fornication!’”

Al-Nasāʾī narrated it thus from ʿAbbas al-Dūrī and Ibn Māja, from a ḥadīth of Abū Bakr b. Abī Shayba. He stated, “We know this only from his ḥadīth.” He categorized him as a weak source for ḥadīth. Others also quote him for it, but without full lines of transmission.

Also among them was Maymūna, daughter of Abī Ābās – or the name is "Abī Ānbasā". Abū ʿAbd Allāh al-Munṣīrī gave a ḥadīth from Rabiʿa, daughter of Marthad, who lived among Bani Qurayṣ, from Munabbih, from Maymūna, daughter of Abū ʿAbd Allāh al-Munṣīrī, who was known as the daughter of Abū ʿAbd Allāh al-Munṣīrī, the freed-woman of the Prophet (ṢAAS). She stated that a woman of Huraysh came to the Prophet (ṢAAS), and called out, “ʿAʾisha, help me out with some prayer from the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), with which you can provide me contentment and tranquillity.” She replied to her, “Place your right hand over your heart, rub it and say, ‘In the name of God. O God, cure me by your cure, heal me by your healing and by Your grace let me dispense with all others.’”

Rabiʿa went on, “I did use this prayer and found it excellent.”

Also among them was Umm ʿUmayrā, the wife of Abū ʿUmayrā. Reference has been made to them both hereabove; may God be pleased with them both.
Umm 'Ayyash was also among them. The Messenger of God (SAAS) sent her along with his daughter to serve her after he had arranged her marriage to 'Uthmān b. ʿAffān.

Abū al-Qāsim al-Baghawi stated that ʿIkrima related to him, quoting ʿAbd al-Waṭṭād b. ʿAṣwān, quoting Abu ʿAṣwān, from his father, from his grandmother Umm 'Ayyash—who had been the servant of the Prophet (SAAS), that the latter sent her along with his daughter to 'Uthmān. She said, “I would press out dates for ʿUthman in the morning and he would drink it in the evening. In the evening I would press grapes that he would drink in the morning. One day he asked me, 'Do you mix anything into it?' ‘Yes,’ I replied. ‘Don't do that again,’ he told me.”

These, then, were his women servants, may God be pleased with them all.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Wāki related to him, quoting al-Qāsim b. al-Faḍl, quoting Thumāna b. Ḥāzūn, who said, “I asked ʿAʾishah about al-nabidh wine. She replied, “This is the servant of the Messenger of God, ask her.” She was referring to an Abyssinian servant woman. She said, “I would press grapes into a waterskin in the evening and tie it closed. Next morning he would drink from it.”

Muslim and al-Nasāʾī narrated this from a ḥadīth of al-Qāsim b. al-Faḍl.

The authorities on the sayings of the Prophet (SAAS), include this in those attributed to ʿAʾishah. However, it would be more appropriate to refer to it in a collection devoted to the sayings from an Abyssinian slave-woman who was a servant of the Prophet (SAAS). She was either one of those to whom we have made mention above, or else she was a person in addition to them.

Chapter: On those of the Companions of the Messenger of God (SAAS), who acted as his servants, but who were not freed-men.

He served the Messenger of God (SAAS), throughout the length of his ten-year residence in Medina. The latter never criticized him for anything. He never asked him why he had done something, nor why he had not done something.

His mother was Umm Sulaym, daughter of Milḥān b. Khālid b. Zayd b. Ḥarām. It was she who presented him to the Messenger of God (SAAS), who received him kindly. She asked him to say a prayer for him, and he responded, “O God, increase his wealth, grant him children, give him long life and admit him to paradise.”

193. Unfermented grape-juice; the Companions were interested to know from the Prophet how long it could be stored and remain permissible for their consumption.
Anas stated, “I did see two of these and I await the third. I swear by God, I have much wealth and my children and grandchildren approach 100 in number.”

In one account he is quoted as having said, “My vineyard bears fruit twice a year. And my progeny totals 106 children.”

There are differences of opinion over whether or not he was present at the battle of Badr. An Anṣārī narrated from his father who quoted Thumāma as having said that Anas was asked whether he had been present at Badr, and that he replied, “Where else would I have been than at Badr, may you lose your mother!”

However, it is widely accepted that he did not attend either the battles of Badr or Uhud, due to his youth. He did not participate in the events of al-Ḥudaybiyya, Khaybar, the ‘umrat al-qaḍā, the conquest of Mecca, Ḥunayn, al-Ṭā’if and those subsequent.

Abū Hurayra stated, “I never saw anyone perform prayer more like that of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) than the son of Umm Salim” — meaning Anas b. Mālik.

Ibn Sirin stated, “He performed the prayer better than anyone else, whether travelling or at home.”

He died at Başra, the last of the Companions to survive there, according to ʿAlī b. al-Madini. His death was in 90 AH. Others give that date as 91, 92 or 93 AH. The first date given is the one most widely and fully accepted.

Regarding his age at his death, Imām Aḥmad stated in his compendium of ahadith attributed to him, “Muʿāṭirib. Sulaymān related to us, from Ḥamīd, that Anas lived to 100 minus 1 year.”

The least figure given is 96 years. The highest are 107, 106 and 103 years. God knows best.

They also included al-Aslām b. Sharīk b. ʿAwf b. Aʿraji. Muhammad b. Saʿd stated, “His name was Maymūn b. Sinbadh. Al-Rabīʿ b. Badr al-Aʿraji stated, from his father, from his grandfather, who quoted al-Aslām as having said, ‘I used to be a servant of the Prophet and journey with him. One night he told me, “Aslām, get up and prepare to travel.” I replied, “Messenger of God, I have experienced a major ritual impurity.”’ He was quiet a while, and Gabriel brought him the āyat al-ṣaʿidūn (ṣūrat al-Nisā'; IV, v.43), and he said, “Aslām, get up and cleanse yourself with sand.” I wiped myself and prayed. When I reached water, he told me, “Aslām, off you go and wash yourself.” He showed me how to clean using sand or earth. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) plunged his hands into the earth and then shook them and used them to wipe both arms.

194. That is, having engaged in sexual intercourse, or having experienced, as in this case, a nocturnal ejaculation, one is under an obligation to perform a total ablution.

195. The verse allows the use of clean earth or sand for self-purification in the absence of water for those for whom a total ablution was necessary. The verse is so named because it includes the words fatayammamū ṣā`idūn ṣayyibān, “make your way to high ground”, to dust, sand or earth.
the right hand wiping the left, the left the right, on both their upper and lower sides.’

‘Al-Rabi’ went on, ‘My father showed me, as had his father him, as al-Asla’had him, as the Messenger of God (SAAS) had shown him.’

‘Al-Rabi’ also stated, ‘I related this hadith to ‘Awf b. Abü Jamila, who said, “I swear by God, that is what I saw al-Hasan do!”’

Ibn Manda and al-Baghawi narrated this in their book Mu’jam al-Sahaba, from a hadith of this al-Rabi’ b. Badr. Al-Baghawi stated, “I do not know of anyone else who narrated it.”

Ibn Asakir stated that al-Haytham b. Ruzayq al-Maliki al-Mudlij narrated this hadith, from his father, from al-Asla’h. Sharik.

Asma’ b. Ḥāritha b. Sa’d b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAbbād b. Sa’d b. ʿAmr b. ʿAmir b. Thaʿlab b. Malik b. Aqṣā al-Aslami was also one of them. He was from al-Ṣuffa, according to Muḥammad b. Sa’d.

He was the brother of Hind b. Ḥāritha; they both served the Prophet (SAAS).

Imām Aḥmad stated that ʿAffān related to him, quoting Wahib, quoting ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. Ḥarmala, from Yahya b. Hind b. Ḥāritha. Hind was a Companion who had been present at al-Ḥudaybiyya. It was Hind’s brother Asma’ b. Ḥāritha whom the Messenger of God (SAAS) had sent to his people with orders to fast the day of al-ʿaṣhra.

Imām Aḥmad went on to state that Yahyā b. Hind related to him, from Asma’ b. Ḥāritha, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) had sent him (Hind) to him and said, “Tell your people to fast today.” Asma’ asked, “But what if I found they have already eaten?” “Then they should fast the rest of the day,” he replied.

Aḥmad b. Khalīd al-Dhahabi narrated it from Muḥammad b. Ishāq, quoting ʿAbd Allāh b. Abū Bakr, from Ḥabib b. Hind b. Asma’ al-Aslami, from his father Hind, who said, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) sent me to Aslam’s people. I told them, ‘Tell your people to fast today; those you find to have eaten already should fast for the remainder of the day.’”

Muḥammad b. Sa’d stated that al-Waqidi quoted Muḥammad b. Nuʿaym b. ʿAbd Allāh al-Mujammir, who quoted his father as having said, “I heard Abū Hurayra say, ‘I used to think of Hind and Asma’, the sons of Ḥāritha, as merely two mamlūkīs’” owned by the Messenger of God (SAAS).”

Al-Waqidi stated, “These two men, along with Anas b. Malik were servants of his and never left his door.”

Muḥammad b. Sa’d stated that Asma’ b. Ḥāritha died in 66 AH in al-ṣaṣra, at the age of 80.

Bukayr b. al-Ṣaṣrakh was among them.

196. The word mamlūk, literally “person owned”, “slave”, is a term not elsewhere used in this work to apply to any of the servants or freed-persons to whom reference is made. The term was, of course, used to refer to the dynasty that later ruled Egypt for several centuries and to those functionaries, often of high rank, who were acquired for high service in the military and the bureaucracy under the Ottomans.
Ibn Manda stated, quoting from a line of transmission through Abu Bakr al-Hudhali, from 'Abd al-Malik b. Ya'la al-Laythi, who said that Bukayr b. Shaddakh al-Laythi was a servant of the Prophet (SAAS). When he attained puberty, the Messenger of God (SAAS) was aware of that. Bukayr said, “I have been going in to your household. But I have now attained puberty, Messenger of God.” The latter replied, “O God, (put) trust in his word and grant him success!”

(Ibn Manda went on) “During the rule of Umar, a Jew was killed. Umar stood to make an address and said, ‘I adjure you by God, does any man of you have knowledge of that?’ Bukayr arose and said, ‘I killed him, Commander of the Believers!’ Umar asked, ‘And what solution do you have, now that you have spilled his blood?’

“He replied, ‘Commander of the Believers, a certain warrior left me in charge of his family and I discovered that Jew with his wife. He was reciting:

‘Ashath was diverted away from me by Islam; I was left alone with his bride on the consummation night.
I sleep upon her breast bones, while he spends the night on dusty harnesses.
Her inner thighs are as though up and ready for all and sundry!’”

“Umar believed what he said and judged the blood of the Jew to have been shed without need for him to be avenged, in light of the prayer of the Messenger of God (SAAS) for (the truthfulness of) Bukayr, as given above.”

They also include Bilal b. Rabah al-Habashi.

Born in Mecca, he had been the freed-man of Umayya b. Khalaf. Abu Bakr purchased him from him for a substantial sum because Umayya was severely persecuting Bilal to persuade him to give up Islam. Bilal, however, may God be pleased with him, insisted on remaining a Muslim. When Abu Bakr purchased Bilal, he set him free as an act of homage to God. He went out on the Hijra with the others and participated in the battles of Badr, Uhud and later engagements.

He was known as Bilal, son of Hamama, who was his mother. He was one of the most eloquent of men; he did not, as some believe, mispronounce the letter sin as shin, despite the fact that some relate a groundless hadith from the Messenger of God (SAAS), to that effect.

He was one of the four persons who made the call to prayer, as will be explained. Moreover, he was the first to ever make the call, as we have narrated above. He was in charge of the expenses for the children and the sum of the wealth (for distribution) was in his possession.

Following the death of the Messenger of God (SAAS), he was one of those who went on the military expeditions against Syria. It is also said, however, that he stayed behind and acted as the mu'azzin for Abu Bakr throughout his caliphate. The first of these two possibilities is the better and is more widely accepted.
AI-Waqidi stated that he died in Damascus in 20 AH, at some 60 years of age. Al-Fallas stated that his grave is in Damascus. Others say it is at Dāriyā. Alternatively, he is said to have died in Aleppo; the truth, however, is that it was his brother Khalid who died in Aleppo.

Makhūl stated, "Someone who had seen Bilāl described him to me as of very dark skin, lean and hump-backed, and with thick hair, the grey of which he did not dye. May God be pleased with him."

Habba and Sawa', sons of Khalid, were also among them; may God be pleased with them both.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Abū Muḥāwiya related to him, quoting Wāki', quoting al-Aʿmash, from Sallām b. Shuraibīl, who quoted Habba and Sawa' as having said, "We once went in to the Prophet (SAAS), while he was mending something, and we helped him. He then told us, ‘Never despair of provision (from God), so long as your heads have movement. Man is born of his mother skinless, with no outer covering, and then God, the Almighty and Glorious, provides it for him.’"

Dhū Mikhmar was also one of them; he is also named as Dhū Mikhbar. He was the son of the brother of the Negus, the king of Abyssinia; others say he was his sister’s son. The first possibility is correct. The king sent him to serve the Messenger of God (SAAS), as a substitute for himself.

Imām Aḥmad stated that Abū al-Naqr related to him, quoting Jarir, from Yazīd b. Sulayḥ, who quoted Dhū Mikhmar, a man from Abyssinia who served the Prophet (SAAS), as having said, "We were with him on a journey. He made a rapid departure; this he would do because of the paucity of the provisions. Someone told him, ‘Messenger of God, the rest have been left behind.’ He told us all to stop until they caught up. He then asked them, (or someone asked him) ‘Would you like to have a stop for sleep?’ He dismounted, and they did the same. People asked, ‘Who will stand guard for us tonight?’ ‘I will, my God make me your ransom!’ I replied. He handed me the bridle of his camel, saying, ‘Take it then, and don’t be negligent.’

“So I took the bridle of the camel of the Messenger of God (SAAS), and that of my own camel and led them a little way away. There I released them to graze. I was observing them when sleep overcame me. The next thing I knew was the sun’s heat on my face. I woke up and looked to right and left and there were the two camels, not far away from me. I took the bridle of the camel of the Messenger of God (SAAS), and that of my own and led them over to the closest of our people. I woke him up, and asked, ‘Have you performed the prayer?’ ‘No,’ he replied.

“The rest then woke one another and eventually the Messenger of God (SAAS) awoke. He asked, ‘Bilāl, is there water in the maytfa’a, ‘the ablution water-vessel’?’ He was referring to the idāwa, ‘the water skin’. Bilāl replied, ‘Yes, may God make me your ransom!’ He took the ablution water to him, but it did not cleanse him fully of the dirt. He then gave order to Bilāl, who made the call to prayer. The Messenger of God (SAAS) arose and performed a prayer of two rakā'at before the al-ṣubh prayer, but did not hurry. He then again gave orders to Bilāl and again performed the prayer, but without hurrying. Someone asked him, ‘Messenger of God, have we been neglectful?’ He replied, ‘No; God took away our souls, then restored them to us, and we have prayed.’”

They also included Rabī'a b. Ka'b al-Aslami Abū Firās.

Al-Awza'î stated that Ya'hya b. Abū Kathir related to him, from Rabī'a b. Ka'b, who said, “I would spend the night with the Messenger of God (SAAS), and bring him his water for ablution and whatever he needed. He would get up at one time of the night and say, ‘Glory be to God, and may He be praised!’ Later he would arise again, at another time of the night, and say, ‘Glory be to God, Lord of the two worlds!’ He asked me, ‘Do you have a request?’ I replied, ‘To accompany you in paradise, Messenger of God.’ He replied, ‘Help yourself; by often prostrating in prayer.’”

Imām Aḥmad stated that Ya'qūb b. Ibrāhīm related to him, quoting his father, quoting Muḥammad b. ʿĪsāq, quoting Muḥammad b. ʿĀim b. ʿAbdullāh, from Nūaym b. Muḥammad, from Rabī'a b. Ka'b, who said, “I used to spend my entire day serving the Messenger of God (SAAS), until he would perform the second ʿisha prayer. Then I would sit at his door when he went into his home. I would say, ‘Perhaps something might happen to the Messenger of God (SAAS).’ I would hear him constantly repeating, ‘Glory be to God; may He be praised!’ until I became tired and returned home, or until my eyes overcame me and I fell asleep.

“One day, because of his having observed my fulfilment of my duty and service to him, he said, ‘Rabī'a b. Ka'b, ask me and I will grant it to you.’ I replied, ‘I will consider my situation, Messenger of God, then I will tell you.’

“I gave the matter much thought, realizing that this life is transitory and subject to interruption, and that there was sufficient bounty in what I had and might come to me. So I told him, ‘What I shall ask the Messenger of God will have to do with my life in the hereafter: he does have that (special) status with God.’

“So I went to him and he asked, ‘Have you done it, Rabī'a?’ I replied, ‘Yes, Messenger of God. I’d like to ask you to intercede for me to your Lord and to free me from hell-fire.’ He asked, ‘Who told you to ask for this, Rabī'a?’ I replied, ‘No, I swear by Him who sent you with the truth, no one ordered me. But when you said, ‘Ask me and I’ll give you,’ since you have a (special) status with God, I did look into my situation, realized that this world is subject to interruption and is transitory, and that I do have bounty that will come to me, I said, “I’ll make a request about my after life.”

“The Messenger of God (SAAS), was silent for a long time, and he then told me, ‘I will do something; help yourself, by often prostrating in prayer.’”

The ḥāfiz Abū Ya'āqūb stated that Abū Khaythama related to him, quoting Yazīd b. Hārūn, quoting Mubārak b. Paḍāla, quoting Abū ʿImrān al-Jawnī, from Rabīʿa al-Aslāmi, who had been a servant of the Prophet (ṢAAS), said, “One day the Prophet (ṢAAS) asked me, ‘Rabīʿa, aren’t you going to get married?’ I replied, ‘Messenger of God, I don’t want anything to divert me from serving you. And I don’t have anything to give to a woman.’

“After that I told myself that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) knew more about me than I did myself, and that he was suggesting I get married. I decided that if he repeated the suggestion I would agree. And he did ask me, ‘Rabīʿa, aren’t you going to get married?’ I replied, ‘Messenger of God, who would marry me; I don’t have anything to give the woman?’ He replied, ‘Go to Banū so-and-so and tell them the Messenger of God orders you to marry me to your girl so-and-so.’

“I went to them and said, ‘The Messenger of God has sent me to you for you to arrange my marriage with so-and-so.’ They asked, ‘To so-and-so?’ ‘Yes,’ I replied. They responded, ‘Welcome to the Messenger of God and welcome to his messenger!’ And they did arrange the marriage.

“I returned to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and said, ‘Messenger of God, I come to you from the very best of peoples. They gave me their trust and arranged my marriage. But where do I get the dowry to give?’ The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said to Burayda al-Aslāmi, ‘Collect for Rabīʿa a dowry worth the weight of one ʿnawāṭh of gold.’

“They collected and gave this to me, I took it to Banū so-and-so and they accepted it. I then returned to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and asked him where I would get the food for a wedding feast. He told Burayda, ‘Get for Rabīʿa the price of a ram.’ They brought it and he then told me, ‘Off you go to Āʾisha and ask her to give you what barley she has.’ I went to her and she gave it to me. So I took to Banū so-and-so the ram and the barley and they told me, ‘We’ll look after the barley for you, but ask your friends to slaughter the ram.’ And so they cooked the barley and, I swear to God, we thus had bread and meat.

“After that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) assigned to Abū Bakr some land he had and Abū Bakr and I fell into a dispute over a laden date-palm. I maintained that it was on my land, he that it was on his. We quarrelled and Abū Bakr used a word to me that offended me. He regretted it and came to me, asking, ‘You say to me as I did to you.’ I replied, ‘No, by God, I’ll not speak to you as you did to me!’ ‘Well then,’ he said, ‘I’m going to the Messenger of God.’

“He did go, and I followed him. My people came along as well, saying, ‘He’s the one who used the word to you, yet he’s going off to complain to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS)! I turned to them and asked, ‘Do you know who this man is? This is al-Ṣiddiq, “the trusting”, the dhū shayba” of the Muslims! Go back so that he does not turn and see you and think that you are coming to help me against him. Otherwise he might get angry and go and tell the Messenger of God, and then Rabīʿa will be finished!’

198. A date stone; a measure of weight equal to five dirhams in value.
199. This epithet, dhū shaybat al-muslimin, in English approximating “the Muslims’ revered elder statesman” is commonly applied to Abū Bakr.
“When he reached the Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ), he said, ‘I used against Rabī‘a a word he found offensive. I told him to say it back to me, but he refused.’

“The Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) asked me, ‘Rabī‘a, what’s the problem between you and “the trusting”? I replied, ‘Messenger of God, I swear I’ll not speak to him as he did to me.’ He told me, ‘Don’t speak to him as he did to you. Say instead, “May God forgive you, Abu Bakr.”’"

Sa‘d, the freed-man of Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him, was also one of them. He is also known as the mawla, the “freed-man” of the Prophet (ṣaḥīḥ).

Abū Dā‘ūd al-Ṭayalīṣī stated that Abū Āmir related to him, from al-Ḥasan, from Sa‘d, the freed-man of Abū Bakr, who said that the Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) told Abū Bakr to set Sa‘d free – Sa‘d being then a mamlūk, a “slave”, owned by Abū Bakr. The Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) had been highly impressed by Sa‘d’s qualities as a servant. Abū Bakr replied, “He is the only servant we have here.” The Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) told him, “Free Sa‘d; (other) men will come to you. (Other) men will come to you.”

Aḥmad related it thus from Abū Dā‘ūd al-Ṭayalīṣī.

Abū Dā‘ūd al-Ṭayalīṣī also stated that Abū Āmir related to him from al-Ḥasan, from Sa‘d, who said, “I placed some dates before the Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ), and people began eating them two at a time. The Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) then forbade them from doing this.”

Ibn Māja narrated this from Bandār, from Abū Dā‘ūd.

They also include ‘Abd Allāh b. Rawaṭa. On the day of the ūmrat al-qa‘a‘ he entered Mecca leading the camel of the Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ), reciting:

“Unbelievers, clear out of his path; today we will fight you about its interpretation
As we fought you over its revelation . . .”

We have narrated this at length above.200

‘Abd Allāh b. Rawaṭa was killed some months thereafter at the battle of Mu‘a‘a, as also narrated above.

‘Abd Allāh b. Mas‘ūd b. Ḥaḍīr b. Ḥabīb b. Shamakh, Abū ʿAbd al-Raḥmān al-Hudhail was also one of them.

He was one of the imams of the Companions. He participated in both of the Hijras and took part in Badr and engagements thereafter. He was in charge of the footwear of the Prophet (ṣaḥīḥ), and of cleaning it. He would also load his baggage camel if he wished to ride.

He had a major role in interpreting God’s words; he had great knowledge, virtue and wisdom. There is a hadith to the effect that the Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) told his Companions, after they had expressed surprise at the thinness of his legs, “By Him who holds my soul in His hands, they weigh more heavily in the scales than does Uḥud!”

'Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb stated about Ibn Mas'ūd, “He was a storehouse filled with learning.” They say he was frail in form, fine in character. It is said that when he walked, he would be face to face with those seated (in stature, that is). He was like the Prophet (ṣaḥīḥ) in his manner, conduct and behaviour.

This means that he was like the Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) in his movements and when at rest, as well as in his speech. He imitated his performance of the prayer to the best of his ability.

He died during the rule of 'Uthmān, in 32 or 33 AH in Medina, at the age of 63. It is also said that he died in Kūfah; the first is correct.

'Uqba b. ʿAmir al-Juhani, may God be pleased with him, was also one of them.

Imām Aḥmad stated that al-Walīd b. Muslim related to him, quoting Ibn Jābir, from al-Qāsim Abū ʿAbd al-Raḥmān, from 'Uqba b. ʿAmir, who said, “I was leading the Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) along a mountain trail when he asked me, ‘Uqba, won’t you ride?’ I was not to be disobedient. The Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) dismounted and I rode for a while. Then he rode again and said, ‘Uqba, would you like me to teach you how to repeat the two finest sūras people ever recited?’ I replied, ‘Yes indeed, Messenger of God.’ And so he recited to me, ‘Say: ‘I seek refuge with the Lord of the dawn’’ (ṣūrat al-Falaq; CXIII,v.1), and ‘Say: ‘I seek refuge with the Lord of mankind’’ (ṣūrat al-Nāṣr; CXIV, v.1).

“The prayer was held and the Messenger of God (ṣaḥīḥ) came forward and recited both sūras. He then passed by me and said, ‘Recite them both whenever you go to sleep and whenever you get up.’”

Qays b. Saʿd b. Ubada al-Anṣārī al-Khazrajī was also among them.

Al-Bukhārī quoted Anas as having said that Qays b. Saʿd b. Ubada had the same role with the Prophet (ṣaḥīḥ), as does the sāhib al-shurāt, “the police chief”, to the amīr, “the ruler”.

This Qays was an exceptionally tall man. His beard was scarce. It is said that the tallest of men if standing with his feet on the ground would have Qays’s trousers reach up to his nose!

Muʿawiyah dispatched his trousers to the emperor of Byzantium asking whether they had a man tall enough to wear them. The emperor was amazed at this.

It is related that he was a praiseworthy and noble man of sound judgement and intelligence. He was with ʿAlī b. Abū Ṭalib at the battle of Siffin.

201. The Arabic word is kawsaj. A footnote to the Arabic printed text gives its meaning as referring to a person who has missing teeth. However, the word may also refer to someone whose beard is scarce.
Mis‘ar stated, quoting Ma‘bad b. Khālid, that he was always holding up his finger giving praise and prayer to God. May God be pleased with him and give him pleasure.

Al-Waqqāḍ, Khalīfa b. Khayyāt and others said that he died at Medina in the last days of Mu‘āwiyah.

The ḥāfīz Abū Bakr al-Bazzār stated that ‘Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb al-Sijistānī related to him, quoting ‘Alī b. Yazīd al-Hanafi, quoting Sa‘īd b. al-Ṣa‘l, from al-A‘mash, from Abū Sufyān, from Anas, who said, “There were 20 young ansāris who would keep close by the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), to take care of his needs; if he wanted something, he would send them after it.”

They also included al-Mughīrā b. Shu‘ba al-Thaqāfī, may God be pleased with him. He performed the function of ṣalāḥdār, “armourer” for the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). It was he, moreover, who held the sword raised above the head of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), in the tent at al-Ḥudaybiyya. Whenever Mughīrā’s uncle Urwa b. Mas‘ūd al-Thaqāfī, who had come in the delegation, would reach out to take hold of the beard of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), as it was customary for the Arabs to do in such conversations, al-Mughīrā would tap his hand with the hilt of his sword and say, “Remove your hand from the face of the Messenger of God, or you’ll never get it back!”

The ḥadīth is so narrated above.\textsuperscript{202}

Muḥammad b. Sa‘d and others stated that he participated in all the battles in which the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) took part. The latter gave joint command to him and to Abū Sufyān when they went out and destroyed the idol belonging to the people of al-Ṭā‘if that was named al-Rabba, “the lady”, al-Lat that is.

He was one of the most shrewd of the Arabs. Al-Sha‘bī stated, “I heard him say, ‘No one ever got the better of me!’”

Al-Sha‘bī stated, “I heard Qaṭ’asha b. Jābir say, ‘I was a companion of al-Mughīrā b. Shu‘ba. If a city had eight gates through none of which one could leave without some trickery, he would find a way to get out through them.’”

Al-Sha‘bī went on, “The al-qudāt, the ‘judges’, were four in number: Abū Bakr, ‘Umar, Ibn Mas‘ūd and Abū Mūsā. The duḥāt, ‘those most shrewd’, were four in number: Mu‘āwiyah, ‘Amr b. al-Ṣa‘l, al-Mughīrā and Ziyād.”

Imām Malik stated, “Al-Mughīrā b. Shu‘ba was a much-married man. He used to say, ‘A man with one wife suffers menstruation along with her, and when she gets sick, so does he. And a man with (only) two wives is right between two blazing fires!’

“He would marry four women at once, and divorce them all together!”

Other sources state variously that he married eighty or three hundred women. It is also said that he married a thousand women.

There is difference of opinion concerning his death. The most likely and most widely believed statement is that given by al-Khaṭīb al-Baghdādi, who gave the consensus as being that he died in 50 AH.

AI-Miqdad b. al-Aswad Abū Ma'bad al-Kindī, an ally of Banū Zuhra, was among them.

Imām Aḥmad stated that ‘Affān related to him, quoting Ḥamād b. Salama, from Thābit, from ‘Abd al-Raḥmān b. Abū Laylā, from al-Miqdad b. al-Aswad, who said, “I and two companions came to Medina. We made our presence known to people, but no one offered us accommodation. So we went to the Prophet (ṢAAS), and told him. He took us to his home, where he had four goats. He told me, ‘Milk them, Miqdad. Divide up their milk in four portions and give one share to each person.’ And that is what I would do.

“One night the Prophet (ṢAAS) was invited elsewhere and was delayed. As I lay in my bed, my inner self told me, ‘The Prophet has gone to the home of one of the āṣār. You might just as well get up and consume the drink.’ The thought persisted until I got up and drank his portion. When it had entered my stomach and settled there, I felt troubled about what had happened. I told myself, ‘The Prophet is now going to arrive hungry and thirsty and he’ll see nothing in the jug!’ So I pulled a cloth up over my face.

“When the Prophet (ṢAAS) arrived, he voiced a greeting that someone awake would hear but would not awaken someone asleep. He uncovered the jug and found nothing. He then raised his head to the sky and said, ‘O God, provide drink for those who give me to drink, and feed those who feed me.’

“I responded to his call, got up, took a sharp knife and went over to the goats. I felt them all to see which one was the one with the most flesh to slaughter. My hand fell upon the udder of one of them and, to my surprise, it was full! I examined the next and it too was full and so too were the others! I drew milk into a jug and took it to him, asking him to drink it. He said, ‘What’s going on, Miqdad?’ ‘Drink up’, I told him, ‘then I’ll tell you.’ ‘One of your pranks, Miqdad?’ he commented. He drank and then said, ‘Now you, drink.’ I replied, ‘No, you drink more, Prophet of God.’ He did so until he had his fill and then I took and drank it. After that I told him what had happened and he told me to tell him more. I told him in greater detail and the Prophet (ṢAAS) then said, ‘This was a blessing sent down from heaven! Could you not have told me so that I could have given some to your two companions?’ I replied, ‘So long as you and I have drunk this blessing, I’m not concerned about whom it has missed!’”

Imām Aḥmad also narrated it from Abū al-Naḍr, from Sulaymān b. al-Mughnā, from Thābit, from ‘Abd al-Raḥmān b. Abū Laylā who quoted al-Miqdad. His account is as above, except that in that version al-Miqdad drew the milk into the vessel they never expected to fill with it, and that he kept on drawing it until it foamed on top. After he brought it back, the Messenger of God (SAAS) asked him (according to that account) “Didn’t you all have your drink tonight, Miqdad?”

(The account proceeds) “I replied, ‘Do drink it, Messenger of God.’ He did so and then handed it to me. I asked, ‘Drink some more, Messenger of God.’ He then again handed it to me, and I took it and drank what remained.

“When I knew that the Messenger of God, had quenched his thirst, and that his prayer had touched upon myself, I laughed so hard I rolled on the ground. The Messenger of God (SAAS) commented, ‘One of your pranks, Miqdad?’”

“I replied, ‘Messenger of God, this is what I did. I did so-and-so.’ He then said, ‘This was nothing but a mercy from God. Should you not have warned me to wake up your two companions to share in it?’ I replied, ‘By Him who sent you with the truth, I don’t care whoever else were to receive it so long as you and I did!’”

Muslim, al-Tirmidhi and al-Nasa’i narrated it from a hadith of Sulaymān b. al-Mughīra. Also among them was Muhājir, the freed-woman of Umm Salama. Al-Ṭabarānī stated that Abū al-Zinbā‘ Rawlī b. al-Parāj related to him, quoting Yahyā b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Bukayr, quoting Ibrāhīm b. ʿAbd Allāh, who stated that he heard Bukayr say, “I heard Muhājir, the freed-woman of Umm Salama, say, ‘I served the Messenger of God (SAAS) for many years. He never asked me why I had done something I had done, nor did he ask me why I had ever not done something.’”

In other accounts the wording is that she had served him for ten or for five years. Abū al-Salām was also one of them. Abū al-ʿAbbās Muḥammad b. Ishāq al-Thaqafi stated that Muḥājir b. Mūsā related to him, quoting ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. Mahdī, quoting Yaḥyā b. al-Walīd, quoting Muḥīl b. Khalīfa, quoting Abū al-Salām, who said, “I was a servant of the Messenger of God (SAAS). If he wanted to wash, he would say, ‘Pass me my water vessel.’ And I would hand it to him and screen him. Once Ḥasan or Ḥusayn had been brought to him and had urinated over his chest. When I came over to wash him, he said, ‘Someone upon whom a girl has urinated should wash (the area), while someone upon whom a boy has urinated should merely splash thereon.’”

Abū Daʿūd, al-Nasaʾi and Ibn Maja narrated it thus from Muḥājir b. Mūsā. They also included that man who was absolutely the finest of the Companions, Abū Bakr, “the trusting”, may God be pleased with him. He served him by himself on his journey into exile, especially in the cave, but after his leaving it as well, until they arrived in Medina. This has all been explained above; and to God be all praise and credit.

Chapter: Those, may God be pleased with them, who wrote down the revelations and other matters in the presence of the Messenger of God (SAAS).

They included the four caliphs: Abū Bakr, ʿUmar, ʿUthmān, and ʿAlī b. Abū ʿAlī, may God be pleased with them all. Also of them was Aban b. Sa'id b. al-'As b. Umayya b. 'Abd Shams b. 'Abd Manaf b. Qusay al-Umawī.

Aban accepted Islam after his two brothers Khālid and 'Amr. He did so following al-Ḥudaybiyya. This came about because it was he who gave protection to Uthmān when the Messenger of God (SAAS) sent the latter to meet with the Meccans at al-Ḥudaybiyya. Others say that his conversion occurred at Khaybar; this is believed because of a hadith mentioning him that is recorded in the sahih collections from Abū Hurayra concerning the division of the booty taken at Khaybar.

The reason for his accepting Islam was that, while on business in Syria, he met with a monk to whom he mentioned the activities of the Messenger of God (SAAS). The monk asked him to name him and he told him his name was Muḥammad. The monk then offered to describe him, and did so exactly. He asked Aban, “When you return home to your people, give him my greetings.” And so he accepted Islam after his return. He was also the brother of 'Amr b. Sa'id al-Ashdaq, whom 'Abd al-Malik b. Marwan killed.

Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba stated, “The first person to write down the revelation in the presence of the Messenger of God (SAAS), was Ubayy b. Ka'b. If he were not present, then Zayd b. Thabit would record. Uthmān, Khālid b. Sa'id and Aban b. Sa'id also wrote for him.”

That is his statement. This refers to Medina; for Ubayy b. Ka'b was not present at the revelation of the Meccan suras. These were written down by the Companions in Mecca, may God be pleased with them all.

There is disagreement over the death of this man Aban b. Sa'id. Mūsā b. 'Uqba, Muṣ'ab b. al-Zubayr, al-Zubayr b. Bakkār and most of the scholars of biography state that he was killed at the battle of al-Ajnadayn. That is, in Jumādā al-Uwla of 12 AH. Others say he was killed at the battle of Marj al-Ṣufr in 14 AH.

Muḥammad b. Ishaq stated, “He and his brother 'Amr were killed at the battle of Yarmūk, on the 5th of Rajab, 15 AH.” It is also stated that he lived on into the time of Uthmān, that the latter ordered him to dictate the musḥaf al-imām,203 the Qurʾān, to Zayd b. Thabit and that he died thereafter, in 29 AH. But God knows best.

They also include Ubayy b. Ka'b b. Qays b. Ubayy al-Khazrajī al-Anṣārī Abū al-Mundhir, also known as Abū al-Ṭufayl. He was the chief reciter. He participated at the second 'Aqaba meeting, at Badr and at the engagements thereafter. He was of middle stature, slim and white of head and beard, the grey of which he left unchanged.

Anas stated, “Four persons” – of the anṣār, he means – “collected the Qurʾān. These were Ubayy b. Ka'b, Muṣ'ad b. Jabal, Zayd b. Thabit and an anṣārī named Abū Yazid.”

203. An authorized version of the Qurʾān compiled during the reign of Uthmān and held in safekeeping by Ḥafsa bt. al-Khaṭṭāb.
Both compilers of the sahīḥ collections included it.

In both of these collections a ḥadīth is given from Anas stating that Ubayy quoted the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), as having said, “God ordered me to recite the Qurān to you.”

Ubayy asked, “Did he actually name me, Messenger of God?” “Yes,” he replied. And Ubayy’s eyes welled with tears.

What is meant here by “to recite the Qurān to you” is a recitation to inform and to make heard, not a recitation from which learning comes. This is something that none of the scholars understand; however, we are drawing attention to this view so that its opposite will not be believed.

In another place we have given the reason for the recitation made to him, and to the fact that he recited to him the sūrat: “Those of the people of the Book and the polytheists who disbelieved could not be abandoned until clear evidence came to them, a Messenger from God reciting pages made pure that contain priceless writings” (sūrat al-Bayyina; XCIX, v.1–3).

That related to Ubayy b. Ka'b having berated another man for having recited the sūra in a manner different from Ubayy’s own recitation. Ubayy complained about him to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), who said, “Recite then, Ubayy.” When Ubayy had done so, he said, “That is how it was revealed.” He then said to the other man, “Now you recite.” He did so and the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, “That is how it was revealed.”

Ubayy narrated, “At this doubt seized me, that I might still be in the jahiliyya! The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) struck me on the chest and I broke out in sweat, feeling that I was looking differently at God.” After that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) recited to him this chapter to establish and explain to him that this Qurān was truth and veracity, and that it was revealed in many recitations in mercy and kindness to the worshippers.

Ibn Abū Khaythama stated. “He was the first person to write down the revelation in the presence of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).”

There is disagreement over the date of his death. It is variously said to have occurred in 19, 30 or 23 AH. It is also said to have been one week prior to the assassination of ʿUthmān. But God knows best.

Arqam b. Abū Arqam was also one of them. His name was ʿAbd Manāf b. Asad b. Jundab ʿAbd Allah b. ʿUmar b. Makhzūm al-Makhrūjī. He accepted Islam early. It was he in whose home at al-Ṣafā the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) remained hidden. That house later became known as al-khayzurān, “the tiller of the rudder”. He participated in the Hijra, at the battle of Badr and thereafter.

The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) established a tie of brotherhood between him and ʿAbd Allah b. Ansār. It was he who wrote out the tenancy document for land at Fakh for ʿAzīz b. al-Hārith al-Muḥārībī, and other documents, as ordered by the Messenger of God (SAAS). This is according to the account of the hāfiz Ibn ʿAsakir, through ʿAtiq b. Yaʿqūb al-Zubayrī, who narrated on a line through ʿAbd al-Malik b. ʿAbd Bakr b. Muḥammad b. ʿAmr b. Ḥazm, from his father, from his grandfather ʿAmr b. Ḥazm.

He died in either 53 or 55 AH, at the age of 85.

Imām ʿAḥmad narrated two ḥadīth in which Arqam is quoted. In the first, ʿAḥmad and al-Ḥasan b. ʿĀrafā stated, the wording given being from ʿAḥmad, that ʿAbdād b. ʿAbdād al-Muhallabī related to him, from Hishām b. Ziyād, from ʿAmmār b. ʿĀdī, from ʿUthmān b. Arqam b. ʿAbd al-Arzam, from his father, a Companion of the Prophet (SAAS), who quoted the latter as having said, “Whoever steps over the necks of the people at the Friday prayer assembly and separates between two (persons) after the appearance of the Imām (for the sermon) is like him who drags his intestines in hell-fire”.

In the second case, ʿAḥmad stated that Ḥishām b. Khālid related to him, quoting ʿAṭṭāf b. Khālid, quoting Yahyā b. Ṣimrān, from ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUthmān b. Arqam b. ʿAbd al-Arzam, from his grandfather al-Arzam, who said that he came to the Messenger of God (SAAS), who asked him, “Where are you heading?” “I am heading over there, Messenger of God,” he replied, gesturing in the direction of Jerusalem. “And what is taking you there; business?” asked the Prophet (SAAS). “No,” he replied, “I wanted to pray there.” The Messenger of God (SAAS) commented, “Prayer over here,” — and he gestured towards Mecca — “is better than 1,000 prayers” — and he gestured towards Syria.

ʿAḥmad is alone in giving both of these.

They also include Thābit b. Qays b. Shammās al-Anṣārī al-Khazraḥī ʿAbū ʿAbd al-Raḥmān, also known as ʿAbd Muḥammad al-Madani, the khāṭīb al-anṣār, “the orator of the anṣār”, and as the khāṭīb al-nabi, “the orator of the Prophet (SAAS)”.

Muḥammad b. ʿAṣṭār stated that ʿAṭā b. Muḥammad al-Madāʾinī informed him, giving lines of transmission from his elders from the delegations of Arabs who had gone to the Messenger of God (SAAS). These men said, “ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAbs al-Numalī and Maslama b. Hazzān al-Ḥuddānī came in a group of men of their tribes to the Messenger of God (SAAS), after the conquest of Mecca. They accepted Islam and pledged allegiance on behalf of their people. He wrote for them a document specifying the alms payments due from their properties. Thābit b. Qays b. Shammās wrote it out, and ʿAṣṭār b. Muḥammad b. Maslama, may God be pleased with them, witnessed it.

This man is among those of whom it is affirmed in the saḥīḥ collection of Muslim that the Messenger of God (SAAS) announced that they would go to paradise.

Al-Tirmidhī narrated in his ḥadīth collection, with a line of transmission that meets the criteria of Muslim, from Abū Hurayra, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) said, “What an excellent man is Abū Bakr! What an excellent man is Omar! What an excellent man is Abū Ubayda b. al-Jarrāḥ! What an excellent man is Usayd b. Ḥuḍayr! What an excellent man is Thābit b. Qays b. Shammas! What an excellent man is Muʿādh b. Ṭāʾīr b. al-Jamūḥ.

Thābit b. Qays, may God be pleased with him, was martyred at the battle of al-Yamama, in 12 AH, during the rule of Abū Bakr.

They also include Ḥanẓala b. al-Rabīʿ b. Sayfī b. Rabah b. al-Ḥarīth b. Mukhāshib b. Muḥāwiya b. Sharīf b. Jarwa b. Usayd b. Ṭāʾīr b. Tamīm al-Tamīmī al-Usaydī al-Kātib, “the scribe”, his brother Rabah, who was also a Companion, and his uncle Aktham b. Sayfī, who was (known as) ḥakīm al-ʿArab, “the sage of the Arabs”.

Al-Waqīdī stated, “He wrote a document for the Prophet (Ṣaḥīḥ).” Others said, “The Messenger of God (Ṣaḥīḥ) sent him to the people of al-Tīf to make peace. He participated in Khalīd’s campaigns in Iraq and elsewhere. He lived on into the rule of ʿAlī, but he did not participate with him in the battle of the camel” and other engagements. He moved away from Kufa because of the curses ʿUthmān spoke on it, and died after the period of ʿAlī’s rule.”

Ibn al-ʿAthīr narrated in al-Ghtiba that after his death, his wife expressed her grief over him, leading her neighbouring women to criticize her. She spoke the following verses on the subject:

“Da’d was surprised at a woman mourning for a venerable grey-beard!
If you would ask me today what it is that pained me, I would tell you what is no lie;
My eye is deathly afflicted by sorrow for Ḥanẓala, the scribe.”

Aḥmad b. ʿAbd Allāh b. al-Raqī stated, “He remained aloof from civil strife until he died, after ʿAlī. Two ḥadīth stem from him.”

I observe that in fact there were three.

Immān stated that ʿAbd al-Ṣamad and ʿAffān both stated that Ḥamām related to them, that Ṭatād quoted Ḥanẓala al-Kātib as having said, “I heard the Messenger of God (Ṣaḥīḥ) say, ‘Those who observe the five prayers, performing their prostrations, and the kneelings and their ablution at their proper times, and recognize that these are a duty owed to God, will enter paradise.’” Alternately, the words were “their due will be paradise”.

Aḥmad is alone in giving this. It is missing a link connecting between Ṭatād and Ḥanẓala. But God knows best.

The second ḥadīth is as follows. Aḥmad, Musliim, al-Tirmidhī and Ibn Māja narrated from a ḥadīth of Saʿīd al-Jarīrī, from Abū ʿUthmān al-Nahdī, who

204. At Khurayba, near Basra, on 10th Jumādā I AH (December 4, 656 AD), where the caliph ʿAlī defeated the combined forces of ʿAṭīsha, Ṭalḥa and al-Zubayr who were contesting the legitimacy of his rule.
quoted Ḥanẓala as having (quoted the Prophet (SAAS)), as having said, "If all of you remain as you are with me, the angels will greet you while you are meeting, while you are travelling and while you are in your beds; but you (only spend) part of your time with me."

Aḥmad and al-Ṭirmidhī also narrated it from a ḥadīth of ʿImrān b. ʿAbd ʿAbd al-Qattān, from Qatāda, from Yazīd b. ʿAbd Allāh b. al-Shikkhīr, from Ḥanẓala.

The third ḥadīth is as follows. Aḥmad, al-Naṣ̱rī and Ibn Māja narrated it from a ḥadīth of Sufyān al-Thawrī, from Abū al-Zinād, from al-Muraqqaʿ b. Ṣayīf b. Ḥanẓala, from his grandfather, concerning the prohibition of killing women in warfare.

However, Imam Al-Ḥmad narrated it from ʿAbd al-Raqqāq, from Ibn Jurayj, who gave a line from Abū al-Zinād, from Muraqqaʿ b. Ṣayīf b. Rabāḥ b. Rabīʿ, from his grandfather Rabīʿ b. Rabiʿ, the brother of Ḥanẓala al-Kātib.

Aḥmad also narrated it similarly from Ḥusayn b. Muḥammad and Ibrāhim b. Abū al-ʿAbbās, both of whom quoted from al-Mughīra b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān, from his father. And from Saʿd b. Manṣūr and Abī ʿAmr al-ʿAqādī, both of whom quoted from al-Mughīra b. ʿAbd al-Raḥmān, from Abū al-Zinād, from Muraqqaʿ, from his grandfather Rabāḥ. And also through al-Mughīra. Al-Naṣ̱rī and Ibn Māja narrated it similarly. Abū Daʿūd and al-Naṣ̱rī narrated it from a ḥadīth of ʿUmar b. Muraqqaʿ, from his father, from his grandfather Rabāḥ.

The ḥadīth is therefore from Rabāḥ, not from Ḥanẓala. Abū Bakr b. Abū Shayba therefore stated, "Sufyān al-Thawrī was mistaken about this ḥadīth."

I note that Ibn al-Raqqāq was correct in stating that Ḥanẓala narrated only two ḥadīths. But God knows best.

Khalīd b. Saʿd b. al-ʿĀṣ b. Umayya b. ʿAbd Shams b. ʿAbd Manāf Abū Saʿd al-Umawī was among them.

He accepted Islam early. It is said that he was the third, fourth or at most fifth after Abū Bakr.

It is said that his accepting Islam was due to a dream he had. In it he was standing on the edge of hell, the extent of which only God knew.

"It was as though his father was pushing him towards it, while the Messenger of God (SAAS) was holding him by the hand to prevent him from falling. He narrated this vision to Abū Bakr, who told him, 'Nothing but good was wished for you; this is the Messenger of God; follow him and you will escape what you feared.'" And so he went to the Messenger of God (SAAS), and accepted Islam.

"When news of this reached his father, he was very angry and hit him so hard with a stick he held that he broke it over his head. He threw him out of the house, denied him food and forbade his brothers from speaking to him. And so Khalīd remained with the Messenger of God (SAAS), night and day. Thereafter his brother ʿAmr also accepted Islam.

"When the Muslims went to exile in Abyssinia, these two men accompanied them. It was he who eventually arranged the marriage between Umm Ḥabiba and the Messenger of God (SAAS), as we have told above. Both men thereafter went on the Hijra from Abyssinia (to Medina) in the company of Ja'far. They reached the Messenger of God (SAAS), at Khaybar after his conquest of it. After consultation with the other Muslims, he gave them both shares of the spoils. Their brother Aban b. Sa‘id also arrived and participated at Khaybar, as narrated above, and the Messenger of God (SAAS) assigned them various duties.

“During the caliphate of Abū Bakr both men went to battle in Syria, and Khalid was killed at Ajnadayn; however, some say it was at Marj al-Saffār. God knows best.”

‘Atīq b. Ya’qūb stated that ‘Abd al-Malik b. Abū Bakr related to him, from his father, from his grandfather, from ʿAmr b. Ḥazm, to the effect that Khalid b. Sa‘īd wrote the following document on behalf of the Messenger of God (SAAS):

“In the name of God the most Merciful and Beneficent. This has been given by Muḥammad, the Messenger of God, to Rashīd b. ‘Abd Rabb al-Sulami. He has awarded him two ghalwa (of land) and one ghalwa at the rock at Ruhāt. No one should fear him. He is trustworthy. Khalid b. Sa‘īd wrote this.”

Muḥammad b. Sa‘īd stated, according to al-Waqīdī, that Jaʿfar b. Muḥammad b. Khalid related to him, that Muḥammad b. ‘Abd Allah b. ‘Amr b. Cuthman b. ‘Affān said, “Khalid b. Sa‘īd remained in Medina following his arrival from Abyssinia. He acted as a scribe for the Messenger of God (SAAS); it was he who wrote the document for the people of al-Ta‘īf to the delegation of Thaqīf and strove to arrange peace between them and the Messenger of God (SAAS).”

He was the commander of the victorious armies, the man in charge of those illustrious soldiers, and glorious and famous battles. He was of firm judgement, great bravery and fine conduct. He was father to Sulayman b. Khalid b. al-Walid.

It is said that he was never a participant in an army that was defeated, either before or after Islam.

Al-Zubair b. Bakkār stated, “He had the status of a chief among Quraysh and was in command of the cavalry.”

He, along with ‘Amr b. al-‘Āṣ and Uthmān b. Ṭalḥa b. Abū Ṭalḥa, accepted Islam after al-Ḥudaybiyya and before Khaybar. The Messenger of God (SAAS) soon gave him charge of expeditions and then, during the rule of Abū Bakr, he became commander-in-chief of all the Muslim forces.

When ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb succeeded to power, he dismissed him and appointed Abū Ubayda as amīn al-umma, “the guardian of the community”, with orders that he not disregard the views of (Khalid b. al-Walid) Abū Sulaymān.

Khalid died during the reign of ʿUmar, it is said in 21 AH or 22 AH, the former date being correct, in a village a mile distant from Ḥims. Al-Waqīdī stated, “I asked about its whereabouts but was told that it had been obliterated.”

205. A measure of length; the distance travelled by an arrow.
Duḥaym stated, “He died in Medina.” The first place of death mentioned is correct.

He narrated ḥadīth too numerous to relate here.

‘Atiq b. Ya‘qūb stated that Ṭabd al-Malik b. Ṭabū Bakr related to him, from his father, from his grandfather, from ŠAmr b. Ḥāzim, that the following referred to land tenancies the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) granted: “In the name of God the most Merciful and Beneficent. From Muhammad, Messenger of God, to the Believers. The game from Shayṭān and Shayṭar may not be mutilated or killed. Anyone discovered so doing shall be flogged and have his clothing taken away. Those transgressing this order shall be seized and the Prophet shall be informed of him. This comes from Muḥammad the Prophet. It is written by Khalid b. al-Walīd upon command of the Messenger of God. Let no one transgress this or he will do harm to himself regarding what Muḥammad has ordered.”

They also include al-Zubayr b. al-‘Awwām b. Kuwaylid b. Asad b. ŠAbd al-‘Uzzā b. Ṭuṣayy, Abū ŠAbd Allāh al-Asadī.

He was one of “the ten”206 and also one of the asḥāb al-shūra, “the Companions consulted” about whom the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) expressed his satisfaction at the time of his death. He was also regarded as a ḥawārī, “disciple”, of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), along with his cousin, the son of his aunt Ṣafīyya, daughter of ŠAbd al-Muṭṭalib, and was the husband of Asmāʾ, daughter of Abū Bakr, may God be pleased with him.

‘Atiq b. Ya‘qūb narrated, with the line of transmission given above, that it was al-Zubayr b. al-‘Awwām who wrote the document for Banū Mu‘awiya b. Jarwal, as ordered by the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).

Ibn ‘Asakir narrated this, giving his line of transmission from ‘Atiq.

Al-Zubayr, may God be pleased with him, accepted Islam early, while he was 16 years old; some say his age was 18. He took part in both exiles and participated in all the battles. He was the first person to draw his sword in God’s cause.

He participated, with the greatest distinction of all, at the battle of al-Yarmūk. That day he twice pierced the ranks of the Byzantines from front to rear, emerging safely from the other side. However, he received two wounds on his back. May God be pleased with him.

The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) called for both his parents at the battle of al-khandaq, “the trench” and said, “Every prophet has a disciple, and my disciple is al-Zubayr.”

Many virtues and fine deeds are attributed to him. He died at the battle of the camel. His death came about when he had turned around and was returning from the battle. ŠAmr b. Jurmūz, Fażāla b. Ḥabīs and a third man called al-Naʿīr, all of Banū Tamīm, caught up with him at a place called Wādī al-Sībāʾ. ŠAmr b. Jurmūz came upon him while he slept and killed him. That was on a Thursday, ten days prior to the end of Jumādā al-Uwālī in 36 AH. At that time he was 67 years old.

He died leaving a substantial inheritance. After the deduction of 2,200,000 dinārs, he left a testamentary bequest of one-third. When his debts had been satisfied, and the third had been extracted, the remainder was divided among his heirs. Each of his wives — of whom there were four — received 1,200,000 dinārs. The total amount of his estate to which we are referring was some 59,800,000 dinārs.

All this came to him by legitimate means during his life, from income he received from the al-fajr and the maghānim and through various kinds of permissible business activities. All that accrued after his payment of the zakāt, “the charity payments”, at the appropriate times, and numerous contacts with the recipients at the times of their need.

May God be pleased with him and give him pleasure, making the gardens of paradise his residence; and indeed He has! For the Lord of both those who came first and those who came after, the Messenger of the Lord of the worlds, has testified that there will be paradise for him. And to God be all praise and credit!

Ibn al-Athir stated in his work al-Ghaba that he had a 1,000 slaves collecting the kharaj tax payments for him, and that he would donate all that to charity. Ḥassān b. Thābit spoke the following verses giving him praise and credit for that:

“He grew up in the era and guidance of the Prophet, as his disciple, and speech with merit rings true.

He grew up in accord with his way and his path, allying with the agent of truth, and the truth is fully just.

He was that famous knight, that hero who sprang forward at every famous battle.

He was a man whose mother was Šafiyya, and he descended from a proud man named Asad, ‘lion’.

He had close family ties with the Messenger of God, and from fighting for Islam comes glory deeply secure.

Many were the dangers al-Zubayr deflected with his sword from al-Mustafā, ‘the chosen one’, and God rewards most generously.

When war emerged, he would slice at it, his blade flashing forward, charging proudly towards death.

He had no peer among them, nor was ever his like before, and his fame will never, for all time, fade.”

It has been recorded above that Āmr b. Jurmūz al-Tamīmī killed him in Wādī al-Sibā’ while he was asleep. Alternately, it is said that he emerged in a daze from 208. The term al-fajr is generally applied to goods and properties taken from unbelievers without battle having been engaged, while al-maghānim applies to spoils seized after warfare.
his sleep and rode away, but was confronted by Ibn Jurmuz. When al-Zubayr overcame him, Ibn Jurmuz was rescued by his two companions, Faqila and al-Nafr, and they all killed him. ‘Amr b. Jurmuz took his head and his sword. When he brought both of these to ‘Ali, the latter said on seeing al-Zubayr’s sword, “Many is the time this sword deflected danger from the face of the Messenger of God (SAAS).”

Among other comments he made, ‘Ali said, “Announce to the killer of Ṣafiyya’s son that he’s going to hell-fire!”

It is said that when ‘Amr b. Jurmuz heard that, he killed himself. The fact is, however, that he lived on after ‘Ali into the rule of Ibn al-Zubayr (al-Zubayr’s son ‘Abd Allah). The latter appointed his brother Muṣṣab to rule in Iraq on his own behalf, and ‘Amr b. Jurmuz disappeared, fearing that once in authority Muṣṣab would kill him to avenge his father. Muṣṣab ordered, “Inform him that he is safe; does he really think I would kill him for ‘Abd Allah’s father (al-Zubayr)? Certainly not, I swear by God; they are not equal!”

This decision stems from Muṣṣab’s qualities of shrewdness, intelligence and leadership.

Al-Zubayr narrated numerous ahādīth relating to the Messenger of God (SAAS), too many to mention here.

When al-Zubayr b. al-‘Awwām was killed at Wādī al-Sibā’, as related above, his wife ‘Ātika, daughter of Zayd b. ‘Amr b. Nufayl, recited the following verses:

“Ibn Jurmuz deceived the army’s champion knight, that day the forces clashed; he was not one to flee!

‘Amr, if you had warned him, you would not have found him effeminate, his hand or heart trembling.

Many were the battles he engaged, no resistance turning him aside, you utter coward!

May your mother mourn you! You were never victorious over his like in any that went before or ever will be.

By God, your Lord, if you kill a Muslim, the punishment of the Resolute One will alight upon you!”

He came to the Messenger of God (SAAS), in Medina when he was 11 years old. Therefore, due to his youth, he did not participate in the battle of Badr, nor in that at Uhud. The first battle in which he took part was that of al-khandaq, “the trench”. He participated in all thereafter.

He was a ḥafiz, a learned man of high intelligence. It is established about him in the sahīh collection of al-Bukhārī that the Messenger of God (SAAS) ordered him to learn the writing system of the Jews in order to be able to read to the Prophet (SAAS) whatever they might write to him. He learned this in 15 days.
Imam Ahmad stated that Sulayman b. Da‘ud related to him, quoting ‘Abd al-Rahmān, from Abū al-Zinād, from Khārijah b. Zayd, who quoted his father Zayd as having said, after having come to see the Messenger of God (SAAS) at Medina, “I was taken to him, and he was impressed with me. People said, ‘Messenger of God, this youth is from Banū al-Najjar; he knows from ten to twenty or so of the surat that God revealed to you.’ This delighted the Messenger of God (SAAS), and he told him, ‘Zayd, learn for me the writing of the Jews; I swear by God, I don’t trust a Jew to read to me.’”

Zayd went on, “So I set about learning their writing and had mastered it before 15 days had passed. I used to read to him whatever letters they wrote to him, and answered them on his behalf.”

Ahmad then narrated this from Shurayh b. al-Nu‘mān, from Ibn Abū al-Zinād, from his father, from Khārijah, from his father who related it similarly.

Abū Da‘ud narrated it from Ahmad b. Yūnus. Al-Tirmidhī gave it from ʿAlī b. Ḥaṣān. They both related it from ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. Abū al-Zinād, from his father, from Khārijah, from his father.

Al-Tirmidhī categorized it as ḥasan sahih.

This was truly extraordinary intelligence. He was one of those who collected the Qurʿān during the lifetime of the Messenger of God (SAAS) from the reciters, as is established in both sahih collections from Anas.

Ahmad and al-Nasa`ī narrated from a hadith of Abū Qalāba, from Anas, who quoted the Messenger of God (SAAS) as having said, “The person most kind towards my nation is Abū Bakr. The most severe in it for God’s religion is ʿUmar. The one in it most sincere in humility is ʿUthmān. The most decisive of them is ʿAlī b. Abū ʿAlīb. The man of them most knowledgeable of what is permissible and what forbidden is Muḥammad b. Jabal. The one most knowledgeable about the religious duties of Islam is Zayd b. Thābit. And every nation has an amin, a fully trustworthy man’. The amin of this nation is Abū ʿUbayd b. Ṣalāḥ.”

There are some ḥusnā who consider this hadith mursal, “incomplete”, except in so far as it refers to Abū ʿUbayd. It is given in this line of transmission in the sahih of al-Bukhārī.

Zayd wrote down the revelations in the presence, in several locations, of the Messenger of God (SAAS).

One of the clearest evidences of this is in the statement from him established in the sahih collections, in which he said, “When the words of Almighty God came down, ‘Those believers who stay back and those who strive hard in God’s cause are not equal’ (surat al-Nisā‘; IV, v.95), the Messenger of God (SAAS) called out to me and said, “Write down, “Those believers who stay back and those who strive hard in God’s cause are not equal.”

“Then Ibn Umm Maktum arrived and began complaining about his injuries. While his leg was pressing hard against my own — hard enough to almost bruise it — revelation again came to the Messenger of God (SAAS), with the words ghayru ʿalī al-darār, ‘except those who have suffered injury’. He ordered me to add these words, and I did so. And I well know the place where it was added — at a crack in that tablet — of bone, that is.”

Zayd participated in the expedition to al-Yamāma and he was struck by an arrow that did not seriously harm him. It was he whom Abū Bakr thereafter ordered to seek out and assemble the Qurān. He told him, “You are an intelligent young man about whom we have no suspicions; and you used to write down the revelation for the Messenger of God (SAAS). Therefore, seek out and assemble the Qurān.” And Zayd did as Abū Bakr had ordered him. There was much good in that; and to God be all praise and credit.

ʿUmar twice, while making the pilgrimage, appointed Zayd to govern Medina on his behalf, as he did when he made an expedition to Syria. ʿUthmān also appointed him to govern Medina.

ʿAīr liked him very well. Zayd extolled ʿAīr and gave recognition to his worthiness, although he did not participate with him in any of his battles. He lived on after ʿAīr, dying in 45 AH; that date is also given as 51 or 55 AH.

He was one of those who wrote the maṣāḥif al-ʿaʾīma,211 “the master copies”, that ʿUthmān b. ʿAffān dispatched to all parts. It was these that gave to the reading the official stamp of consensus and approval, as we have established in our book Taftīr (Exegesis of) al-Qurān. And to God be all praise and credit.

Al-Sijil was also one of them, as is stated in the ḥadīth narrated on that subject from Ibn ʿAbbās; on the assumption of its authenticity, that is, about which there is some controversy.

Abū Dāʾūd stated that Qutayba b. Saʿīd narrated to him, quoting Nūḥ b. Qays, from Yazid b. Kaʿb, from ʿAmr b. Malik, from Abū al-Jawzaʿ, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “Al-Sijil was a scribe of the Prophet (SAAS).”

Al-Nasāʾī narrated it thus from Qutayba, who quoted Ibn ʿAbbās as having said regarding the verse, “That day when we will roll up the heavens as al-sijil212 rolls up writings” (sūrat al-Anbiyāʾ; XXI, v.104). This word al-Sijil refers to the man.”

This is his wording.

211. The term given to the “authorized” text of the Qurān agreed upon by a commission formed by the caliph ʿUthmān consisting of ʿAbd Allāh b. al-Zubayr, Saʿīd b. al-ʿĀṣ and ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. al-Ḥārith. Copies of this text were dispatched to various cities with instructions that any “deviant” versions should be destroyed.

212. The word is frequently interpreted to mean “scroll”; the text would therefore read, “as a scroll rolls up writings”.
Abū Ja'far b. Jarir narrates, concerning the same verse, from Naṣr b. ʿAlī, from Nūḥ b. Qays, a source considered trustworthy and among those quoted by Muslim. Ibn Maʿṣūm, however, categorizes him as a weak source in one account quoting him. Regarding his teacher Sheikh Yazīd b. Ka'b al-ʿAwdhī al-ṣāḥī, only Nūḥ b. Qays quotes from him. Nevertheless, Ibn Ḥibbān includes him among those to be considered trustworthy sources.

I brought this hadīth to the attention of my teacher the ḥāfīz Sheikh Abū al-Ḥājjāj al-Mīzzi; he deprecated it strongly. I informed him that our very learned Sheikh Abū al-ʿAbbās b. Ṭaymīyya used to say, "This hadīth is fabricated, even if included in the sunān of Abū Dā'ūd!" Our teacher Sheikh al-Mīzzi commented, "I say the same!"

I note that the ḥāfīz Ibn ʿAdī narrated it in his work al-ʿKāmil from a hadīth of Muḥammad b. Sulaymān, known as "Būma", from Yahyā b. ʿAmr, from Malik al-Bakrī, from his father, from Abū al-Jawzāʾ, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, "The Messenger of God (SAAS) had a scribe named al-Sijil. He is referred to in the words of the Almighty, 'That day when we will roll up the heavens as al-Sijil rolls up writings.' Just as al-Sijil rolls up writings, thus will the heavens be rolled up."

Al-Bayhaqī narrated it similarly from Abū Naṣr b. Qatāda, from Abū ʿAlī al-Raḍāʾī, from ʿAli b. ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz, from Muslim b. Ibrāhīm, from Yahyā b. ʿAmr b. Ṭalīk. This Yahyā is considered a very weak source, one upon whom one should not be depended. But God knows best.

Stranger still than that is what was also narrated by the ḥāfīz Abū Bakr al-Khaṭīb and Ibn Manda from a hadīth of Ahmad b. Saʿīd al-Baghḍādī, known as "Ḥamdān", from Ibn Bahz, from ʿUbayd Allāh, from Nāṣīrī, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said, "The Prophet (SAAS) had a scribe called Sijil and God revealed, 'That day when we will roll up the heavens as al-Sijil rolls up writings.'" Ibn Manda commented, "This is ghārib. Ḥamdān is alone in giving it."

Al-Barqānī stated, "Abū al-Fatḥ al-Azīdī stated, ‘Ibn Numayr was alone in giving it, if authentic.’"

This is also objectionable when narrated from Ibn ʿUmar, just as it was when from Ibn ʿAbbās. For a quite different statement is also attributed to both. Al-Wālībī and al-Awīfī quote Ibn ʿAbbās as having stated with reference to this verse, "(it means) like the rolling of a saḥīfa (sheet of paper etc) over writings". Mujāhid stated the same.

Ibn Jarir stated, "It is well known in the language that al-sijil means a saḥīfa."

He went on, "No one among the Companions is known by the name al-Sijil."

And it is objectionable for al-Sijil to have been the name of one of the angels, as was narrated from Abū Kurayb, from Ibn Yamān, who stated that Abū al-Wafī al-Ashjaʿī related to him, from his father, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said, regarding the verse, "That day when we will roll up the heavens as al-Sijil rolls up writings", "Al-Sijil was an angel. Whenever he ascended with a request for forgiveness, God would say, 'Write it in light.'"
He also stated that Bandar related to him, from Mu’ammil, from Sufyan, who said, “I heard al-Suddi say . . .” And he went on to narrate it similarly.

Abū Ja’far al-Baqqir stated the same, narrating from Abū Kurayb, from Mubarak, from Ma’ruf b. Kharrabūdah, from someone who heard Abū Ja’far say, “Al-Sijil is an angel.”

Ibn Jarir’s denial that al-Sijil was the name of either a Companion or an angel is very convincing, while the ḥadīth to the contrary is very objectionable. Those, like Ibn Manda, Abū Nu’aym al-Isbahānī and Ibn al-Athir, in al-Ghaba, only do so to give credibility to this ḥadīth, or to comment upon its authenticity. But God knows best.

They also included Sa’d b. Abī Sarḥ, according to a statement made by Khalīfa b. Khayyāt.

It has been imagined that this man was his son ʿAbd Allāh b. Sa’d b. Abī Sarḥ, as will be explained shortly, if God so wills it.

ʿAmir b. Fuhayra, a freedman of Abū Bakr, was also one of them.

Imām Ahmad stated, “Abd al-Razzāq related to me, from Ma’mar, who quoted al-Zuhri as having said, “ʿAbd al-Malik b. Malik al-Mudliji informed me, he being the cousin of Suraqa b. Malik, that his father informed him that he heard Surāqa say . . .”’ And he proceeded to narrate the Hijra of the Prophet (ṢAAS). In this narrative, he said, “So I told him (the Prophet (ṢAAS)), ‘Your people have put a price on your head!’ And I related to them news relating to their departure and what people wanted to do with them. Then I offered them provisions, but they would not accept anything from me and asked me to leave them alone. I asked him if he would write down a safe conduct for me, and he told ʿAmir b. Fuhayra, who did so on a piece of leather. Then he left.”

I note that the ḥadīth is given complete above in the material relating to the Hijra. It is also recorded that it was Abū Bakr who wrote this document for Surāqa. But God knows best.

ʿAmir b. Fuhayra – known as Abū ʿAmr – was of mixed blood of Banū Azd. He was black in complexion. He had earlier been a freed-man of Ṭufayl b. al-Ḥarīth, the brother of ʿAṭīsha through her mother Umm Rūmān. He accepted Islam early, before the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) took refuge in the home of al-Arqam b. Abū al-Arqam at al-Ṣafā. ʿAmir was tortured along with all the others persecuted at Mecca to make them give up their faith. He refused, and Abū Bakr purchased him, then set him free. He would herd goats for him outside Mecca.

When the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) left on the Hijra, he accompanied Abū Bakr, who bore him on his mount. They also had al-Dīlī, the guide, with them. This is narrated in full above.

Upon their arrival in Medina, ʿAmir b. Fuhayra stayed with Sa’d b. Khaythama. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) established a tie of brotherhood between ʿAmir and Aws b. Muʿādh. He participated in Badr and at Uḥud.
He was killed at the battle of Bi'r Ma'una, as was related above. That was in 4 AH. At that time he was 40 years of age. But God knows best.

Urwa, Ibn Ishäq, al-Waqidi and other scholars state that Āmir was killed at Bi'r Ma'una by a man named Jabbar b. Sulma, of Banū Kilāb. When Āmir was pierced by the spear, he said, "I have succeeded, by the Lord of the ka'ba!" Āmir was then raised up until he disappeared from sight, so that Āmir b. al-Ṭufayl said, "He was raised up until I could see the sky and not him!"

"Amr b. Umayya was asked about him and he replied, "He was one of the best of us, and one of the earliest members of the household of our Prophet (ṢAAS)."

Jabbar stated, "I asked al-Dāhḥāk b. Sufyān what he meant by what he said. He replied, 'He was referring to paradise.'"

"Al-Dāhḥāk invited me to accept Islam, and I did so when I saw what happened at the death of Āmir b. Fuhayra. Al-Dāhḥāk wrote to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), informing him of my acceptance of Islam and of what had happened to Āmir. He commented, 'The angels concealed him and he has taken up residence with the spiritual hierarchy.'"

In both saḥīh collections Anas is quoted as having said, "He recited to us a Qur'ān verse about them: 'Inform our people that we have met our Lord. And He is pleased with us and has pleased us.'" 213

Reference is made above to this in the material treating the engagement at Bi'r Ma'una. 214

Muḥammad b. Ishäq stated that Hishäm b. Urwa related to him, from his father, that Āmir b. al-Ṭufayl used to ask, "Which of your men was it whom, when killed, was raised up between earth and sky so that you could see sky only, and not him?"

"That was Āmir b. Fuhayra," they would reply.

Al-Waqidi stated that Muhammad b. 'Abd Allah related to him, from al-Zuhri, from Urwa, who quoted Ḥāsha as having said, "Āmir b. Fuhayra was raised up into the sky; his body was not found."

They say that the angels concealed it.

'Abd Allah b. Arqam b. Abu Arqam al-Makhzūmī was also among them.

He accepted Islam the year of the conquest of Mecca and he wrote on behalf of the Prophet (ṢAAS).

Imām Mālik stated, "He (the Prophet (ṢAAS)) would send out what he did and would thank him and express his appreciation." 215

Salama stated, quoting Muhammad b. Ishäq b. Yasār, from Muhammad b. Ja'far b. al-Zubayr, from 'Abd Allāh b. al-Zubayr, that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) asked 'Abd Allāh b. al-Arqam b. 'Abd Yaghūth to write letters for him in response to the (letters) of the kings. His trust in 'Abd Allāh b. al-Arqam so developed that he would tell him to write to certain kings; he would write and

213. This verse, not present in the Qur'ān, is evidently a false attribution thereto.
the Messenger of God (SAAS) would put his seal on what he read (back) because of his trust in him.

He acted as scribe for Abu Bakr, who gave him charge of the treasury. 'Umar b. al-Khattab confirmed him in both positions. When Uthman succeeded, he dismissed him from them.

I note that this was after 'Abd Allah b. Arqam had tendered his resignation. It is said that Uthman offered him 300,000 dirhams as his salary, but he refused to accept this. He replied, "What I did was for God; my reward is up to God, Almighty and Glorious is He."

Ibn Ishaq stated, "Zayd b. Thabit wrote for the Messenger of God (SAAS). If neither Ibn al-Arqam nor Zayd b. Thabit were there, then someone else present would write."

"Umar, 'Ali, Zayd, al-Mughirah b. Shu‘ba, Mu‘awiya, Khalid b. Sa‘d b. al-‘As and others named by the Arabs wrote for him."

Al-A'mash stated, "I asked Shaqiq b. Salama, 'Who was the scribe for the Prophet (SAAS)?' He replied, 'Abd Allah b. al-Arqam. 'Umar brought out at al-Qadisiyya a document of Abu Bakr and at its base were the words, "Written by 'Abd Allah b. al-Arqam."'"

"When 'Umar acceded, he would seek 'Abd Allah's counsel. And 'Umar b. al-Khaṭṭāb is quoted as having said, 'I never saw anyone more fearful of God than him.' He meant any one of the workers."

He was, may God be pleased with him, injured before his death. 'Abd Allah b. Zayd b. 'Abd Rabbihī al-Anṣārī al-Khazrajī, the originator of the call to prayer, was one of them.

He accepted Islam early and was present at the 'aqabat al-sab‘īn, the "'Aqaba meeting of the 70." He participated at the battle of Badr and later engagements. One of his greatest credits is his having had a vision of the call to prayer in his sleep and his having repeated this to the Messenger of God (SAAS), who responded, "These are visions of truth. Stand with Bilal and deliver them to him so that he can use them to announce the call to prayer; he has a stronger voice than you."

We have given the hadith relating to this above.
AI-Waqidi narrated, giving lines of transmission from Ibn 'Abbas, that the Prophet (SAAS) wrote a letter to those of Banū Jurash who accepted Islam, ordering them to perform the prayer, pay the zakat, and to donate one-fifth of the booty they took.

He died in 32 AH at 64 years of age. Uthmān b. Affān, may God be pleased with him, performed the prayers for the deceased.

Of them also was ‘Abd Allāh b. Sa‘d b. Abū Sarḥ al-Qurashi al-‘Amiri, a foster-brother of Uthmān by his mother; Uthmān’s mother suckled him, that is.

He wrote down the revelation and later seceded from Islam, joining the polytheists in Mecca. When the Messenger of God (SAAS) conquered it, having declared it lawful to spill his blood, along with certain others there, ‘Abd Allāh b. Sa‘d went to Uthmān b. Affān and sought his protection. The Messenger of God (SAAS) then guaranteed his safety, as we have narrated above in the account of the conquest of Mecca. Thereafter, ‘Abd Allāh b. Sa‘d was an extremely good Muslim.

Abī Da‘ūd stated that Ahmad b. Muḥammad al-Marūzī related to him, quoting ‘Ali b. al-Ḥusayn b. Waqīd, from his father, from Yazīd al-Naḥwī, from Ikrima, who quoted Ibn ‘Abbas, as having said, “‘Abd Allāh b. Sa‘d b. Abū Sarḥ was a scribe for the Prophet (SAAS). Then Satan made him slip, and he joined the unbelievers. And so the Messenger of God (SAAS) ordered that he be executed. Uthmān asked for him to have protection and so the Messenger of God (SAAS) guaranteed his safety.”

Al-Nas’ai narrated it from a hadith of ‘Ali b. al-Ḥusayn b. Waqīd.

I note that he was on the right wing of the army of ‘Amr b. al-‘Aṣ when ‘Amr conquered Egypt in 20 AH, during the rule of Umar. Umar appointed ‘Amr his governor there; when Uthmān succeeded to the caliphate, he dismissed ‘Amr and, in 25 AH, appointed ‘Abd Allāh b. Sa‘d in command of Egypt.

Uthmān ordered ‘Abd Allāh b. Sa‘d to conquer Africa and he attacked and conquered it. There the army acquired great wealth. The share of the booty received by each of the army’s cavalry was 3,000 mithqāl of gold. Each foot soldier received 1,000 mithqāl. With him in that army were three men named ‘Abd Allāh: ‘Abd Allāh b. al-Zubayr, ‘Abd Allāh b. Umar, and ‘Abd Allāh b. ‘Amr.

Thereafter ‘Abd Allāh b. Sa‘d attacked the blacks of Nubia and established with them a truce that is still in effect today. That was in 31 AH. He then commanded a naval expedition against the Byzantines; it was a great expedition.

When disagreement arose over Uthmān, he left Egypt, appointing a deputy to govern it, in order to go to aid Uthmān. When Uthmān was killed, he took up residence in ‘Asqalān (Ashkelon) — or alternatively, at Ramla — and prayed to God to take him during prayer. One day he performed the dawn prayer, in the first part of which he recited the fatiha and the (sūrat) al-‘Adiyāt (C), and in the 217. A weight equal to one-and-a-half dirham.
second part the fatiha and a surah. When he had finished the al-tashahhud he performed the salutation of the first taslim. He was then about to perform the second taslim, but died between the two salutations; may God be pleased with him. His death occurred in 36 AH or in 37 AH. It is also said that he lived on until 59 AH. The first date of death is correct.

No narratives stemming from him occur in the six canonical collections of ahadith, nor in the al-Musnad collection of Imam Ahmad.

They also include 'Abd Allah b. Uthman, Abü Bakr, “the trusting”. I have made reference to his biography in the material relating to his caliphate. I constructed a whole volume on his life and the ahadith he narrated and the statements attributed to him.

The proof that he wrote for him is in what Musa b. Uqba related, from al-Zuhri, from 'Abd al-Rahman b. Malik b. Ju'shum, from his father, from Surqa b. Malik, in his account of his pursuit of the Messenger of God (SAAS), who had left the cave and was passing through his tribe’s territory. When he came upon them and the incident occurred with his mare, he asked the Messenger of God (SAAS) for a safe conduct and the latter told him to write a note for him and then gave it to him.

Imam Ahmad narrated, through al-Zuhri, with the same line of transmission, that Atir b. Fuhayra wrote it. It is likely that Abü Bakr wrote part of it, then gave orders to his freed-man Atir, who wrote the remainder. But God knows best.

Also among them was Uthman b. Affan, the Commander of the Believers. I have detailed his biography in the material relating to his caliphate. I narrated above how he wrote the peace agreement between the Messenger of God (SAAS) and Quraysh at Hudaybiyya, specifying that the Muslims would be safe, that there would be no swords drawn, nor chains used, and that there would be no warfare for ten years. He also wrote other documents in the presence of the Prophet (SAAS).

Regarding the claim made by a group of Jews of Khaybar that they hold a document from the Prophet (SAAS), concerning their exemption from payment of the jizya tax, and its having been signed as having been written by Ali b. Abü Talib and witnessed by a group of Companions, including Sa'd b. Mu'adh and Mu'awiyah b. Abü Sufyan – this is all a lie and a fabrication, a pure invention. A number of scholars have made clear the falseness of their claim; however, certain early jurists were deceived and recommended that they be exempt from payment of the jizya. This decision is very weak.
I have gathered all material relating to this, dedicating to it a separate section in which I established its falseness and the fact that it was a fabrication. They completely invented it, as they are capable of doing! I have examined this fully and gathered all the variety of statements made about it by the _imāms_. And all praise and credit go to God.

Included among those who wrote for him was the Commander of the Believers, ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb; I have given details of his life in its proper place. I have devoted a separate volume to him and another large work that gives the _ahādith_ he narrated concerning the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), along with the statements and regulations attributed to ʿUmar. Reference to his having written for the Prophet (ṢAAS) is given above in the material relating to the life of ʿAbd Allāh b. al-Arqam.

They include al-ʿAlāʾ b. al-Ḥaḍramī; al-Ḥaḍramī’s name is also given as ‘Abbād, and ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿAbbād b. Akbar b. Rabīʿa b. ʿArif b. Mālik b. al-Khazraj b. Iyyād b. al-Ṣadaf b. Ẓayd b. Muqniʿ b. Ḥaḍramawt b. Qaḥṭān. A different genealogy is also given for him.

He was of the allies of Banū Umayya. Reference to his having written (for the Prophet (ṢAAS)) is given above in the details relating to the life of Abān b. Saʿīd b. al-ʿĀṣ.

He had ten brothers. They included ʿAmr b. al-Ḥaḍramī, the first polytheist killed by the Muslims, in the expedition of ʿAbd Allāh b. Jaḥsh, the first such foray, as is narrated above.

ʿAmīr b. al-Ḥaḍramī was also among them. It was he to whom Abū Jahl, may God curse him, gave orders so that he exposed his private parts and called out, “Woe for ʿAmr! Woe for ʿAmr!” This was when the Muslims and the polytheists lined up to do battle at Badr. At that the warfare was waged furiously, with the outcome as we have described at length above.

They also included Shurayḥ b. al-Ḥaḍramī, one of the very best of the Companions. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said of him, “That is a man who does not use the Qurʾān as a pillow!” By this he meant that he did not go to sleep and abandon it, but was conscious of it at all times of the day and night.

All these men had only one sister, al-Ṣāʿa, daughter of al-Ḥaḍramī, the mother of Ẓalḥa b. Ḫubayd Allāh.

The Prophet (ṢAAS) sent al-ʿAlāʾ b. al-Ḥaḍramī to al-Mundhir b. Ṣawā, the king of al-Baḥrayn. He appointed al-ʿAlāʾ as its ruler after he conquered it, and Abū Bakr confirmed him in that position, as did ʿUmar b. al-Khaṭṭāb. He remained in that role there until ʿUmar removed him and appointed him Governor of Basra. He died while _en route_, in 21 AH.

Al-Bayḥaqi and others attribute to him many wonderful deeds. One such is his having led his army out upon the sea without the water having reached up to the stirrups of their horses! Other accounts say the undersides of their horses’ hooves did not even get wet, after he had ordered them all to call out, Ya Ḥalím! Ya ʿAzīm! “O Wise One! “O Mighty One!”

Another incident related to his being with his army when they were desperate for water. He prayed to God who sent down rain to satisfy their need. Also, when he was about to be buried, no trace at all of him could be seen! He had asked God for that.

Details relating to all this will come shortly in my work Dalā'il al-Nubuwwa, if God so wills it.

He is credited with three ḥadīth from the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). The first is as follows. Imām ʿAbd Allāh stated that Sufyān b. Ṣuwaym related to him, quoting ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. Ḥaḍramī b. ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. ʿĀwīf, from al-Sāḥib b. Yazīd, from al-Ṣāḥib b. al-Ḥaḍramī, who quoted the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), as having said, “The ṭukhāf jīr remains for three days after the completion of his ceremonies.”

The scholastic community all give this from his ḥadīth.

The second is as follows. Ahmad stated that Hushaym related to him, quoting Mansūr, from Ibn Sirīn, from Ibn al-Ṣāḥib b. al-Ḥaḍramī, who said that his father wrote to the Prophet (ṢAAS), and began it by reference to himself.

ʿAbd Dāʿūd narrated it thus from ʿAbd Allāh b. Ḥanbal.

The third ḥadīth is narrated by ʿAbd Allāh and by Ibn Māja, through Muḥammad b. Zayd, from Liṭbān al-ʿArājī, to the effect that al-Ṣāḥib b. al-Ḥaḍramī wrote to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), from al-Balḥayn concerning a ḥāṣit – an orchard, that is – that was owned by brothers. He asked what (would be the tax consequences) if one of the brothers accepted Islam. He ordered him to collect al-ṭushr, “the tithe”, from the Muslim and then the kharaj, “the poll tax”; from the one who had not accepted Islam, that is.

Al-Ṣāḥib b. ʿUqba was also one of them. The ḥāṣit Ibn ʿĀsikīr stated, “He was a scribe of the Prophet (ṢAAS). I know of no one who made mention of him other than as we are narrating.”

He went on to give a line of transmission to ʿAtīq b. Yaṣīq, who quoted ʿAbd al-Malik b. Abū Bakr b. Muḥammad b. ʿAmr b. Ḥazm, from his father, from his grandfather, from ʿAmr b. Ḥazm, who detailed land grants made by the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) to certain persons. He gave the wording of the deed as follows, “In the name of God, the most Merciful and Beneficent: this is a grant made by the Prophet, Muḥammad to ʿAbbās b. Mirdās al-Sulaimān. He has given him Madmūr. No one has a right to interfere with him there; he has full rights. Written and witnessed by al-Ṣāḥib b. ʿUqba.”

He also went on to quote, “In the name of God, the most Merciful and Beneficent. This records what Muḥammad, the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), has awarded to ʿAṣṣajāb b. Ḥarmalā al-Juḥant: from Dhu al-Marwa and what lies between Balkatha to al-Zubya, to al-Jašīʿt, to Mt. al-Qibliyya. No one has a right to interfere with him there. He has full rights. Written by al-Ṣāḥib b. ʿUqba.”
Al-Waqidî narrated, giving full lines of transmission, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) had made a grant of land to Banû Sîyāh b. Juḥaym. Their deed relating thereto had been written and witnessed by al-Ṣaḥâba b. Ṣuqla.

Ibn al-Ṭairî mentioned this man briefly in his work al-Chabâ bi. He stated, “Al-Ṣaḥâba b. Ṣuqla wrote on behalf of the Prophet (SAAS) . . .” He gave his name also in a hadith of 'Amr b. Ḥazm. Ja'far included this, and Abu Muṣâ - al-Madînî, that is - gave it in his book.

Al-Ṭairî also mentioned that inside him there was Muḥammad b. Maslama b. Ḥuraysh b. Khâlid b. 'Adî b. Majda'â b. Ḥâritth b. al-Ḥârîth b. al-Khazraj al-Ansârî al-Ḥâritth al-Khazraj Abû ʿAbd Allâh, known as Abû ʿAbd al-Rahmân, and as Abû Sa'd al-Madînî, the ally of Banû ʿAbd al-Asâhhal.

He accepted Islam in the presence of Muṣâb b. Umayr, or alternatively Sa'd b. Muṣâdh and Usayy b. Ḥujayr. Upon his arrival in Medina, the Messenger of God (SAAS) established a tie of brotherhood between him and Abû ʿUbayda b. al-Jarrâh. He participated at Badr and at battles thereafter. The Messenger of God (SAAS) appointed him his vice-regent over Medina in the year of the expedition to Tabûk.

Ibn ʿAbd al-Barr stated in his work al-Mustinb that he had an extremely dark complexion, was tall, bald and corpulent. He was one of the most excellent of the Companions. He avoided involvement in civil unrest and carried a wooden sword. He died in Medina in 43 AH, as is widely known. Marwân b. al-Ḥakam prayed over him. He narrated many aḥâdîth from the Prophet (SAAS).

Muḥammad b. Sa'd narrated, from ʿAlî b. Muḥammad al-Madâ'înî, with lines of transmission back from him, that it was Muḥammad b. Maslama who, at the order of the Messenger of God (SAAS), wrote the document for the delegation from Banû Murra.

They also included Muḥâwiya b. Abû Sufyān, Sâdh b. Ḥarb b. Umayyâ b. al-Umawt; we have detailed his biography in materials relating to his period of rule.

Muṣlim b. al-Ḥajjâj includes him among the scribes of the Messenger of God (SAAS). Muslim narrated, in his sahîh collection, from a hadith of Ikramâ b. ʿAmmâr, from Abû Zumayl Ṣimâkh b. al-Wâlîf, from Ibn ʿAbbaṣ, that Abû Sufyân asked, “Messenger of God, are there three requests you would fulfil for me?” “Yes,” he replied. He then said, “Give me command, so that I can battle the unbelievers, just as I used to battle the Muslims.” “Granted,” he replied. He then asked, “Appoint Muḥâwiya as your scribe.” “Granted,” he replied. And the hadith continues thereafter.

I have devoted a separate section to this hadith since it incorporates reference to his request to the Messenger of God (SAAS) that the latter marry Umm Ḥabība. Moreover, it does include reference to Abû Sufyân's appointment as a commander and to Muḥâwiya's part as scribe on behalf of the Prophet (SAAS).

On this issue scholars are unanimous.
Then there is the ḥadīth relating to Muʿāwiya given by the ʿhāfiz Ibn ʿAsākir in his work of history that is relevant here. He stated that Abū Ḥālib b. al-Banā related to him, quoting Abū Muhammad al-Jawhart, quoting Abū ʿAlī Muhammad b. ʿAlī, quoting ʿAbī ʿAbd Allah al-ʿAtashi, quoting Abū Muhammad al-Būrānī, quoting al-Sarī b. ʿAṣīm, quoting al-Ḥasan b. Ẓiyād, from al-Qāsim b. Bahrām, from Abū al-Zubayr, from Jābīr to the effect that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) sought the advice of Gabriel over appointing Muʿāwiya as his scribe and that the latter said, “Appoint him as a scribe; he is trustworthy.”

This ḥadīth is gharīb and, indeed, objectionable. This man al-Sarī b. ʿAṣīm is Abū ʿAṣīm al-Hamadānī, who used to act as tutor to al-Muʿtaz Bī Allāhī; Ibn Khirāsh stated that he was untruthful in ḥadīth narration.

Ibn Ḥibbān and Ibn ʿAdī stated that he would steal ḥadīth. Ibn Ḥibbān added, “He would ascribe to (the Prophet (ṢAAS)) statements that belonged to the Companions. It is not permissible to use such materials in arguments.” Al-Dārquqīnī stated that his ḥadīth were weak.

His teacher was Sheikh al-Ḥasan b. Ẓiyād, who stated, “If the latter was al-Luʿluʿī several of the imāms have ignored him. Many of them asserted that he was mendacious. If applicable to some other person, nothing whatsoever is known about him.”

The source in the above ḥadīth named as al-Qāsim b. Bahrām might refer to either of two persons. One possibility would be a man known as al-Qāsim b. Bahrām al-ʿAsādī al-Wāsīṭī al-ʿArāj, whose origins were in Isfahān. Al-Nasāʿī quoted him from Saʿīd b. Jubayr, from Ibn ʿAbbās, at length for his statement relating to the ḥadīth al-quniʿūt. Ibn Maʿīn, Abū ʿĪsām, Abū Dāʾūd and Ibn Ḥibbān categorize him as a trustworthy source. The second man was al-Qāsim b. Bahrām Abū Hamdān, the qāḍī of Hit. Ibn Maʿīn stated that he was a notorious liar.

In sum, therefore, this ḥadīth from this line of transmission is not firmly established and is one by which one should not be misled.

It is surprising that the ʿrajī; Ibn ʿAsākir, a scholar of such illustrious reputation and a man of greater knowledge regarding the fabrication of ḥadīth than his contemporaries—or his predecessors for many years before—should give this in his work of history along with many other such ḥadīth, without any (negative) commentary, direct or subtle. Such behaviour is questionable. But God knows best.

219. The reference seems to have two possible connotations. The first relates to a question posed to the Prophet (ṢAAS), regarding which prayer was best. To this he responded with the words, “(the one) ʿāl al-quniʿūt”, “the one for which one remains standing at length”. A specific prayer is therefore known as the “ debilitating standing”. Alternatively, the reference could be to a ḥadīth telling of the curse delivered by the Prophet daily for one month against the tribes of Rāf and Dhakwān for their actions at the engagement at Bīr Maʿīna. See Vol. III.
They also included al-Mughira b. Shu'ba al-Thaqafi. I have given his biography above in the section devoted to those of his Companions apart from his freed-man who served the Messenger of God (SAAS). I noted that it was he who would hold a sword above the latter's head.

Ibn Asakir narrated from 'Atiq b. Ya'qub, along several lines of transmissions, as above, that it was al-Mughira b. Shu'ba who wrote out the land tenure deed for Husayn b. Nadla al-Asadî awarded him at the orders of the Messenger of God (SAAS).

These, then, were the scribes who would write at his command and in his presence.

Chapter.

Ibn Asakir included among those who were trusted (scribes) Abu Ubayda 'Amir b. 'Abd Allah b. al-Jarraj al-Qurashi al-Fihri, one of “the ten,”220 may God be pleased with him, and 'Abd al-Rahman b. 'Awf al-Zuhri.

Regarding Abu Ubayda, al-Bukhari narrated from Abu Qilabâ, from Anas, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) said, “Every nation had an amin, a fully trustworthy person. And the amin of this community is Abu Ubayda b. al-Jarrâb.”

In one text the wording is, “The Messenger of God (SAAS) told a delegation of (Banû) 'Abd al-Qays of Najrân, “I will send with you an amin, a true amin.” And he sent Abu Ubayda with them.

Ibn Asakir went on, “Among them also was Mu'ayqib b. Abu Fatima al-Dawsi, the freed-man of Banû 'Abd Shams. He was in charge of his (seal) ring; it is also said that he was his servant. Others have said that he accepted Islam early and emigrated with the others to Abyssinia, and thereafter to Medina. He participated in the battle of Badr and engagements thereafter, and he was in charge of his ring. Both of the sheikhs221 placed him in charge of the treasury.”

They also say that he contracted leprosy, that 'Umar b. al-Khatîb ordered that he be treated with colocynth and that the disease was arrested. His death came during the caliphate of Uthman, in the year 40 AH, it is said. But God knows best.

Imam Ahmad stated that Yahyah b. Abû Bakr related to him, quoting Shaybân, from Yahyah b. Abû Kathîr, from Abû Salama, who quoted Mu'ayqib to the effect that the Messenger of God (SAAS) said about a man smoothing out the earth where he would prostrate in prayer, “If you have to do it, let it be once (only).”

Both compilers of the Sahih collections gave it from a hadith of Shaybân al-Nahwî. Muslim added, “And also (from) Hishâm al-Đastuwârî.” Al-Tirmidhi, al-Nasa'i and Ibn Majaj also gave it from al-Awsatî. All three of them also gave it from Yahyah b. Abû Kathîr. Al-Tirmidhi categorized it as hasan sahih.

220. See Vol. 1.
221. Abû Bakr and 'Umar, that is.
Imám Aḥmad stated that Khalaf b. al-Walid related it to him, quoting Ayyūb, from Uthba, from Yaḥyā b. Abū Kathīr, from Abū Salama, who quoted Muʿayqib as having stated, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, ‘Woe to those (who neglect to wash their ankles properly) from hell-fire.’”

Imám Aḥmad is alone in giving this.

Abū Daʿūd and al-Nasāʾī narrated from a hadith of Abū ʿAttāb Sahl b. Ḥammād al-Dallāl, from Abū Makīn Nūḥ b. Rabīʿa, from Iyyās b. al-Ḥārith b. al-Muʿayqib, who quoted his grandfather - who was in charge of the (seal) ring of the Prophet (ṢAAS) - as having said, “The ring of the Prophet (ṢAAS) was made of iron with silver overlaid upon it. Sometimes it was in my hand.”

I note that the ring of the Prophet (ṢAAS) was actually made of silver, with its protusion integral to it, as will be shown in the quotations from the sahīḥ collections. He had earlier had a gold ring that he had worn for a period but later discarded, saying, “I swear by God, I’ll not wear it!”

He then began use of this ring made of silver with its raised design integral, inscribed with the words, “Muḥammad, Messenger of God,” with “Muḥammad” on one line, “rasūl, ‘messenger’”, on another, and “Allāh, ‘God’”, on the third.

After remaining in his possession, it was passed on after him to Abū Bakr, then to ʿUmar and then to ʿUthmān, with whom it remained for six years. Then it dropped from him into the well at Aris. He made every effort to retrieve it, but failed.

Abū Daʿūd, may God have mercy upon him, devoted an entire chapter of his work al-Sunan to the ring; we will if God so wishes it, shortly hereafter quote from it material we find useful. And God is the source of help.

The reference above to Muʿayqib’s wearing this ring point to the weakness of the report of his having been afflicted with leprosy, as Ibn ʿAbd al-Barr and others related. However, this is widely believed. Perhaps he contracted this disease after the time of the Prophet (ṢAAS), or he may have been infected by it but not have been contagious. Or this might indicate the nature of the strength of the trust in God characteristic of the Prophet (ṢAAS). This is suggested by what the latter said to the leper as he placed his hand in the dish of food, “Eat; with confidence in God and reliance upon Him!”

Abū Daʿūd narrated this. It is established in the sahīḥ collection of Muslim that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) said, “Flee from the leper as you flee from a lion!” But God knows best.

Regarding the military commanders of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), we have made reference to them, arranged by their names, in the materials relating to the expeditions he dispatched. And all praise and credit belong to God.

People are in disagreement over the question of the total number of the Companions of the Prophet (ṢAAS). Abū Zurʿa is quoted as having said, “They totalled 120,000 persons.”
AI-Shafi‘i stated, “When the Messenger of God (SAAS) died, there were some 60,000 Muslims (alive) who had seen and heard him.”

AI-lSa‘im Abü ‘Abd Allah stated, “There are some 5,000 Companions who narrated āhādīth (from him).”

I note that the Companions whose āhādīth were quoted by Imam Aḥmad with all his breadth of knowledge, extensive travels and recognized expertise totalled 987 persons.

The six canonical collections of traditions quote from some 300 Companions in addition to these.

A number ofṣuflāz, may God be pleased with them, have devoted themselves to establishing the names, biographies and deaths of these Companions. One of the most illustrious of these men was Sheikh Abū Qur‘ān Abū Bakr al-Insī, whose book is entitled al-Iṣṭāfā. Other such scholars were Abū ʿAbd Allāh Muḥammad b. Manda, and Abū Mūsā al-Madīnī.

The ḥāfiz Izz al-Dīn Abū al-Ḥasan ʿAlī b. Muḥammad b. Abū Karīm al-Jazari, known by the epithet Ibn al-Saḥāba, “son of the Companions”, collected all this material. He compiled it into his book al-Ghāba, an excellent and highly useful work in which he gathered all such material with great care and precision. May God have mercy upon him, reward him and unite him with the Companions! Amen, O Lord of the worlds!

Chapter: Information relating to the clothing, weapons, mounts and personal effects that the Prophet (SAAS) used during his life.

References to the ring he wore and to the material from which it was made.

Abū Da‘ūd gave a separate chapter on this in his work al-Sunan; we will give here the most important of these references and additional materials stemming from reliable sources.

Abū Da‘ūd stated that ‘Abd al-Raḥmān b. Muṭrif al-Ru‘ūsī narrated to him, quoting Ṭsā, from Sa‘dī, from Qatāda, who quoted Anas b. Mālik as having said, “The Messenger of God’s (SAAS) wished to write to certain non-Arabs and he was told that they will not read a letter unless it has been signed with a seal. He therefore took a ring and had inscribed on it, ‘Muḥammad, Messenger of God.’”

Al-Bukhārī narrated it thus from ʿAbd al-ʿĀlī b. Ḥammād, from Yazīd b. Zuray’, from Sa‘dī b. Abū al-ʿArūba, from Qatāda.

Abū Da‘ūd then stated that Wahb b. Baqīyya narrated to him, from Khalīd, from Sa‘dī, from Qatāda, from Anas, to the same effect as in the āhādīth of Ṭsā b. Yūnus. He added, “It was on his hand until he died; then it was worn by Abū Bakr until he died, and by Qur‘ān until he died. Then ʿUthmān wore it. While he was at a well it fell into that well. He ordered it to be emptied, but it could not be found.”

Abū Da‘ūd is alone in giving this from this line of transmission.
Abū Da‘ūd, may God have mercy upon him, stated that Qutayba b. Sa‘d and ʿĀhmād b. Ṣāliḥ both stated that Ibn Wahb informed them, quoting Yūnūs, from Ibn Shihāb, who said, “Anas related to me, ‘The ring of the Prophet (ṢAAS) was made of silver, and its stone was Abyssinian.’”

Al-Bukhārī narrated this from a ḥadīth of al-Layth. Muslim gave it from one of Ibn Wahb. Tālha gave it from Yahyā al-Anṣārī and Sulaymān b. Bīlāl. Al-Naṣāḥī and Ibn Mājah added to these ʿUthmān, from ʿUmar. All five scholars gave the ḥadīth from Yūnūs b. Yazīd al-ʿAbī. Al-Tirmidhī categorized it as, ḥasan ṣaḥīh gharīb from this line.

Abū Da‘ūd went on to state that ʿĀhmād b. Yūnūs related to him, quoting Zuhayr, quoting ʿAlītumayd al-Tawīl, from Anas, who said, “The ring of the Prophet (ṢAAS) was entirely made of silver, its ‘stone’ being an integral part of it.”

Al-Tirmidhī and al-Naṣāḥī narrated it from a ḥadīth of Zuhayr b. Muʿāwiyah al-Jufī Ābū Khaythama al-Kūfī. Al-Tirmidhī stated that it was ḥasan, ṣaḥīh gharīb from that line.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Abū Maʿmar related to him, quoting ʿAbd al-Warith, quoting ʿAbd al-Azīz b. Ṣuḥayb, from Anas b. Mālik, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had a ring made. He said, ‘We have acquired a ring and had an inscription engraved on it. Let no one make a (similar) inscription on it (his own ring).’”

Anas went on, “I can still see its gleam on his little finger.”

Abū Da‘ūd continued that Naṣr b. al-Faraj related to him, quoting Abū Usāma, from Ubayd Allāh, from Nāfiʿ, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) obtained a gold ring and wore it with its stone facing towards the centre of his palm. And on it he had inscribed, ‘Mūḥammad, Messenger of God’.

“People then began wearing gold rings. When he saw them doing this, he threw his away, saying, ‘I’ll never wear it!’ He then began wearing a silver ring inscribed with the words, ‘Mūḥammad, Messenger of God’. After his death, Abū Bakr wore it. Then, after him, ʿUmar wore it, and then ʿUthmān (did so) until it dropped inside the Arīs well.”

Al-Bukhārī narrated it from Yūṣuf b. Musa, from Abū Usāma Hammad b. Usāma.

Abū Da‘ūd went on to state that ʿUthmān b. Abū Shayba related to him, quoting Sufyān b. ʿUyayna, from Ayyūb b. Musa, from Nāfiʿ, from Ibn ʿUmar, who gave this same information about the Prophet (ṢAAS), and stated, “He inscribed it with the words, ‘Mūḥammad, Messenger of God’, and said, ‘Let no one (else) inscribe on this ring of mine!’” And he concluded the ḥadīth.

Muslim and the ahl al-sunan all give this, from a ḥadīth of Sufyān b. ʿUyayna, in similar form.

Abū Da‘ūd further stated that Mūḥammad b. Yahyā b. Fāris related to him, quoting Abū ʿAṣim, from al-Mughīra b. Ziyād, from Nāfiʿ, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said as follows concerning this statement from the Prophet (ṢAAS), “They searched but could not locate it. And so 'Uthmān took (another) ring and inscribed on it 'Muḥammad, Messenger of God'. And he used it as a seal, or it was so used."

Abū Dāʾūd went on to give a chapter entitled, How the ring was lost.

He proceeded to state that Muḥammad b. Sulaymān Luwayn related to him, from Ibrāhīm b. ʿAḍām, from Ibl Shihāb, from Anas b. Mālik, that he saw for one day only a silver ring on the hand of the Prophet (ṢAAS). The people did the same and began wearing them. The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) then discarded his, and the people did the same.

He went on to say that this was also narrated from al-Zuhrt by Ziyād b. ʿAḍām, Suḥayb and Ibn Musāfīr, all of whom said that the ring referred to above was made min warīq, "from silver".

I note that al-Bukhārī narrated it as follows, "Yahyā b. Bukayr related to us, quoting al-Layth, from Yūnūs, from Ibl Shihāb, who said, ‘Anas b. Mālik related to me, that he saw for one day only a silver ring on the hand of the Prophet (ṢAAS). The people then also made and wore such rings of silver. And so the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) discarded his ring, and the people did the same with theirs."

Al-Bukhārī then gave it on a line from Ibrāhīm b. ʿAḍām al-Zuhrt al-Madani, Suḥayb b. Abū Jamra and Ziyād b. ʿAḍām al-Khurāsānī. Muslim quoted his hadith. Abū Dāʾūd is alone in relating it from ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. Khalīd b. Musāfīr. All of these quoted al-Zuhrt as given above by Abū Dāʾūd, with the words that the ring was made min warīq, "from silver".

However, what is true is that the ring he wore for only one day and then discarded was made of gold, not silver. This is firmly established in both sahih collections from Mālik, from ʿAbd Allāh b. Dīnār, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) used to wear a gold ring and then he discarded it, saying, ‘I’ll never wear this!’ And the people discarded their rings.”

He wore the silver ring frequently. It was on his hand until his death. Its "stone" was integral to it; that is, it had no stone separate from it. Those who narrate that in it there was engraved the image of a person are totally mistaken. In fact it was entirely of silver and its “stone” integral to it. And it was engraved with the three words “Muḥammad, Messenger of God”, in three lines with “Muḥammad”, “Messenger”, and “God”, on separate lines.

It is likely, though God knows best, that the letters were written in reverse so that it would print out correctly, as was typical (of such seals). It has been said, however, that the inscription was not reversed but was printed that way. The correctness of this view is disputed. I do not know a single line of transmission for that, neither one that is authentic, nor one that is weak.

The above ahadith we have given to the effect that his ring was made of silver refute those ahadith we have given from the sunan collections of Abū Dāʾūd and al-Nasāʾī through Abū ʿAṭṭāb Sahl b. Ḥammād al-Dallāl, from Abū Makīn Nūḥ b. Rabī‘a, from Iyyās b. al-Hārith b. Mu‘ayyiq b. Abū Fājīma, from his grandfather, who said, “The ring of the Prophet (SAAS) was made of iron overlaid with silver.”

This is further weakened by one ḥadīth narrated by Aḥmad, Abū Dā‘ūd, al-Tirmidhi, and al-Nasā‘ī, from a ḥadīth of Abū Ṭāība ʿAbd Allāh b. Muslim al-Sulamī al-Marwuzī from ʿAbd Allāh b. Burayda, who quoted his father as having said that a man came to the Messenger of God (SAAS), wearing a brass ring. The latter asked him, “Why do I detect from you the odour of idols?” The man threw the ring away, then returned wearing one made of iron. The Prophet (SAAS), asked him, “Why do I see you wearing the ornamentation of the denizens of hell?” The man discarded it and asked, “What, then, should I wear, Messenger of God?” He answered, “Have one made of silver, but do not make it a full mithqāl in weight.”

The Prophet (SAAS), used to wear it on his right hand, according to what Abū Dā‘ūd narrated, as did al-Tirmidhi in al-Shamā’il and al-Nasā‘ī, all quoting from Sharīk, from Abū Salama b. ʿAbd al-Rahmān al-Qādirī, from Ibrāhīm b. ʿAbd al-Rahmān b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Ḥasan, from his father, from ʿAbd Allāh, may God be pleased with him, back to the Messenger of God (SAAS). Sharīk stated, “Abū Salama b. ʿAbd al-Rahmān informed me that the Messenger of God (SAAS) used to wear his ring on his right hand.”

It is also, however, narrated that he wore it on his left hand. Abū Dā‘ūd narrated this, from a ḥadīth of ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz b. Abū Rawwād, from Nāfi‘ from Ibn ʿUmar, who said that the Messenger of God (SAAS) wore his ring on his left hand, keeping its “stone” facing towards the centre of his palm.

Abū Dā‘ūd also stated, “Abū Ishaq and Usāma b. Zayd quoted from Nāfi‘ that he wore it on his right hand.”

He went on, “Hamīmād related to us, from ʿAbdā, from ʿUbayd Allāh, from Nāfi‘, that Ibn ʿUmar used to wear his ring on his left hand.”

He (presumably Abū Dā‘ūd) went on, “It cannot be imagined that Ibn ʿAbbās would not have mentioned that the Messenger of God (SAAS) did not wear his ring that way.”

Al-Tirmidhi narrated it similarly from ḥadīth of Muḥammad b. Iṣḥāq.

Muḥammad b. Iṣmā‘īl – al-Bukhārī, that is – went on to state, “The ḥadīth of Ibn Iṣḥāq from al-Ṣalt is hasan.”

Al-Tirmidhi stated, in his work al-Shamā’il, from Anas, and from Jābir and from ʿAbd Allāh b. Ja‘far, that the Messenger of God (SAAS) wore his ring on his right hand.
Al-Bukhart stated that Muḥammad b. ʿAbd Allāh al-Anṣāri related to him, quoting his father, from Thumāma, from Anas b. Mālik, that when ʿAbū Bakr succeeded to power, Anas acted as his scribe and that the ring was inscribed with three lines: “Muḥammad”, on one line, “Messenger” on another, and “God” on a third line.

ʿAbū ʿAbd Allāh stated, “ʿAbū ʿAhmad went on to add that al-Anṣāri, quoting his father, quoting Thumāma, from Anas, who said, “The ring of the Prophet (ṢAAS) was worn on his hand, on that of ʿAbū Bakr and then after him on that of ʿUmar. When ʿUthmān ruled, he was once sitting at the well of Aris and began toying with the ring and it fell. We stayed there with ʿUthmān for three days; the well was emptied, but he did not locate the ring.””

Then there is the ḥadīth narrated by al-Tirmidhī in his work al-Shamāṭil. He quoted Qutayba, from ʿAbū ʿAwana, from ʿAbū Yusr, from Naṣīḥ, from Ibn ʿUmar, to the effect that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had a silver ring he used for sealing, but did not wear.

This ḥadīth is very odd. It is stated in the al-sunan from a ḥadīth of Ibn Jurayj, from al-Zuhri, from Anas, who said, “When the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) went into the desert (to relieve himself), he would take off his ring.”

THE SWORD OF THE MESSENGER OF GOD (ṢAAS).

Imām Aḥmad stated that Shurayḥ related to him, quoting Ibn ʿAbī Zinnād, from his father, from al-ʿĀʾmā ʿUbayd Allāh b. ʿAbd Allāh b. ʿUtba b. Maṣʿūd, who quoted Ibn ʿAbbās as having said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) acquired his sword Dhū al-Fiqār as booty at the battle of Badr. It was that sword in which he saw the visions of the battle of Uḥud. He said, ‘I saw a notch in my sword, Dhū al-Fiqār, and this I interpreted as a defect that was in you. Then I saw myself with a kābhsh, “a leader”, riding behind myself; this leader I interpreted as that of the squadron. Then I saw myself dressed in stout armour; this I interpreted as Medina. Then I saw a cow being slaughtered. And a fine cow, a very fine cow, by God, it was indeed…”

This was the statement made by the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).

Al-Tirmidhī and Ibn Māja narrated it from a ḥadīth of ʿAbd al-Raḥmān b. Abū al-Zinād, from his father.

The ahl al-sunan maintain that a voice was heard saying, “There is no sword like Dhū al-Fiqār and no warrior like ʿAlī!”

Al-Tirmidhī narrated from a ḥadīth of Ḥūd b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Saʿd, from his grandfather Maṭīṭa b. Jābir al-ʿĀṣrī, may God be pleased with him, who said, “When the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) entered Mecca, he was wearing a sword overlaid with gold and silver.”

He went on to categorize this ḥadīth as gharīb.

222. See a slightly different version of the wording of this vision given above, Vol. III, page 15.
Al-Tirmidhī stated, in al-Shamā'il, that Muḥammad b. Bashshār related to him, quoting Muʿādh b. Hīshām, quoting his father, from Qatāda, from Saʿīd b. Abū al-Ḥasan, who said, “The pommel of the sword of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) was made of silver.”

He also narrated from a ḥadīth of Uṯmān b. Saʿīd, who quoted Ibn Sirīn as having said, “I made my sword like that of Samura, who claimed that he had made his modelled on the sword of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). He was a ḥanāfī.” One of the swords of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) passed into the possession of the family of Āl-Ḥusayn b. ‘Alī, may God be pleased with them both, when he was killed at Karbalāʾ, at al-Ṭaff. Ālī b. al-Ḥusayn b. Zayn al-Ḡābih then took it with him to Damascus when he went in to see Yazīd b. Muʿāwiya. The sword returned to Medina with him thereafter.

It is established in both saḥīh collections from al-Miswar b. Makhrama, that he (al-Miswar) conducted him (ʿĀlī b. al-Ḥusayn) out to show him the route and asked the latter, “Is there anything you would like me to do on your behalf?” “No,” he replied. Al-Miswar then said, “Perhaps you would like to give me the sword of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS). I’m afraid people will take it away from you. I swear by God, if you give it to me, no one will get to it for as long as I am alive.”

Weapons other than this are said to have belonged to the Prophet (ṢAAS).

These include the coats of mail to which several persons made reference. Al-Saʿīb b. Yazīd and ʿAbd Allāh b. al-Zubayr, for example, state that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) put on two coats of mail at the battle of Uhūd.

In both saḥīh collections it is stated, in a ḥadīth of Mālik, from al-Zuhri, from Anas, that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) entered the city on the day of the conquest of Mecca wearing a helmet. As he was removing it, he was told, “That Ibn Khāṭal is clinging on to the curtains of the kaʿba.” He then said, “Execute him.”

Muslim gives a ḥadīth of Abū al-Zubayr, from Jābir, that when the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) entered Mecca on the day of its conquest, he was wearing a black turban.

Wakīʿ stated, from Musāwir al-Warrāq, from Jaʿfar b. ʿAmr b. Ḥurayth, who quoted his father as having said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) made an address to the people while wearing a grey-black turban.”

Both these accounts are given by al-Tirmidhī in his work al-Shamāʾil. He also gives a ḥadīth of al-Darāwarī, from ʿAbd Allāh, from Nāṣiʿ, from Ibn ʿUmar, who said, “When the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) wore a turban, he let it hang down between his shoulders.”

The ḥāfīz Abū Bakr al-Bazzār stated, in his musnad collection, that Abū Shayba Ḥabrīm b. ʿAbd Allāh b. Muḥammad related to him, quoting Makhūl b. Ḥabrīm, quoting Isrāʾīl, from ʿĀṣim, from Muḥammad b. Sīrīn, who also said that Anas b. Malik had in his possession a staff that had belonged to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), and that when he died it was buried with him, between his side and his shirt.

223. An adherent of the school of law, one of the “four orthodox schools”, founded by its imām, known as Abū Ḥanīfa.

Al-Bazzār then stated, “We know of no one who narrated this except Makhūl b. Rashid; he was entirely truthful and somewhat Shī'a. It is considered therefore in that (light).”

The ḥāfiz al-Bayhaqī stated, after having recounted this hadith through this Makhūl, “He was a Shī'a. He quoted some individual ahādīth from Isrā'īl that are given by no one but him. The weak nature of his accounts is clearly evident.”

CONCERNING THE SANDALS WORN BY THE PROPHET (ṢAAS).

It is established in the sahih collection from Ibn 'Umar, that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) wore sandals made of smooth cattle leather.

Al-Bukhārī stated in his sahih collection that Muḥammad b. Muqāṭīl related to him, quoting 'Abd Allāh, Ibn al-Mubaarak, that is, quoting Ḥaṣā b. Ṭahmān, who said, “Anas b. Mālik brought out for us a pair of two-thonged sandals. He said, ‘Thābit, these are the sandals of the Prophet (ṢAAS).’”

He narrated it again in his Kitāb al-Khums, from 'Abd Allāh b. Muḥammad, from Abū Aḥmad al-Zubayrī, from Ḥaṣā b. Ṭahmān, who said, “Anas brought for us a shabby pair of two-thonged sandals.”

(Al-Bukhārī went on) “Thābit al-Banmī related to me, also quoting Anas, that they were the sandals of the Prophet (ṢAAS).”

Al-Tirmidhī narrated this in his work al-Shamā'il from Aḥmad b. Māni', from Abū Aḥmad al-Zubayrī.

He also stated in al-Shamā'il that Abū Kurayb narrated to him, quoting Waki', from Sufyān, from Khālid al-Ḥadhaq, from 'Abd Allāh b. al-Ḥārith, from Ibn 'Abbās, who said, “The sandals of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had double thongs, their laces plaited.”

He also stated that Iṣḥāq b. Manṣūr related to him, quoting 'Abd al-Razzāq, from Mā'mar, from Ibn Abī Dhī'b, from Ṣalih, the freed-man of al-Tawāma, from Abū Hurayra, who said, “The sandals of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had two thongs.”

Al-Tirmidhī stated that Muḥammad b. Marzūq Abū 'Abd Allāh related to him, quoting 'Abd al-Raḥmān b. Qays Abū Muṣawiyah, quoting Hishām, from Muḥammad, from Abū Hurayra, who said, “The sandals of the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had two thongs, as did those of Abū Bakr and 'Umar. The first to tie his sandal using one thong was 'Uthmān.”

Al-Jawhari stated, “The word ‘thong’, qibāl, of a sandal, spelled with an ‘i’, is the lace that is positioned between the middle toe and the one next to it.”

I note that in the period shortly after 600 AH a merchant named Ibn Abū al-Ḥadrad became widely known as having a single sandal that he claimed to have belonged to the Prophet (ṢAAS). Al-Malik al-Ashraf Mūsā b. al-Malik al-ʻĀdil Abū Bakr b. Ayyūb offered to buy it from him for a large sum of money, but he refused to sell it. But shortly thereafter, he happened to die and the sandal came into the possession of that al-Mālik al-Ashraf. He venerated it mightily and later, having built the dār al-ḥadīth al-ashrafīyya next to the qalā, the citadel of Cairo, placed it in one of its treasuries. He appointed a curator to look after it who was paid 40 dirhams a month. It is still there in that building to this day.

Al-Tirmidhi stated in al-Shamā'il that Muḥammad b. Ṣafī and various others stated that Abū Ahmad al-Zubayr related to them, quoting Shābān, from ʻAbd Allāh b. Mukhtār, from Mūsā b. Anas, who quoted his father as having said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) owned a small leather bag from which he took perfume.”

DESCRIPTIONS OF THE DRINKING CUP USED BY THE PROPHET (ṢAAS).

Imām Aḥmad stated that Yaḥyā b. Ādam related to him, quoting Sharīk, from ʻĀṣim, who said, “At the home of Anas, I saw the cup of the Prophet (ṢAAS). It had a silver band.”

The ḥāfiz al-Bayhaqī stated that Abū ʻAbd Allāh Muḥammad b. ʻAbd Allāh informed him, quoting Aḥmad b. Muḥammad al-Nasawi, quoting Ḥammād b. Shākir, quoting Muḥammad b. Ismāʿīl, al-Bukhārī, that is, quoting al-Ḥasan b. Mudrik, quoting Yaḥyā b. Ḥammād, quoting Abū ʻAwāna, who quoted ʻĀṣim al-Aḥwal as having said, “I saw the cup of the Prophet (ṢAAS), at the home of Anas b. Mālik. It had cracked and he had wired it together with silver.”

The narrator went on, “It was a fine, wide cup of tamarisk wood.”

Anas stated, “I have poured into that cup for the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) innumerably times.”

Ibn Sirīn stated, “It had on it a ring of iron. Anas wanted to replace that with a ring of gold or silver, but Abū Ṭalḥa told him, ‘Don’t change anything made by the Messenger of God (ṢAAS).’ So he left it as it was.”

Imām Aḥmad stated that Rawḥ b. Ubāda related to him, quoting Ḥajjāj b. Ḥassān, who said, “We were at the home of Anas and he called for a vessel to be brought. It had three bands and a ring, all of iron. It was less than a rubāʾ but more than a half a rubāʾ in capacity. Anas gave orders and water was poured into it. We then took it and drank, pouring some water over our heads and faces; then we spoke prayers for the Prophet (ṢAAS).”

Aḥmad is alone in giving this.

 Accounts of the antimony case used by the Prophet (ṢAAS).

Imām Aḥmad stated that Yazid related to him, quoting ʻAbd Allāh b. Manṣūr, 224. The Mamlūk ruler of Egypt at that time.
from 'Ikrama, from Ibn ‘Abbās, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had an antimony case. Before going to sleep he would put antimony into each eye three times.”

I note that I have heard that somewhere in Egypt there is a shrine containing many of the personal effects of the Prophet (ṢAAS), that certain recent government ministers have assembled. These include an antimony case, along with, it is said, a comb and other items. But God knows best.

THE CLOAK (AL-BURDA).

The ḥāfīz al-Bayhaqī stated as follows, “Regarding the cloaks in the possession of the caliphs, we learn from the account of Mūḥammad b. Ishaq relating to the battle of Tabūk, that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) presented to the people of Aelia a burda, ‘a cloak’, along with the safe conduct document he wrote for them. Abū al-‘Abbās ‘Abd Allāh b. Mūḥammad, the first of the ‘Abbāsid caliphs, known as al-Saffāḥ, ‘the shedder of blood’, later purchased it for 300 dinārs.”

The ‘Abbāsid rulers inherited this burda from one another. The Caliph would wear it over his shoulders on festival days, holding in one hand the staff said to have been used by the Prophet (ṢAAS). He would appear in it with such a sense of tranquillity and dignity that would completely overwhelm and bedazzle all. They would dress in black on Fridays and festivals; this they did to emulate the practice of him who was Lord of all, whether bedouin, farmers or town-dwellers.

This they did because of the accounts given by al-Bukhārī and Muslim, the two prime scholars of the historical record, from a hadīth of Mālik, from al-Zuhrī, from Anas, to the effect that when the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) entered Mecca, he was wearing a helmet. In one such account, he is said to have been wearing a black turban. And in another that he let its end hang down between his shoulders.

Al-Bukhārī stated that Musaddad related to him, quoting Ismā‘īl, quoting Ayyūb, from Mūḥammad, from Abū Burda, who said, “‘A‘īsha brought out to us a kisāʾ, ‘an upper garment’, and an izār, ‘a waist-wraper’, made of coarse cloth and said, ‘The spirit of the Prophet (ṢAAS) was taken while he was wearing these two garments.’”

Al-Bukhārī gave a hadīth of al-Zuhrī from ‘Ubayd Allāh b. ‘Abd Allāh, from ‘A‘īsha and Ibn ‘Abbās which quoted them both as having said, “When revelation came down to the Messenger of God (ṢAAS), he immediately threw a black-bordered cloak of his over his face. If distressed, he would uncover his face and say, while thus, ‘God curse the Jews and the Christians! They treat the graves of their prophets as shrines; what they do is to be avoided.’”
I note that the later disposition of these three items of clothing is not known. It is stated above that a piece of red velvet upon which he had prayed was placed beneath him in his grave.

It would consume a great deal of time for us to detail the items of clothing he wore throughout his life. The proper place for this will be the chapter devoted to clothing in my major study the Kitāb al-Āhkām, if God so wills it. And in Him is all trust and reliance.

REFERENCE TO THE HORSES AND OTHER MOUNTS USED BY THE PROPHET (S.A.S).

Ibn Ishāq stated, from Yazīd b. Ḥabīb, from Marthad b. ʿAbd Allāh al-Muzānī, from ʿAbd Allāh b. Rāzīn, who quoted ʿAlī as having said, “The Prophet (S.A.S) owned a horse named ‘al-Murtajīz’, a donkey named ‘Ufāyr’ and a mule named ‘Dūdul’; his sword was ‘Dhū al-Fiṣāq’, and his armour was ‘Dhū al-Fuḍūl’.”

Al-Bayhaqī narrated this from a ḥadīth of al-Ḥakam, from Yahyā b. al-ʿAzzār, from ʿAlī in similar words.

Al-Bayhaqī stated, “We have narrated in our work Kitāb al-Sunan the names of his horses that were with their fortunate recipients. Those horses were named ‘Lazāz’, ‘al-Lāḥif’ also known as ‘al-Lakhīf’ and ‘al-Ẓarīb’. The horse he rode that belonged to Abū Ṭalḥa was called al-Mandūb. His camels were named ‘al-Qaṣwāʾ’, ‘al-ʿAḏbāʾ’ and ‘al-Jadāʾ’, while his mule was named ‘al-Shabā’ and ‘al-Bayḍāʾ’.”

Al-Bayhaqī also stated, “There is nothing in the accounts to indicate that he died leaving them as inheritance, except for what information we have given about his mule ‘al-Bayḍāʾ’, his weapons, and a piece of land he left to charity.”

We have made reference to his clothing, his mule and his ring in this chapter.

The line of transmission for this is excellent.

The ḥafīz Abū Yaʿlā stated, in his musnad collection, that Mujāhid narrated to him, from Mūsā, quoting ʿAlī b. Thābit, quoting Ghalīb al-Jazārī, from Anas, who said, “When the Messenger of God (S.A.S) died, a woollen garment was being woven for him.”

This testifies to what is narrated hereabove.

Abū Saʿīd b. al-ʿArabī stated that Saʿdān b. Naṣīr related to him, quoting Sufyān b. ʿUyayna, from al-Walīd b. Kāthīr, from Ḥūsayn, from Fatimah, daughter of al-Ḥusayn, that at the time when the Messenger of God (S.A.S) died, two leather vessels were being made for him.

This ḥadīth is mūsāl, “incomplete in its line”.

Abū al-Qāsim al-Ṭabrānī stated that al-Ḥasan b. ʾIshāq al-Tastūrī related to him, quoting Abū ʿUmayya ʿAmr b. Ḥishām al-Ḥarrānī, quoting Uthmān b.
"Abd al-Rahmān b. ʿAlī b. Urwa, from ʿAbd al-Malik b. ʿAbū Sulaymān, from ʿĀṯār and ʿĀmr b. Dinār, from Ibn ʿAbbās, who said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) had a sword the hilt and pommel of which were made of silver; it was known as ‘Dhū al-Fiqār’. He had a bow called ‘al-Siḍād’ and a quiver named ‘al-Jam’āt’. He had a coat of armour inlaid with brass called ‘Dhāt al-Fuqul’, and a spear called ‘al-Ṣughra’. He had a shield called ‘al-Dhaqān’. He also had a white leather shield called ‘al-Mūjīz’, a black horse named ‘al-Sākb’, a saddle called ‘al-Mūjīz’, a grey mule called ‘Duldul’, a camel called ‘al-Qāwūq’, a donkey called ‘Yaṣfir’, a carpet called ‘al-Karr’, a woollen garment called ‘al-Namīr’, a leather bag called ‘al-Ṣādīr’, a mirror called ‘al-Mirāṣ’, scissors called ‘al-Jalīl’, and a fir-wood staff called ‘al-Mamshūṭq’.”

I note that it has been related above from several of the Companions that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) did not leave a single dinār, nor even a dirham, and not a slave, male or female. All he left was a mule and a piece of land that he had given to charity. This requires him to have fully emancipated the slaves to whom we have referred, to have given to charity all the weapons we have enumerated, along with his animals, and all his personal effects, whether or not mentioned by myself above.

Regarding his mule, its name was “al-Shahbā” and also “al-Bayḍā”; though God knows best. It was that animal that the Muqawqis, the Governor of Alexandria, whose name was Jurayj b. Minḥāj, had given him along with other valuables. It was this mule that the Messenger of God (ṢAAS) rode at the battle of Hunayn into the very midst of the enemy, bravely extolling God’s name and placing all his reliance in God the Almighty and Glorious. It is said that the mule lived on a long time after him, belonging to Ḥādī during his caliphate and surviving on after his death and passing into the ownership of ʿAbd Allāh b. Jaʿfar who would mash up its barley after it became too weak to eat it otherwise.

His donkey “Yaṣfir” is also known by its diminutive name “Ufayr”. This was a mount he would occasionally ride.

ʿAbd Allāh narrated, from a ḥadīth of Muhammad b. Iṣḥāq, from Yazīd b. ʿAbū Ḥabīb, from Yazīd b. ʿAbd Allāh al-ʿAwfī, from ʿAbd Allāh b. Razīm, who quoted ʿAlī as having said, “The Messenger of God (ṢAAS) used to ride a donkey named “Ufayr’.”

ʿAbū Yaṣāʾa narrated it from a ḥadīth of ʿAwn b. ʿAbd Allāh, from Ibn Masʿūd.

It is narrated in a number of aḥādīth that he rode the donkey.

In both saḥīḥ collections, it is narrated that the Prophet (ṢAAS), mounted on a donkey, passed by an assembly at which ʿAbd Allāh b. Ubayy b. Saṭāl was present with a mixture of Muslims, idol-worshippers and Jews. He dismounted and invited all to accept God, the Almighty and Glorious. This occurred prior to the battle of Badr. The Prophet (ṢAAS) was intending to visit (the sickbed) of Saʿd b. ʿUbādā. ʿAbd Allāh (b. Ubayy) said to him, “You did not do well by what you said! If it is all true, you still shouldn’t bother us with it in our meetings.” That was before Islam appeared. It is said that this ʿAbd Allāh puckered up his nose at the odour coming from the dung from his donkey, and said, “Don’t disgust us with the filth from your donkey!”

‘Abd Allah b. Rawāḥa responded, “I swear by God, the odour from the donkey of the Messenger of God is sweeter than the stench from you!” He went on, “Messenger of God, do come and tell us of it in our meetings; we would enjoy that.” The two tribes then rose to confront one another and were about to do battle when the Messenger of God (ṣa[as]) pacified them.

The Messenger of God (ṣa[as]) then went on to visit Sa’d b. ‘Ubāda and complained to him about ‘Abd Allāh b. Ubayy. Sa’d told him, “Go easy on him, Messenger of God; by Him who honoured you with the truth, God has truly sent you with the truth. We were about to make a diadem with which to make him our king. When God brought the truth, he choked on his own spittle!”

We have narrated above how the Messenger of God (ṣa[as]) rode his donkey in some of the battles at Khaybar, and how he mounted Mu‘ādh behind himself on it.

This section would be over-long if we were to now give all the phraseology and lines of transmission for this.

The qaṭī ‘Ayyād b. Mīlsa al-Sabli stated in his book al-Shifā’, as had Imām al-Ijīramaynī in his great book on the origins of the faith, and as others have also maintained, that the Messenger had a donkey named Ziyād b. Shihāb. These authorities also related that he would send off this donkey to fetch one or other of his Companions; when he did so, it would stop at their door and bray, so that the man would know that the Messenger of God (ṣa[as]) was requesting his presence. The above scholars also state that this donkey was the seventieth in a line of donkeys, each one of which had been ridden by a prophet. They maintain that when the Messenger of God (ṣa[as]) died, this donkey wandered off, threw itself into a well, and died.

No lines of transmission whatsoever are given for these accounts. Their veracity has been denied by various of the ḥufūẓ, including ‘Abd al-Ra‘ūf b. Abī Iḥtīm, and his father, may God have mercy upon them both. On several occasions, I heard my teacher, Sheikh Abū al-Iḥjāj al-Mizzī, may God have mercy upon him, vehemently deny its authenticity.

The ḥāfīz Abū Nu‘aym stated in his work Dalā‘il al-Nubūwwa, that Abū Bakr Ahmad b. Muḥammad b. Mūsā al-Anbārī related to him, quoting Ahmad b. Muḥammad b. Yūsuf, quoting Ibrāhīm b. Suwayd al-Jadhīfī, quoting ‘Abd Allāh b. ‘Uḍhayn al-Tā‘ī, from Thawr b. Yazīd, from Khalīd b. Ma‘dān, from Mu‘ādh b. Jabal, who said, “A black donkey came to the Prophet (ṣa[as]), while he was at Khaybar and stood right in front of him. He asked the donkey, ‘And who are you?’ It replied, ‘I am ‘Amr, son of so-and-so. We were seven brothers, each one of whom was ridden by a prophet. I am the youngest. I was to be for you. A Jew owned me, and whenever I thought of you, I would stumble and he would beat me.’ The Messenger of God (ṣa[as]), replied, ‘You are Ya‘fūr.’”

This ḥadīth is extremely gharīb.

GLOSSARY

ABBREVIATIONS AND NAME-RELATED TERMS

Abū means father. According to Arabic grammatical rules, this word changes to Abī when governed by a preceding word. While, therefore, Abū Ṭālib would mean Ṭālib’s father, when the word Ibn, son, is prefixed to the name, the form changes to Abī, and so Ibn Abī Ṭālib, would mean ‘the son of Ṭālib’s father’. To avoid confusion in this text, however, the term is left here universally as Abū.

The letters ‘al-’ before a noun represent in Arabic the definite article, ‘the’.

The letter b. when part of a name represents a shortened form of the word ‘Ibn’, ‘son’. Thus, the name ‘Ya’qūb b. ‘Uthba’ means ‘Ya’qūb, son of ‘Uthba’. In a composite name, as are often given in this text, such as ‘Ya’qūb b. ‘Uthba b. al-Mughra b. al-Akhnas’ the names of Ya’qūb’s father, grandfather, and great-grandfather are given.

The letters bt. a shortened form of the Arabic bint, indicates ‘girl’ or ‘daughter’. Thus the name Ā’isha bt. Abū Bakr refers to Ā’isha, daughter of Abū Bakr.

The letters SAAS are inserted after mention of the Prophet Muḥammad. These letters stand for the Arabic words ṣallā Allāhu ʿalayhi wa sallam; this invocation, recited by Muslims after every reference to the Prophet, whether by name or inference, is normally translated as ‘May God’s peace and blessings be upon him’.

GLOSSARY ITEMS

Words defined in footnotes associated with the text are not generally included in this glossary.

afkhādh: plural of fakhdh (q.v.).

ahādīth: plural of ḥadīth (q.v.).

agnatic: related through descent on the father’s side.

‘ālim (pl. ʿulamāʾ): scholars or theologians of Islam.

ansār: the plural of nāṣir, helper, or victor. Most commonly met, in this text, in the plural form, it refers to the early Medinan allies of the Prophet who officially fraternized with the muhājirīn, those Muslims who had initially gone into exile from Mecca to Medina in their support for Islam.

ʿarab al-ʿāriba: the original Arabs, who are assumed to have spoken the language of Yaʿrub b. Qaḥṭān.

ʿarab al-mustaʿriba: ‘the arabized Arabs’, initially referring to those who spoke the Arabic of Ishmael, the dialects of the Hijāz, that is. The term is also applied to those not descended from the Arabs of Arabia, but who have been assimilated into Arab culture and who speak Arabic as their native tongue.

ʿArafat (also ʿArafā): a plain some 13 miles east of Mecca. Essential parts of the hajj pilgrimage ceremonies occur there, centered on a small granite hill, also known by the same name.

ʿashīra (pl. ʿashīrāt): an agnatic group. The word is commonly translated as tribe. An ʿashīra is composed of several afkhadh (q.v.), while several ʿashīrāt form a single qabila (q.v.).

badana: an animal, commonly a camel, to be offered for sacrifice by a pilgrim at the hajj (q.v.).

baraka: blessing, in particular that divine force that enables prosperity and happiness. Persons of great piety or holiness are believe suffused with baraka, which radiates from them to those around them.

Bakka: an ancient alternative or original name for Mecca. In legend, the name comes from the Arabic verb baka, he wept, applied to Adam’s sadness at descending to the barren environment of Arabia after his expulsion from paradise.

batn (pl. butān): an agnatic group smaller than a qabila (q.v.) but larger than a fakhdh (q.v.).

daf: the word used to denote the act of departure from ʿArafat during the pilgrimage rites.

fakhdh (pl. afkhadh): a group of several families claiming descent from the same ancestor.

al-fajr: the dawn; also the superogatory prayer, recommended but not required, performed immediately after dawn. It consists of two rakʿāt (q.v.) to be recited audibly.
faṣila (pl. faṣīl): an agnatic group consisting of the nearest members of one’s 'ashira (q.v.).

ghazwa (pl. ghazwāt): armed engagements in which the Prophet Muḥammad participated personally. Those he initiated but without his own direct participation are known as sarāyā (pl. of sarīyya).

ḥadīth (pl. ḥādīth): a saying, reported action or anecdote relating the words or deeds of the Prophet Muḥammad. An isnād (q.v.) precedes the ḥadīth and lists the persons by whom the reported material was transmitted.

ḥadīth marja': a ḥadīth related by one of the Companions of the Prophet (see sāhib) and quoted directly from the latter.

ḥafiz (pl. ḥafīz): a person who has memorized the entire Qur′ān. Also one of the sacred attributes – the Guardian, the Protector – by which God is known.

ḥaJJ: the pilgrimage to the holy places of Mecca set annually to take place in the first half of the month of Dhū al-Ḥijja.

ḥanīf: 1) a devout pre-Islamic monotheist. 2) a person sincerely searching for the ancient religion practised by Abraham, with whom the word is particularly associated.

ḥanīfiyya: the religion of Abraham and the ḥanīfs.

ḥaram (or ḥarām): a term denoting what is sacred, forbidden or inviolable.

hijaba: the office of the custodian of the kaʿba; he is known as the ḥājib.

ḥijra (or hegira): the emigration of the Prophet Muḥammad and his supporters from Mecca into exile in Medina. The date of this event was later adopted as the commencement of the Muslim era, calculated as 622 AD.

ijāza: 1) rendering something legal or permissible. 2) the act of transmitting a ḥadīth and attributing the same to an authority without actually having heard that person recite it.

isfāda: the movement or departure of pilgrims from ‘Arafāt following their performance of the ḡuqūf, ‘the standing’.

iḥrām: 1) the rendering sacred or inviolate. 2) the name given to the clothing donned by Muslims entering the iḥrām state prior to their participation in the pilgrimage.
isnād: the prefatory material to a hadith (q.v.) that lists the sequence of scholars or witnesses who transmitted the account from the time of the Prophet Muhammad up to the time when it was written down.

izār: the cloth that covers the pilgrim from waist to knees when he commits himself to the sacred state of ʿihram.

jahiliyya: denoting childlike foolishness or ignorance, the word is commonly applied to the period prior to the advent of Islam.

jamra (pl. jamrāt): ancient stone pillars symbolizing Satan at Minā. These are pelted with pebbles during the pilgrimage rites, the stones being known as jamrāt.

kaʿba: the ancient cube-like structure within the great mosque in Mecca positioned some feet from the sacred spring zamzam (q.v.). It is towards this site that Muslims direct their prayers (see qibla).

al-Khalil: 1) a town, also known as Hebron, some 32 miles south of Jerusalem and the site of the Tomb of the Patriarchs, sacred both to Jews and to Muslims. 2) a name or attribute implying close friend or confidant; the word is particularly associated with Abraham.

liwwa: 1) a flag, banner or signpost. 2) the issuance of this to those making the pilgrimage to the kaʿba.

maqām Ibrāhīm: the ‘station’ of Abraham. A sanctuary positioned a few feet from the kaʿba where Abraham and his co-religionaries would stand for prayer during the summer months.

maghrib: the west or direction in which the sun sets. Also, the fourth canonical Islamic prayer performed at dusk. It consists of three rakʿāt; at the first two of these the prayers are spoken audibly, the third in silence.

masjid: the place where the Muslim prostrates in prayer, usually a mosque.

Minā: a location some four miles east of Mecca on the road to ʿArafat.

ḥadith mursal: a hadith which is considered by scholars to have a fault or inconsistency in the chain of its transmission.

al-Muzdalifa: a location some half way between Minā and ʿArafat. It is there that pilgrims returning from ʿArafat spend the night.
nadwa: the act of presiding over assemblies of pilgrims at the ka'ba.

parasang: a Persian term for a unit of length, also known as a farsakh. One parasang equals approximately one league, some three miles, that is.

qabila (pl. qaba'il): a large agnatic group whose members trace descent from a single ancestor. Often translated as tribe. A qabila is larger than an 'ashira (q.v.) but smaller than a sha'b (q.v.).

gādā: a judge appointed by a Muslim community to administer and adjudicate issues of Islamic law.

qibla: the direction to which a Muslim faces when praying. Initially towards Jerusalem but later changed by the Prophet Muhammad so that Muslims would face Mecca and the ka'ba there.

rak'ā (pl. rak'āt): a unit of prayer consisting of a variety of gestures and postures. These rak'āt total 17 each day, divided between the five canonical prayer periods.

al-raḥīm: The All-Compassionate; one of the sublime epithets applied to God.

al-raḥmān: the All-Merciful; one of the sublime epithets applied to God.

Ramadān: the ninth month of the Muslim lunar calendar. The month of fasting, it was during Ramadān that divine revelation first came to the Prophet Muhammad, and it is therefore particularly venerated.

ridā: a length of unsewn cloth that is draped over the left shoulder and around the torso of the pilgrim. This garb is donned by the pilgrim when he enters the ihram state.

rifāda: the provision of pilgrims with wheat and raisins by certain members of Quraysh of Mecca.

al-sa'y: the ritual rapid walk or jog performed during the pilgrimage between al-Ṣafā and al-Marwā.

saba': the community and kingdom ruling South-West Arabia for centuries prior to the mission of the Prophet Muhammad.

sāhib (pl. aṣḥāb, saḥāba): companion; that community of men who knew and supported the Prophet Muhammad during his mission.
sahih: a hadith (q.v.) the chain of transmission of which is considered by Muslim scholars to be reliable beyond any reasonable doubt; also, a collection comprised only of such ahadith.

sam'ān: the receipt of a hadith (q.v.) from a scholar by listening to him or her recite it and then repeating it back. This method of transmitting and receiving a hadith was considered the most trustworthy of all.

sha'b (pl. shu'āb): a tribal group larger than a qabila (q.v.); a nation, race or people.

shahāda: the profession of faith in Islam by reciting in Arabic the words: ‘There is no God but God and Muḥammad is His Messenger’.

shaykh (pl. shu'uykh): an elderly man; a tribal or spiritual leader; a distinguished and devout scholar.

shī'a: the doctrine and its adherent, a shī'i, that considers ʾAlī, son of Abū Ṭalib and husband of the Prophet Muḥammad’s daughter Fatima, was the legitimate spiritual and political heir to the Caliphate of Islam.

sunna: the body of recorded words, actions, gestures and practices of the Prophet Muḥammad. This material constitutes the second foundation of Islam and its legal system, the holy Qurān being the first and prime source. In the plural form, sunan, reference is made to the compilation, by various authorities of the reported words and actions of the Prophet.

tafsīr: exegesis and commentary, particularly applied to the Qurān.

tasmiyya: the enunciation by a Muslim of the formula: ‘In the name of God, the All-Merciful, the All-Compassionate’ prior to any act or activity in which he or she might engage.
